In Universal Weekly

That Universal Animated Weekly is active when it comes to procuring the very latest in news pictures is made evident in the current issue of that interesting motion picture news reel. "Movies" of President Wilson boarding the British ship "Britannia" in the White House grounds and of the President climbing off on the top of the land battle ships are among the main features. It was as the President drew himself through the manhole opening in the deck of the tank that he severely burned his hand.

The Animated Weekly shows the nation's Chief just as he placed his hand on the red-hot exhaust pipe. He did not flinch, however, although his hand will remain bandaged and be useless for several weeks, Dr. Grayson, the President's physician, attended him at the White House.

Hickman to Direct

Howard Hickman, who has been prominent for a number of years as an actor on both the stage and the screen, is about to become a director of motion pictures. Mr. Hickman has been appearing for some time past as a player in Paralta productions, and arrangements have just been consummated at the Paralta studios for him to make his advent into the field of direction. His first production will be "The Rainbow," in which Miss Bessie Barriscale, who in private life is Mrs. Hickman, will be the star.

Four Fox Productions Completed
Including "The Caillaux Case"

The week's balmy weather, very favorable for location work, is responsible for the finishing of three new William Fox Special Features—"Blue-Eyed Mary," "Brave and Bold," "Peg of the Pirates." While "The Firebrand" will be added to the list of completed subjects within a day or two. "The Caillaux Case," which Richard Stanton has directed with an all-star cast, awaited only word that Bolo Pasha had been executed by the firing squad in France that the situation might be duplicated at the Fort Lee Studios. This production, too—a Standard Picture—is also finished now.

Three Specials Finished

"Blue-Eyed Mary" stars June Caprice and was made under the direction of Harry Millarde, "Brave and Bold" is the action story in which George Walsh has stellar honors; the direction is by Carl Harbaugh; and "Peg of the Pirates," staged by O. A. C. Lund, is part of Peggy Hyland's second William Fox play.

Highland Park Homes
Used by Essanay

Essanay announces arrangements have been made with several of the wealthiest residents of Highland Park, one of the beautiful suburbs of Chicago, to have scenes taken for the forthcoming George K. Spoor feature, "Young America," in their grounds and homes. It is expected that this will lend an unusually realistic atmosphere to the play. Work practically has been completed on the interior settings in the studios and the beginning of the picture is waiting only for more cement weather to do outside scenes. Several of the cast have been picked in Chicago from the various stage plays.

New York's Leading Theatres Booking Big Chaplin Comedy

Following its notable pre-release showing at the Strand Theatre, New York, during the week of April 14, Charles Chaplin's first $1,000,000 comedy, "A Dog's Life," was booked by one hundred and sixty of the leading houses of Greater New York during the week of April 21, it is announced, while eighty other theatres, averaging 1,000 seating capacity each, featured the comedy during the week of April 28.

A gathering of theatre men led by Sales Manager Carey Wilson of the First National Exchange, New York, six of the "big time" vaudeville houses booked the comedy for the full week of April 21. Headed by Keith's Palace, which is acknowledged to be the premier variety house of America, the list included the Colonial, Royal, Alhambra and Riverside, all B. F. Keith theatres, as well as Fox's Academy of Music.

Other well known houses that headed Chaplin during the same week were Keith's Harlem Opera House; Proctor's Fifth Avenue, 23rd Street, 35th Street and 132nd Street theatres; Shubert's 31st Street; Fox's Riviera, Star, Audubon, Nemo, Washington, Crotina and City; Lowe's New York, National, Victoria, American, Circle, 116th Street; Greeley Square, 42nd Street, 86th Street, Boulevard and Orpheum; the Grand Opera House, and B. S. Moss's Regent, Hamilton, Prospect and Jefferson.

In Brooklyn, during the week of April 28, "A Dog's Life" was one of the most heavily advertised features at Keith's Orpheum and Boulevard Theatres; and was also selected by the management of the New Breevort to open the latest temple of the silent drama to make its appearance on the skyline of the Greater City.
Theatre Floor Falls Through; No Fatalities

Pool Tables in Basement Prevent Death Toll

Cumberland, Md.—The floor of the Leader Theatre, a motion-picture house on Virginia avenue, collapsed during the second show, causing a near panic, but no one was seriously hurt. Several persons sustained trivial sprains and bruises.

The floor was well filled when the floor went down, sagging until the middle rested on pool tables in the basement. The floor remained saucer-shaped. The lights did not go out and to this is attributed the fact that no one of the several hundred persons was badly hurt.

There was a wild rush to the door, during which coats, wraps, hats, pocketbooks and other belongings were abandoned. A number of pocketbooks were recovered by the police, one containing $60, and other amounts nearly as large. The theatre is in the Odd Fellows' Building and O. A. Freeze is lessee. The capacity of the house is 480, and there were about 250 at the show.

It was stated at police headquarters today that the accident was due to the removal of four iron posts that supported the middle of the theatre floor when the bowling alley was removed. It was intimated that an investigation along the lines of criminal carelessness likely would be made.

In Jackson, Mich.

Jackson, Mich.—Not only is the Jackson city commission the leading legislative body in this city and also the board of health, but in the future it will act as a board of censorship for motion pictures. This was the final decision reached at a meeting of the commission after a long argument in which the members of the Jackson County Ministerial Association and the Federated Women’s Clubs appeared on one side and the motion picture theatre managers on the other.

In defense of the pictures shown in this city the managers said they were all passed by the National Board of Censorship and either the Ohio or Pennsylvania Boards of Censorship, which are two of the strictest boards in the country. No pictures are shown in Jackson which do not appear in the other cities of the state.

After the matter had been discussed at great length, the commission decided that in all cases where a motion picture theatre manager might after screening a picture that it might in any way become objectionable, he should call in the members of the commission, who will review the picture and decide as to its propriety.

Proposed Law Grants Police Suppression Objectionable Films

Little Rock, Ark.—An ordinance granting authority to close picture houses that do not conform to the rules of the Censor Board has been read at the meeting of the City Council and referred to the Ordinance Committee. It was introduced by Alderman Isgrig, who also is chairman of the Ordinance Committee, so it is not considered likely that it will meet with much opposition when it is taken up by that committee. At the suggestion of Mayor Taylor it was decided to invite the members of the Censor Board to be present when the committee meets to consider the ordinance.

The new measure provides that the Censor Board, after having decided that a picture or act is objectionable, shall file information with the chief of police and that that official shall at once proceed to stop the exhibition and to keep the house against which complaint has been made closed until such time as the film or act complained of has been permanently removed.

Alderman Smith, chairman of the Police Committee, asked City Attorney Clifford if in his opinion that council had the right to delegate power to close amusement houses to the Censor Board and was given the opinion that the council undoubtedly has the right to delegate the board power to file information on which the chief of police might act.

Penalty for violation of the proposed ordinance is a fine of not less than $200 nor more than $500, and each day’s violation is to constitute a separate offense.

Theatre Patrons in Demand for Money as Smoke Fills House

Louisville, Ky.—A panic was narrowly averted at the Rex Theater, Fourth and Green streets, when a film caught fire. The theater was soon filled with smoke. Many persons started running from the house, but cool heads prevailed and order was restored. A woman who fainted was carried out by ushers.

Manager C. N. Koch and his assistant, W. H. Dyess, were among the last to leave. The explosion of the film which stopped the smoke in the lobby, demanding their money back.

Court Denies Exhibitor Anti-Picketing Action

Minneapolis, Minn.—E. H. Roraback, owner of a picture theater at 44 3rd street S., denied an injunction in the district court to restrain the operators of a theatre union from picketing his theater with “unfair” banners, has appealed to the supreme court.

Exhibitor’s Briefs

Phillipsburg, Mont.—A new motion picture theatre to cost $7,500 will be erected here according to Thomas Sonntag, a well-known Anacoda contractor. Fred F. Wilson, an architect, has charge of the plans for the proposed playhouse.

San Francisco, Calif.—J. W. Allen, who for three years has been manager of the San Francisco branch of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, has resigned. He is succeeded by M. H. Lewis, former Los Angeles manager of the same concern.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Manager Carey’s picture theatre here was the scene of a Red Cross benefit on April 25, at which government approved war pictures were shown.

Oxnard, Calif.—Arrangements have been completed for the erection of a modern theatre building in this city to cost from $30,000 to $40,000. The building is to be completed within six months.

Tipton, Ind.—Thomas W. Davis of Galveston, Ind., has closed a contract for a six year lease on the building at Jefferson and Independence streets, this city, formerly known as the Habitat Theatre. The place will be refitted throughout as a motion picture theatre.

Atlanta, Ga.—William Oldknow, who is known as the pioneer movie exhibitor of the south, has closed a lease for the building on Peachtree street, formerly known as the Odeon Theatre. Under the Oldknow management it will be known as the Tudor and will be the home of Universal films and their allied interests.
Richmond, Va.—Jake Wells, operator of the Colonial and other theatres in this city, has announced that plans have been made for a new photoplay house on the present site of the Colonial Theatre, at the northwest corner of Eighth and Broad streets. Construction will be begun at an early date.

Youngstown, Ohio—Max Schagrin, formerly manager of the Strand and of the Strand Theatre, has purchased the Orpheum, and has taken possession. A special effort, Mr. Schagrin has announced, will be made to establish the theatre as a family amusement place.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The latest addition to the amusement line here has been the completion of Bair’s South Side Theatre, devoted to the showing of high-class photoplays. It is located at 1044 Virginia avenue, near the business district, and has a seating capacity of 700 persons.

Omaha, Neb.—C. E. Holah, manager of the Pathe exchange here, resigned recently to become general director of the United Picture Theatres, Inc. Mr. Holah has been in the film business for more than ten years.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The John Eichler, Jr., Company has a contract for alterations to the moving picture theatre in the Mellon property, Fifth avenue, to cost about $20,000.

“Cleopatra” Scores
Marked Success by Proper Exploitation

An excellent demonstration of the possibilities of exploiting a production of exceptional merit has just been completed by Manager W. B. Newman of the Grand Theatre, Ill, who last Thursday and Friday ran the Fox feature, “Cleopatra,” starring Theda Bara.

Manager Newman began his campaign in behalf of the picture one week in advance of the performances. He doubled the amount of space usually taken for advertising his attractions in the two daily papers with well constructed ads, which compelled attention. Beginning with the local newspapers, the manager of the Grand next turned his attention to billboards and papered the town thoroughly with twenty-four sheets of striking calibre. Street car cards were also put into service with telling effect.

All seats in the theatre, which seats about 750 persons, were reserved for the evening performances. Prices were set at 35, 50 and 75 cents. One matinee was given each day with no reserved seats, at a 35 cent price. The Grand orchestra was augmented considerably for presenting the production.

The results were what could have been expected from the well managed campaign. All four performances were well attended and although Manager Newman did not have the exact figures available, he admitted it was a paying proposition.

Pathe Travelogues
To Issue Bi-Weekly

Beginning May 12, the Pathe-Colored Scenics and Travelogues which have rounded out the programs of exhibitors will be published every other week instead of weekly.

The new plan starts the week of the publication of the “Britain’s Bulwarks” series of twelve official pictures showing all phases of the famous English county of which will be shown each week.

The scenes and travelogues are in such demand, Pathe reports, that a large number of new ones have been ordered and will be ready for completion. The decision to issue these every other week is to afford exhibitors an opportunity of using both scenes and travelogues, which brings the great conflict to the screens of their theatres.

Data Wanted on Amount Raised by Film Interests

William A. Brady, chairman ex-officio of the War Co-operative Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, has sent the following communication to all members of the committee in forty-eight states to ascertain the amount of contributions made to the Liberty Loan by individuals and companies in the motion picture industry.

“Motion picture industry and its allied interests should subscribe many more millions or dollars to the Third Liberty Loan.

“Much has been said in regard to the enormous power of the film and screen which has been com-mended repeatedly to the wonderful co-operation rendered to the National Government in the flotation of the previous loans.

“There is a greater opportunity to show the value of the motion picture and the co-operation which can be given by every branch of the industry, of which the exhibitors form a most important part. Let us prove by results that the folks of the silent drama are united for the effective and efficient exertion of their power at this critical moment in the world’s crisis. The exhibitors of the United States, with an opportunity to demonstrate their patriotism and loyalty in the use of their theatres, is second to no other line of trade.

“A big drive has been started to secure subscriptions for the Third Liberty Loan from every individual directly or indirectly identified with the industry. We should be given full credit for these subscriptions, as well as for those made through the Allied Motion Picture theatres and personal solicitation.”

The report should be telegraphed to the N. A. M. P. I. headquarters, Times Building, New York city.

Sessue Hayakawa Is Filming Scenes for Initial Production

Sessue Hayakawa and the members of his company left Los Angeles last week for San Francisco, where many of the important scenes of the initial Hayakawa Production are to be made. After a week spent there, the company will proceed to the picturesque town of Monterey, Cal., located on Monterey Bay, where a number of fishing scenes, which are to be used in the early part of the production, will be filmed. The company will return to Los Angeles by steamer in about two weeks.

Marion Sais is to be Hayakawa’s leading woman. Miss Sais is well known in the photodramatic world, especially for her excellent portrayals during the six years she was a member of the stars that shone in the Kalem firmament. Another feminine favorite, Mary Anderson, also becomes a member of the new company.

One of the leading roles in the first picture will be in the hands of Howard Davies.

Hayakawa wrote the story for the initial production more than two years ago. He resolved that it should never be filmed until he had an independent company of his own. All efforts have been made to prepare the story for the screen himself in accordance with his own ideas. It has taken three months to produce the continuity.

Hayakawa’s director is to be William Worthington, one of the best known men in the motion picture business. Worthington has managed a number of companies in the spoken dramas, and often served also as a stage director. He made his entry into the realm of the photoplay art some six years ago and after a short period before the camera as an actor with the Universal Company, became a director. It is expected the production will be issued in June.

Alfred Henry Lewis' Stories of the West Filmed by General

Announcement is made this week by General Films Company that it has taken over the distribution of the screen version of the Wolfville Tales, written by the late Alfred Henry Lewis. The Wolfville Tales, in two-reel form, will be alternated with the O. Henry stories.

The Wolfville Tales are tales of the West which have been turned into a short story teller knew intimately from first-hand knowledge. They are full of plot value and human interest material, it is said. General Film Company has bought them for them an unprecedented success.

“The Clients of Aaron Green,” the first picture, dated May 4th, has been termed a regular “he-man's story of the West.” The tale deals with the attempt of a too-zealous young lawyer to establish himself as a prospector in a western mining town. The week following, General Film will publish an O. Henry story, “The Purple Dress,” a heart interest story, with Ayres and Evart Overton in the leading roles.
“Birth of Race” - Stock Sold by Mail Is Charge

State Starts New Investigation Into Stock Activities

Barred by the "blue sky" law from selling it in Illinois, Chicago brokers are seeking to sell stock in the "Birth of a Race" film corporation by mail in other states.

Following the arrest of Giles P. Cory of Giles P. Cory & Co., fiscal agents for the film company, several weeks ago, its representatives told the newspapers the sale of stock had been completed and the Cory company announced it had quite selling this security.

Advertising Clubs Complain

But Attorney-General Brandage has received a complaint from the vigilance committee of the Associated Advertising clubs that a new fiscal agent is busy. The committee forwarded literature sent by Almond & Shroyer, South Dearborn street, to Frank Armstrong of Des Moines, Ia.

It was almost identical with the literature previously sent out by Cory & Co., including "testimonials" for the picture from Julius Rosenwald, Gov. Frank O. Lowden, the Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, and others, but the quotation from William Howard Taft was omitted. All of these men have denied emphatically that they recommended the purchase of the stock.

Illinois Statute Sought

Attorney-General Brandage referred the matter to Raymond S. Pruitt, his "blue sky" expert, who is investigating to determine whether the Illinois statute covers mail sales made by Chicago brokers in other states.

The letter from Almond & Shroyer informed Mr. Armstrong that an investment "should net between 500 and 3,000 per cent within a very short time," and that the film "is expected to go on the screen in about ninety days."

Frank B. Rogers Made General Manager of Chicago Pathe Branch

Frank B. Rogers was officially notified of his appointment to the management of the Chicago Pathe exchange last Monday. The notice came in a letter from F. C. Quimby, sales manager of the Pathe company, and followed by a few days informal notification from Division Manager Ralph O. Proctor.

Mr. Rogers has for the past few months been acting as assistant manager of the local exchange. His appointment as manager has been expected among the many friends in the trade since Mr. Proctor was promoted from the position to that of district manager about a month ago.

The new local manager is fully conversant with conditions in the Chicago territory and amply qualified for the position given him. He was assistant manager of the Standard Film Corporation under Mr. Proctor's management, and succeeded the latter following his resignation to take the Pathe post.

Previous to his connection with the Standard company, Mr. Rogers had acted as special representative for the George Kleine exchange and also for the Essanay Film Manufacturing company. As an indication of the esteem in which he is held by the Pathe force, the new manager was presented with a gold fountain pen when his appointment was announced.

W. E. Banford Joins Goldwyn Exchange as Assistant Manager

W. E. Banford, assistant manager of the Vitagraph exchange since January 1, 1917, has resigned his position to go as assistant manager of the local Goldwyn exchange. His departure from the Vitagraph company was simultaneous with that of H. J. Bayley, who is now manager of the Goldwyn exchange.

Mr. Banford's connection with the film industry embraces an experience of more than five years. His familiarity with accounting methods employed in the conduct of exchanges makes him a particularly valuable man.

He began his film career with the United Film company of New York and, in addition to the Vitagraph company, has also been associated with the Mutual Film Corporation.

Eugene H. Duffy Returns After Automobile Mishap

Eugene H. Duffy, manager of the Mutual local exchange, has returned to his desk after an absence of more than six weeks, the result of an automobile accident in which he suffered a fractured hip and a broken collar bone. He has been confined at the Ravenswood hospital.

Mr. Duffy, while walking with the aid of a crutch, has apparently recovered from the more serious effects of the injury and has announced his intention of discarding the "first aid to navigation" at an early date.

PERSONALS

"By George"

Abe Teitel, Chicago's foremost film cleaner, has got an ax to grind. Some bird of the name of Smalley is knocking Abe's work. To our mind this is darn smallsy business. What with Abe getting business from Leiber of Indianapolis and cleaning all of Mutual's productions. We'll get his number Abe, it must be in the telephone book.

George Nadison of the Kozy Theatre, 40 South Clark street, has but one thing on his mind right now and that is putting over the Third Liberty Loan. Every one of the employees of the playhouse are represented in a total purchase of $1,000 worth of the liberty guarantees and every bit of printing George has had done carries prominently the slowly extolled Liberty Bonds. Anybody doubt which side of the fence this exhibitor is on?

William Hersberg of the Shakespeare Theatre and former owner of the General Feature Film Company, has taken a lease on the President Theatre. With all the people in the country being constantly extolled to "stand by the president" Bill will have to keep the S. R. O. sign dusted off.

John Keane of Bodkin and Keane has opened a dairy lunch room in East Adams street and all the filum salesmen in this town are hitting the milky way. Well, John, who could foresee the possibilities of filum salesmen eating in a dairy lunchroom. But they've got to eat some place now that the free lunch is all.

Back from New York where he attended a meeting of the eastern branch managers of Triangle, Ralph Bradford, of our Chicago office is radiating optimis-mism and declares that part of the country. His optimism is only one of the things we like about Bradford.

C. E. Almy, manager of the Cleveland office for the Metro Pictures Corporation, spent Sunday and Monday of last week visiting C. E. Smith, Chicago manager for the same company. Our comment is: "For it is always fair weather when two C. E.'s get together."

Irving Mack has been away from home so much recently jumping from town to town as executor of "Kaiser" that the janitor of his apartment doesn't know him. And Mrs. Mack, bride of a few months, is practically a film widow. But business is business and Universal don't have a "Kaiser" picture every day.

Included among Chicago's prominent film men who affixed their signatures to the register of New York hotels this week were George K. Spoor, George Kleine, John R. Freuler, S. S. Hutchison and Frank Zambreno. With this formidable array maybe the easterners will begin to realize that United States is not bounded on the west by the Allegheny mountains.

E. Auger, division managing a for Vitagraph, is visiting in our city. We hope this augers no ill for the local branch. Sure, we know it don't, but it's a good play on words ain't it?

Well, it's all off and Crocker, the Elgin exhibitor, is the winner. That last oriental scarf he flashed on Rogers at Pathe's office did the trick. Rogers has returned to colors of more sombre shades and the Pathe staff says that now they are able to hear the brass bands in their office. And by the way, Friend Rogers has been appointed manager of the Chicago branch. He's been assistant manager since Ralph Rickett was manager and division manager. He won't mind a few congratulations; drop in on him.

Arthur B. McMillan of the American Projector Company, brother of the biggest little salesman in the film game, is rapidly recovering from an operation at St. Luke's hospital. It takes more than an operation to down a McMillan.

Charles Minor, for a number of years connected with the Universal Film Mfg. Co., and recently in charge of the poster department, has joined the National Army. For minor engagements, we presume.

Kitty Kelly, the little girl who writes the big reviews in the Chicago Examiner, gave an address on Journalism at the Iowa State College recently. This is her alma mater and they like her line. So do we. That makes it unanimous.

When we slipped quietly into Bill Jenner's office over to Fox and told him that we had heard on good authority that he had put a dozen fresh eggs on a radiator and when he went to take them home he found a brood of chickens, he said it was a darn lie. When we warned him that it was an exchange manager who told us, he said: "All exchange managers are liars, that's part of their equipment." Well, if a man wants to call himself a liar, it ain't up to us to make him retract.

On the Firin' Line

We knew when we wrote that story last week about the exchange managers jumping into new heraths that we were in a peck of trouble regarding this column, and the returns have just started to come in. Here they are—to Jewels via Goldwyn—Charlie Miller, Phil Dunas and Israel Natkin.

Hunter Bennett of the U. S. Exhibitors Corp., has gone to New York on a business strip and may not return to these parts for some time to come. He had a pretty determined notion to enlist when he left, and you know what Hunter is when he gets a notion.

Roy Shonaway, formerly attached to the motion picture advertising staff of the Chicago Herald, has struck an agreement with Sid Goldman whereby he will exploit Jewish productions in Illinois. Roy, you're Shonaway we like.

O. R. McElroy is the latest addition to the Pathé sales force, assigned to the Illinois territory. He was formerly with the Fox and Vitagraph forces.

Morrie Salkin does other things besides have his picture taken and financing poker games. He owns a life seat in a church. For a month and a half he paid $500 for it, that he hasn't been to church in ten years; but he's a slicker, is Morrie; he rents it out for $32 a year. If he lives long enough, it may prove to be a good investment.

Speaking of poker games, as we weren't, "Chub" Florine had it demonstrated the other night that three K boys beat three Jacks. His losses ran into two figures. "Chub" has a pretty ample girth and a few days of fasting won't hurt him much.

We don't know whether to surrender unconditionally to La Veen of Universal, who has had a boy of the projectionists we had just got settled in there, looking at a Bluebird when the door swing open violently and before we could make out the shadowy forms one was punching the piano and La Veen was SINGING.

All we got to say is this, La Veen: We would much rather have you page yourself; it's the lesser of two evils.

Mike Kahn, who covers Wisconsin for the Bee Hive exchange in the interests of Billy West comedies, paid the city a brief visit last Sunday. We use the word brief advisedly. He was here just a half hour. How could a man from Milwaukee be expected to embrace Mayor Thompson's Sunday-closing order.

Maurice Klein of the Strand exchange is also said to have been engaged in that memorable poker game. According to one of the boys that watched the two-reel Heart about his neck. Some of them leave with less than that, Maurice.

The latest "biggest week" report comes from Bill Brimer of Paramount, who covers Illinois. With prosperity on every hand, 'twere folly to be poor.

“The Lost Chord” Will Be the First Cinema-Symphony

Hopp Hadley Selects Arthur Sullivan’s Song as Subject of New Idea

Announcing Arthur Sullivan’s famous song, “The Lost Chord,” as the subject of his first Cinema-Symphony, Hopp Hadley speaks of his work as “a music-illustrated-symphony made possible by the art of motion pictures.” The feature is in five reels and it is said even without the symphony, it is a powerful drama with a beautiful heart interest story destined to be popular as a regulation photodrama with an ordinary “cue-shot” arrangement.

“The only difference that I can see, when the picture is run without the symphony,” said Mr. Hadley, “judging it from the standpoint of a new picture viewed in a studio projecting room, is that the titles are in verse and are written in the same metre as the song. This was necessary in order to better keep the audience in the atmosphere of the music while also living in the atmosphere of the drama. Of course, the poem alone would not tell a complete story as there are only eighty titles in the whole picture, each two lines in length, which gives some idea of the necessary literary effort.”

“I intend later to make the poem complete in itself, writing in verse the parts of the story now told in pictures, to take the place of the music,” said Mr. Hadley. “There are, also, no letters, cards, etc., in the picture; verse taking their place in each instance. These facts allow the drama to move along smoothly without interruption and give the music every opportunity to tell the story at the same time as it is being told by the actors. Thus the eyes and ears of the audience are both made use of by the producer as direct roads to the mind and heart.”

The symphony for “The Lost Chord” is the work of Sol Levy and M. Winkler, who have been collaborating in its completion for several weeks. Both Mr. Levy and Mr. Winkler, it is said to be sweet and stirring, years’ experience preparing musical scores for stage dramas and pictures, and are, therefore, well equipped to handle the special phases of a composition of this character.

Besides the symphony for a full orchestra, special compositions are being arranged for both the organ and piano to meet the requirements of all theatres.

“Maria of the Roses” Chosen by Fox Corp.

For Next Bara Film

Although the photodrama will soon reach the half-way mark in production, William Fox is just announcing that Theda Bara is making another picture in California, under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards. The story, which is by the playwright and author, George Sarbergh, is said to be sweet and stirring, and is a dramatic account of an episode in the Philippines after the America occupation. Its original title was “Maria of the Roses,” but Mr. Fox says that this probably will be changed to “The Bully” by Ralph R. Weddel; “He Ran for Mayor,” by Charles X. David; “Dat Minstrel Man,” by Blanche Walker; “One at a Time, Please,” by Dell Howard; and “Mercy! The Mummy Mumbled,” by Clarence A. Frambers. Mr. Horner is now preparing an original comedy titled, “A Reckless Rover,” which one of the directors will begin to shoot this week.

“Who those writers who have original ideas,” said Mr. Horner, “let them try Ebony with a few submissions and see if we don’t back up our statement with real honest-to-goodness checks. Thus the eyes and ears of the audience are both made use of by the producer as direct roads to the mind and heart.”

Marguerite Gale Returns

When “The Judge” is published by World Pictures, it will mark the reappearance of Marguerite Gale on the screen, and incidentally recall some unique screen history to picturegoers. Miss Gale was featured in the first all-star picture made in which the cast comprised famous stage celebrities. “How Mollie Made Good” created a sensation some years ago with its cast of twelve strong, of which Miss Gale was a part. Leo Dietrichstein, Robert Edeson, Julia Dean, Cyril Scott, Henrietta Crosman, Henry Kolker, Ross X. Fenton and others equal to the occasion.

Miss Gale supports June Elvitige and John Bowers in “The Judge,” which was directed by Travels Vale.

PATRIOTISM

Ford to Produce Series of Features; “Men of Today” Next

Fordart Films Signing Stars And Directors for Comprising Productions

Francis Ford, director-general of the Fordart Films, is getting his working forces under way on his second production. During the coming year it is contemplated a second series of features will be produced, in addition to the small subjects. Infinite care, it is said, will be taken in every detail of production, from the selection of the story, which will be given the foremost consideration, to the writing of titles.

To carry on the work which has been laid out Mr. Ford has entered into negotiations with several well-known directors and stars, who will be used to produce pictures which will be issued under the Fordart banner.

The success which is attending “Berlin via America,” the first Fordart production, has been enthusiastic over the future. Requests for territories are coming in so fast, it is announced, that its success is already assured. The film will be distributed on the state rights basis, and Ernest Shipman, 17 West 44th street, New York, who is handling “Berlin via America” for Mr. Ford, states that it is a question of a few years when practically the whole country will have been contracted for.

The second product, “A Man of Today,” from the screen of Elsie Yan Name, is already under way. Francis Ford will direct and play the lead, while Edna Emerson, who created such a favorable impression in “Berlin via America,” will have the stellar feminine role.

Gerard's Film Plays
To Big Business
Throughout Country

"My Four Years in Germany," which is now being shown in the larger cities throughout the country, is living up to every prediction that has been made of its unusual box-office appeal, it is said, following its prosperous run at the Kucharbecker Theatre, New York. The city got a glimpse of Ambassador Gerard's screen revelations of his experience at the Prussian court, was Indianapolis. The film was put on at the Circle Theatre on April 7, and played to such unprecedented business that S. Barret McCormick, managing director, held it over for the second week. Much of the success attained by the Gerard film in Indianapolis could be attributed to the fine promotion that it received at Mr. McCormick's hands. Half-page and quarter-page ads were used in the daily papers, and by dwelling upon the authenticity of Ambassador Gerard's message, interest in the picture was stimulated to a degree unequalled by any film that has been shown in Indianapolis with so much success.

In Boston, "My Four Years in Germany" opened at the Tremont Temple for an indefinite run on April 14, and it is announced has being filling the house capacity every day since then.

At Fabian's Regent Theatre in Paterson, N. J., the picture was shown under the auspices of the National Exhibitors' Circuit for six days, beginning April 15, and during that time rolled up the unprecedented box-office total of $8,106.

On April 21, John Kunisky presented the Gerard film at the Madison Theatre in Detroit with a first-night audience that overtopped all figures on his books, and according to his own estimate, is likely to outdraw "The Birth of a Nation" before the run is completed.

Announcement was made that Misses presented the picture at the Colonial Theatre, Chicago, commencing Monday, April 29, to immense audiences. Big business has been done in the larger Metropolitan theatres in Minneapolis and St. Paul, and at the Proctor and Goodwin theatres in Elizabeth, Plainfield and Newark, N. J.

Townpeople Join in Mountain Law Film
Second Finley Drama

Picturesque mountain scenery is found in the second of the Blue Ridge dramas, "Mountain Law," reports General Film Company Western Bureau. This new Finley production is a story of the maner in which a beautiful young school teacher wins peace to a valley in the southern hills by harmony. Ned Finley, and Marion Henry play the leading roles. The location for nearly all of the exceptions is the immediate vicinity of Bat Cave, North Carolina, where the company's studios are located. Thousands of tourists, passing through town, became curious to see which celebrities were filming there, and it was necessary to act as extras and enter into the work with much zest and enthusiasm.

Following "Mountain Law" will come "The Raiders of Sunset Gap," one of the strongest stories in which Ned Finley has ever appeared, it is claimed. Mr. Finley writes: "he and his cameraman, Harry L. Keepers, are now cutting the four-minute Blue Grid, a drama which has been produced, "O' Garry Rides Alone," by L. Case Russell.

"Cleopatra" Picture
Establishes Record
For Percentage Film

According to figures now at hand in the William Fox offices, what is said to be probably the largest number of exhibitors that have ever played any picture on a percentage basis have shown the Theda Bara production, "Cleopatra." Twenty companies, the Fox statement says, are still touring the United States and Canada with prints of the photo-spectacle.

Although a score or more of these companies have been on the road since October when the stock picture was first presented, there still remains many large cities throughout the country that have not had the film. Mr. Fox explains this on the ground that it has not been found possible to accommodate them at an earlier date, on account of the press of bookings and the length of time for which they have been made.

The cities that are just seeing "Cleopatra" include New Orleans, Des Moines, Youngstown, Akron, Canton, Bex-ton, Evansville, Fargo, Joplin, Galveston and Waco, Hamilton, Canada, is also on this list.

Within the next weeks extended engagements will be played in Cincinnati and Louisville— at the Mary Anderson Theatre in the latter.

How thoroughly the nineteen companies are covering the United States— one is in Canada—with "Cleopatra" is evidenced by the announcement that in the week just closed they were scattered in the following way:

Two companies in Michigan, and one each in Louisiana, New York, Massachu-ssetts, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Mont a n a, Washington, Arizona, California, Illinois, Minnesota, North Dakota, Canada, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma, and Texas.

"Patria" Cast Chosen For Irene Castle's
Newest Pathe Play

Distinct novelty in story, it is said, and dramatic construction added to the popularity of the cast in this feature picture is combined to give it box office attraction.

This picture was made under the direction of Fred Wight from a scenario by Roy Somerville. It meets with the insistent demand of the public for something new, Pathe claims. Inspired by the story by W. Flood, "Patria Rides Alone," the anonymous author of the original story has chosen a number of intenscibly thrilling incidents from real life and woven a dramatic story about them.

The story opens as a constitutional soociety drama but assumes the character and intensity of a melodrama as the scenes are unfolded. "Just when the audience has drawn conclusions as to the climax, the story takes a sudden turn and the spectator is kept guessing till the last foot," the publicity department says.

Business Intrigue Furnishes Story for Latest Walsh Film

A new George Walsh picture, described as "a mile-a-minute action story, is to be the first of the special features in May from the William Fox organization. The production was screened in the East under the direction of Carl Harbaugh, and is titled "Brave and Bold."

Like Walsh's previous film, "Jack Spooner—President of the World," which is a vehicle for John Boles, "Patria" is a film with a different type of appeal.

The story revolves around the efforts and the tempestuous struggles—eventually crowned with success—of young Boles, a bank employee, the American act for the corporation which employs him.

Interstate Film Co.
Produces War Film
For American Mart

The Interstate Film Company, through its advertising and publicity representatives, the Press Service Bureau, an-ounces the completion of "The Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21." The film will be released in time for Memorial Day.

John A. Libston, cameraman, and Sam Siegel, formerly manager for William Fox in New Jersey, both of whom are members of the Interstate Film Company, sailed for England in the summer of 1915 to photograph scenes of the war for the American market. In charge of a subject that would insure the fullest educational and commercial value, they could not have selected a better one than the actual Zeppelin raids.

The film shows the German Zeppelin L-21 leave a German port, start on one of its murder orgies, and follows it on its path of devastation and destruction until England's Ace of Aces, Lieut. W. L. Robinson, plants the successful shot that sealed the doom of the L-21.

An innovation in novel titling for the film, it is said, adds much to its effectiveness. This result was secured through the co-operation of the laboratory of Eugene Mann, who prepared in arranging a moving title with a surprisingly startling effect of the powerful searchlights over London spotting the L-21, as a background.

The Interstate Film Company will announce the details concerning the method of disposal and sale of the film next week.

Now made into a motion picture by Harley Knoles and George Kelson at a cost exceeding $150,000.

Those experts who have seen “Stolen Orders” in the rough declare it to be a better picture than “The Whip.”

It is full of snap, has no padding, keeps you on edge from start to finish, tells a story of love, intrigue, conspiracy, adventure, war, diplomacy, mystery, crime and hate—in fact, just three serials packed into eight sizzling reels of picture punches.

Sir William Jury has offered £12,000 for the rights in Great Britain.

Minding Their Own Business

EXHIBITORS possess the real values of the motion picture business. Their theatres are the fundamental assets of the industry. Their investments exceed all other investments.

Yet, until this moment, exhibitors have had little to say about the running of the business—scarcely, even, anything to say about the running of their own part of the business.

Their attempts to pool their interests, and thereby exercise the voice in affairs which their combined booking power would give them, has resulted either in the feathering of the nests of a chosen few of their number, or in the financing of the selfish purposes of outsiders.

The reason for this has been, that once having assembled their forces, exhibitors have given over the control of these forces to others.

This AFFILIATED DISTRIBUTORS CORPORATION has been formed BY exhibitors, FOR exhibitors, to keep the control of the exhibitors’ booking power in the hands of exhibitors.

The purpose of the organization is to gain for the exhibitors’ booking associations affiliated with it, a definite and consistent supply of meritorious pictures at price concessions which such combined booking strength will earn—not to take advantage of that strength for selfish interests.

Exhibitors’ booking associations, affiliated with this organization, retain ALL of their independence. ALL of their funds, and likewise are WHOLLY responsible for the management of the AFFILIATED DISTRIBUTORS CORPORATION.

This management is vested in a Board of Directors, made up of exhibitors and elected by exhibitors. To make this board fully representative, of all exhibitors, one director is allotted to every hundred days of booking represented.

That a directorate of such representativeness may be relied upon to provide an efficient and trustworthy management, is best attested by the results which are now being obtained by such exhibitor booking units as:

The Exhbitors’ Booking Syndicate, of New York.
The Associated Theatres, Inc., of Minnesota.
The Motion Picture Theatres Association, of Illinois.
The Associated Theatres, Inc., of Illinois.
The United Exhibitors Association, of Philadelphia and Eastern Pennsylvania.
The Exhibitors’ Booking Association of the Intermountain States.
The North and South Carolina Exhibitors Booking Association.
The Exhibitors Booking Association, of Michigan.
The Tri-State Exhibitors Circuit of Pittsburgh.

Retaining their present independence, but affiliated in a national organization that will assure the better producers an even more extensive market, these, and other booking associations, now in process of formation, will for the first time in the history of the industry, be in a position to realize the full power of their strength.

That such realization will bring added savings in rentals, and increased returns in the excess profits of each booking association, will be obvious to the most casual investigator.

If you would have a share in these benefits, write today to the

Would you "grapple him to your soul

Certainly you would!

You will never know what Triangle pictures and Triangle service will do for your house until you have given them a trial.

The one object for which you are in business is profit—and profit is registered at the box office.

Triangle service is not designed to fill your house and then take all the receipts, leaving no profit for you. Nor is it intended to sell you pictures at reasonable prices and then when, through your efforts, your box office shows a profit, to suddenly raise your rentals to unreasonably high figures.

Triangle is a combination of good pictures, founded on human-interest stories, artistically directed and with talented players; plus prompt, courteous, honorable and business-like service. The Triangle policy has for its object the success of motion-picture exhibitors and it is sufficiently flexible to meet the demands of any exhibitor in the country.

The Triangle program offers you two pictures each week on which you can absolutely depend—pictures that are consistently good week-in and week-out—pictures that will always please any audience.

Triangle service is offered at prices which guarantee a profit to all exhibitors who will use reasonable efforts in the exploitation of pictures.

It is the unalterable policy of Triangle—an instruction rigidly enforced by the corporation—that salesmen must do business with exhibitors only on such a basis as will insure them making money. Exhibitors must make money on Triangle service—this is the very foundation of the success of Triangle.

GIVE TRIANGLE A TRIAL. Let us make you a proposition for running a few Triangle pictures. Compare the opinion of your patrons, the service from our exchange and the box office results of Triangle with any other program you have used or are using.

Funkhouser Must Go

That Major Funkhouser has been exceeding his authority in many details of his despotic censorship methods has long been recognized in the film trade and during the past week official recognition of this fact has been taken by the United States Government, through George Creel, chairman of the Committee on Public Information.

That Major Funkhouser is attempting to over ride the authority of the United States Government has been clearly brought to the foreground and also that he is setting himself up as an obstacle in the path of cultivating public opinion along the lines desired by the government has been conclusively proven.

Funkhouser, with his unbalanced notions in times of peace, is a serious annoyance; in times of war he becomes a real menace.

While the government is making boxing an important item of instruction at the various training camps, the Chicago censor czar is eliminating from motion pictures in Chicago every fight scene unless it is some pussy-foot affair carrying with it no conviction.

While the government is calling upon the citizens of the United States to arouse themselves to the fact that we are fighting a cruel and desperate enemy and that the methods of the enemy must be met with grim determination and with hearts fired to do deeds of greatest heroism, Funkhouser is cutting from the screen in Chicago every view and every caption which seeks to accomplish the government's program and leaving only the milk and water sentiments of a sleek pacifist.

The autocrat recognizes no superior rule, and Funkhouser is an autocrat.

Griffith's "Hearts of the World" was brought to the United States bearing the fullest endorsements of our two great co-belligerents in the war, Great Britain and France. The Edison-Kleine production, "The Unbeliever," was not merely endorsed by our own government, but was actually enacted by United States Marines and the production was aimed by the government to be a great force in attracting recruits to the Marine Corps.

"My Four Years in Germany," produced under the personal supervision of former Ambassador Gerard and depicting only incidents attested to by Mr. Gerard and whole-heartedly endorsed by government officials, did not come to Chicago with a sufficient guarantee to prevent Funkhouser from attempting to mutilate it.

These are three recent cases and in each one Funkhouser has set himself up as an authority superior to that of the government.

We are not concerned with Funkhouser personally nor with what may be Funkhouser's personal views on the war. But we, in keeping with the attitude of all other real Americans in the present crisis, will not condone conduct which either through stupidity or malice interferes one iota with the preparation of America for its task of carrying the war to a successful conclusion.

And Major Funkhouser is a real menace in consideration of the absolute necessity of the people of Chicago and elsewhere renouncing forever the pussy-footed, grape-juice attitude of former days and cultivating a spirit of red-blooded resistance against every influence detrimental to the best interests of America.

If the United States government cannot reach the people of Chicago with the full force and effect of the propaganda films which it is endorsing with Funkhouser in his present position, then Funkhouser must go. At a time like this there must be no compassionate tolerance of Funkhouser's pet theories, of those honeyed pledges with which he has repeatedly gone before women's clubs or of his warped judgment as to what the public should be given with a view to steeling its nerves to the task of war.

The United States is "three thousand miles away from the war," and this fact has been a great hindrance in preventing the country from quickly arriving at its highest point of mental and physical wartime efficiency. We stand in great need of every public speaker, of every publication and of every motion picture that can bring the war home to the United States. Not before this is done will the full force of America be felt in the war.

Up to date the casualty lists have been comparatively small, but they will grow apace with the great conflict in progress in France and Belgium. And as these casualty lists continue to grow and as the American people come to a realization of the full import of war, any man who has kept from the people of the United States information which would have spurred it on to a proper state of mind will do well if he escapes punishment at the hands of an outraged public.

Sidney Garrett, in an article in a recent issue, sets forth information in connection with film markets abroad that is of paramount interest to every exporter of film. American business has suffered everywhere from failure to possess and act upon accurate knowledge of foreign conditions, and the light which Mr. Garrett's article sheds upon the situation, notably in France, is very valuable.

Mention of the forty-sixth anniversary of the motion picture, which is soon to be celebrated, will be received by many with considerable surprise, as that early period when motion photography began its struggle toward perfection is a period concerning which but few are informed. Those pioneers who persisted in the face of many misfortunes and set-backs are entitled to all the honor that the present perfection of pictures reflects upon their work.

Casual Comment
George Creel Asks Removal of Funkhouser

Chairman of Committee on Public Information, Wires Governor Lowden of Illinois Asking Chicago Censor Be Replaced-Exhibitors Herald Editorial Factor in Action

George Creel, chairman of the Committee on Public Information, has asked, in a telegram to Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, that every possible action be taken to remove Major M. L. C. Funkhouser from his position as official censor of motion picture productions in Chicago.

The attention of the government official was called to the seriousness of the situation by an editorial in the exhibitors Herald, headed "Mr. Funkhouser—Where Do You Stand?" and which outlined in detail the various limitations demanded by the censor in recent productions which had already received the approval of Washington authorities.

Major Funkhouser's every action since the declaration of war on Germany by the United States has been seemingly to keep from the people of Chicago evidences of German brutality as portrayed on the screen and their incidents aimed to bring about a correct public opinion for the time of war.

War Productions Slashed

His slashing of the Griffith production, "Hearts of the World," the first national Exhibitors Circuit's "My Four Years in Germany," based on material filmed by former Ambassador J. Gregory, and "The Unbeliever," an M.G.M. production, has kindled to flame a long-smouldering fire of indignation which, before it has burned it, will undoubtedly relieve Mr. Funkhouser of his censorship capacity, if it is not the cause of more serious charges being filed against him. In proceeding as he has, the censor's shibboleth with the government authorities is inevitable. One of the most decried attacks upon Chicago's second duty of police was launched by the 1st National Exhibitors Circuit following his demand for the elimination of battles and scenes from "My Four Years in Germany," depicting actual occurrences in the man of the Kaiser during a time of Ambassador Gerard's occupation.

Williams Wires Officials

J. D. Williams, manager of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, at once red protests to Attorney General Gregory and Mr. Creel. In addition to Mr. Clyde A. Mann, publicity representative of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission of Chicago, filed formal complaints with local government, municipal and state officials in behalf of the organization he represents. Mr. Williams, writing to the following telegram to Governor Lowden:

"Ambassador James W. Gerard's motion picture version, "My Four Years in Germany," which thousands of the men in your state, now enlisted in the National Army, witnessed during its presentation at the Liberty Theatre, Camp Grant, Rockford, and commended in the highest terms for its power in stimulating patriotism and crystallizing opposition to Germany's war aims, has been placed under ban by Major Funkhouser, censors for Chicago. Several scenes, picturing brutality of German soldiers, have been cut for evident purpose of sparing feelings of pro-German citizens.

Mr. Gerard picture, made under his personal supervision and distributed by this organization largely to help arouse natives to German menace, has been seen by S. U. Army cantonments on official request, and also used by Treasury Department to instruct Liberty Loan campaign speakers. If you or any of your officials have witnessed this production and you deem it advisable, we would greatly appreciate any assistance you could render in reversing this anti-American prejudice in the second largest city of our country."

Indianapolis Mayor Replies

Similar telegrams have been sent by Mr. Williams to governors of all the states, as well as the mayors, of many of the larger cities throughout the country. Charles W. Jewett, mayor of Indianapolis, Ind., has already replied. After stating that he considered the production one of the most stimulating presentations of Germany's war aims, Mayor Jewett says:

"There is no reason why this picture should be cut to spare the feelings of persons who enjoy the blessings of America and who are at heart opposed to this country. In this war American people need to be awakened to the crisis confronting us."

Ambassador Gerard was highly incensed over the action of the Chicago censor. He has taken the case up personally with federal authorities in Washington to see if means cannot be taken to forbid Funkhouser from censoring excesses to prevent films showing German acts of brutality from being shown in Chicago.

Gerard's Personal Appeal

It is believed and devoutly hoped by those who are endeavoring to foster American patriotism, that Mr. Gerard's personal acquaintance with Attorney General Gregory and Mr. Creel will lead to an investigation of Mr. Funkhouser's activities along the lines of luke-warm Americanism.

In slashing this production Major Funkhouser has run amok of a film that has already received the unqualified endorsement of government officials who were in charge of the third Liberty Loan publicity, and are interested in giving the men in the various army censors a vivid idea of Germany's diplomatic perfidy and barbarous methods of warfare.

In eliminating from "Hearts of the World," the D. W. Griffith masterpiece, which has the approval and support of the British and French governments, as well as that of this country, scenes of a wounded Frenchman being bayoneted by a German and a German officer's attack upon a Belgian girl, Major Funkhouser became the subject of a telegram to President Woodrow Wilson, sent by Messrs. Elliott, Corrigan and Gest, who are managing the production.

Ask President's Aid

In the message President Wilson is asked to begin investigation of the censor through the United States district attorney. The telegram, in full, follows: "May we respectfully call your attention to the following facts: we are presenting in Chicago and in other cities D. W. Griffith's latest photodrama, "Hearts of the World," taken by Mr. Griffith upon the battlefields of France by special permission of David Lloyd George and the British war office. One-half of the proceeds of this picture in England go to the British government for relief work. The official city censor of Chicago, Funkhouser, has ordered the elimination of two important scenes which show German brutality in the occupied territory of France. One shows a German soldier stabbing a wounded Frenchman with a bayonet on the battlefield, an actual incident, described to Mr. Griffith.

Plan Forty-Sixth Anniversary Of Discovery of Motion Pictures

Maurice Tourneur Starts Movement to Honor Edward Muybridge—Experiments Began in 1872

Through the efforts of Maurice Tourneur, the director, a movement has been started to honor Edward Muybridge, the man whose experiments led to the first motion pictures. It is planned to hold the anniversary on May 18.

"In May, 1872, Muybridge began his experiments in instantaneous photography," says Mr. Tourneur, "and yet, exactly forty-six years later, we have done nothing to honor this pioneer who made the photoplay possible. In the interim Muybridge's experiments have developed into the fifth industry of America.

"The popular idea credits Thomas Edison with being the creator of the motion picture. While Edison contributed an object to the development of the film, animated photography really dates back to Muybridge. Out in California in 1872 this man began his experiments which were later carried on at the University of Pennsylvania. That university provided him with grants amounting to over $40,000, the first instance of a scientific investigation financed by a college, which developed a business of practical and commercial importance.

"Studied Animal Movement

"Muybridge did not have the photodrama in mind when he started experiments with the cameras. Thus a study of animal movement for the use of art and science. In fact, his first experiments are said to have been backed by a California governor who wanted pictures of his race horses in action.

"Muybridge built a shed which was painted black and was 120 feet long. Opposite the shed he constructed a camera house with 24 cameras, each having a lens three inches in diameter. In front of these cameras a horse galloped. The black shed was the background. The cameras, operated first by strings which were broken by the horse's progress, caught successive exposures. Later a motor operated the cameras. Thus a series of successive movement pictures was obtained. Later the work was taken up by M. Marey of Paris, who utilized a sensitized film and was able to use a single camera.

"Shown At World Fair

"But Muybridge not only took the first photographs of moving objects but he also placed them on a screen, leading directly to the exhibition of motion pictures. He lectured and presented these pictures beginning in 1880 and, at the Chicago Exposition of 1893, in a specially constructed building, showed motion pictures of birds flying, athletes wrestling, etc.

"Here was the real beginning of the motion picture, later given splendid con-

Goldstein Sentenced To Ten Years in Jail

Robert Goldstein, producer of "The Spirit of '76," who was recently convicted by a Los Angeles jury for violation of the espionage act, was sentenced last week by Judge Bledsoe to serve ten years in the penitentiary and pay a fine of $2,000 on one count and on another to serve two years. As the two sentences run concurrently Goldstein will be required to serve at least ten years in prison for producing the photoplay which it was determined was German propaganda.

In imposing sentence Judge Bledsoe said Goldstein should consider himself fortunate that he did not commit his offense in another country as undoubtedly he would have paid the supreme penalty of death. Goldstein was denied a new trial, but his attorneys were allowed ten days to appeal to a higher court.

John R. Freuler Resigns From Presidency of Mutual Film Corp.

James M. Sheldon of New York, New Head of Company—Samuel S. Hutchinson Also Resigns as Director

John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation since 1913, resigned as head of the company at a meeting of the board of directors held in the Chicago offices last Wednesday, Samuel S. Hutchinson, director, also president of the American Film Company, and Samuel S. Field, general counsel of the concern, also tendered their resignations.

James M. Sheldon of New York was elected to succeed Mr. Freuler as president, and Warren Gorrell and Walter McLellan of the Federal Reserve Bank, Chicago, were elected to the board of directors.

The officers of the corporation now include G. W. Hall and John F. Cuneo, vice-presidents; Paul H. Davis, treasurer; I. C. Elston, Jr., assistant treasurer; Edward Stoddard, secretary, and H. G. Davis, assistant secretary.

Company Organized in 1912

The Mutual Film Corporation was organized in 1912 under the laws of the state of Delaware. Mr. Freuler took the presidency three years later and has continued at the head of the concern up to the time of his resignation last week.

Mr. Sheldon, the new president of Mutual, is widely and favorably known in the motion picture business through his connection with the Syndicate Film Corporation, as president of the Randolph Film Corporation and more recently as head of the Empire All-Star Corporation. Prior to his motion picture connections, Mr. Sheldon was actively engaged in the practice of law.

"Business as usual," was Mr. Sheldon's terse statement on taking charge of the company, which controls thirty-six exchanges in this country and Canada.

"Important Plans"—Freuler

That Mr. Freuler will not retire from the motion picture business was evidenced in a statement he issued concerning the severing of his connection with the Mutual Company. He would not, at this time, make public his plans for the future, but intimated important plans in formation.

"I have important motion picture plans in the process of consummation which will be announced probably in the early autumn," Mr. Freuler said.

Gerhardt Joins General

A recent new appointee at the headquarters office of General Film Company, New York City, is J. H. Gerhardt, long known to the theatrical and motion picture field as advertising manager of the New York Dramatic Mirror.

Mr. Gerhardt's duties will be in the general sales department and he will be associated with Sales Manager W. F. Rodgers in certain specialized work, it is announced.

J. A. Berst Elected President Of United Picture Theatres

Succeeds Lee A. Ochs Who Retains Place on Directorate—Advisory Board Selected

As reported in the EXHIBITORS HERALD, March 23, J. A. Berst officially announces his affiliation with the United Picture Theatres of America, Inc. At a meeting of the board of directors of the new organization, held on April 27, Mr. Berst was elected president, succeeding Lee A. Ochs.

President J. A. Berst assumed direction of the affairs of the company April 29. Mr. Ochs retains his place on the directorate, serving hereafter in the office of vice-president. Several further important additions to the directoral body, it is said, will shortly be announced. Mr. Berst, in his letter of acceptance, said:

United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., 1600 Broadway, New York,

Gentlemen:

I accept the presidency of United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., because I am thoroughly convinced that the cooperative system proposed by you will remedy existing evils and injustices as between the producer and the exhibitor. During a career of more than twenty years in the industry, my policy has been "Fairness to the exhibitor." But even with the gratifying support of thousands of exhibitors during my term as president of the General Film and my vice-presidency and general management of Pathe, the realization has gradually come to me that the competitive method of handling films is unscientific, wasteful and injurious to the interests of all concerned.

Cooperation Needed

Cooperative enterprise must come in motion pictures as in every department of industrial activity; in fact, the showing you have already made proves that it has come to stay. With this conviction I have devoted the last two months to the study of all the cooperative plans that have been outlined and the plans of the United Picture Theatres are to my mind the best throughout and present the only perfect system of national cooperation ever offered. I am deeply sensible of the mark of confidence you have shown me in electing me your president and shall do my utmost to justify the confidence you have reposed in me.

I shall address myself to the fulfilling of the promises of United Picture Theatres to its stockholders. The success of all branch offices will be developed to the farthest extent. The exhibitor, I hope, will find a new era of prosperity in this cooperative combination for the common good. I decided to accept the office only after satisfying myself that the market can well afford sufficient product of high-class quality and, through this plan, at prices much lower than the exhibitor has heretofore enjoyed.

I have no other affiliations in the film industry, no divided interests that might prevent me from carrying out this program. Let us all get together and bring this about. The growth of United Picture Theatres in exhibitor membership and general confidence has already been astounding. I hereby extend a cordial invitation to all motion picture theatre managers who have lined up with me in the past, to come into the new organization and share its privileges and benefits.

Very truly yours,

J. A. Berst.

OF FUNKHOUSE

New Council Attack

In addition to the various angles of the federal investigations Major Funkhouse is soon to be again attacked from the floor of the city council of Chicago. This attack, it is reported, will take the form of a demand that all patrons "cuts" be restored and that one-man censorship be eliminated. The aldermen concerned have not yet fully corroborated the report.

The following are the cuts which the censor ordered Jennes, Linick & Schaefer, the First National franchise holders in Illinois, to make before he would issue a license for its presentation at the Colonnial theatre:

Kleine Denies Published Story Of Exchange Sale

Deplores Publication's Failure to Seek Verification Of Rumor

George Kleine of the George Kleine System has issued an emphatic denial of a story printed in a motion picture trade paper to the effect that the General Film Company had taken over the business of the George Kleine Exchange in New York City.

There is a statement published in the Exhibitors Trade Review, to the effect that the General Film Company has taken over the business of the George Kleine Exchange in New York," Mr. Kleine's statement reads.

This statement is untrue, and so far as I know or have not the slightest attempt to verify it. It is in line with another statement printed to the effect that I had sold my Canadian business to Mr. Smegal. This also was untrue, and the paper printed it without attempting to verify the alleged act.

Responsibility of Publication

"The least that a responsible publication can do when it hears such reports is to verify them before publication," Mr. Kleine states that he has not sold or does he contemplate selling the film business under his name as the George Kleine System. The purported sale of Canadian interests was in fact a merger with the General Film Company in that territory, he says.

I have not sold nor do I contemplate selling my film distributing business operating under my name and the trade name as George Kleine System. Mr. Kleine continues. "This business is being conducted conservatively and is as solid as any in the industry. On January 1, I changed the offices from the program system to superfeatures and short length features released at irregular intervals.

Reviews Screen Successes

"We have had some of the most conspicuous successes of the year, including 'The Unbeliever,' 'Ruggles of Red Gap,' 'A Pair of Sixes,' 'Brown of Harvard,' the 'Flagg comedies' and others. We have coming a number of big attractions not yet advertised, among them great Italian War picture made by me at Rome at the instance of the apartment of war and munitions of Italy; also 'Young America,' a Kohan Harris play and 'Hawthorne of the S.A.'

In Canada our offices are about to be merged with those of the General Film company; they have not sold out to me or to them, the merger maintaining the interests of both parties, and involves economy of operation only.

Directors Boost Loan
At Special Meeting

The Motion Picture Directors' Association held a special meeting Tuesday evening, April 30, to further the Liberty Loan. The meeting was addressed by P. A. Powers, who stated that 13,000,000 people witnessed motion pictures daily; that the directors are doing most patriotic work by instilling into their productions elements to strengthen the morale of the people.

Mr. Powers vigorously urged the members present to continue the work, citing many helpful ways this would be of benefit to our country during the war. The subscriptions for the Liberty Loan among the thirty odd directors present amounted to $167,500. This did not include the directors of the New York studio, who were out of town, nor those of the Los Angeles Lodge, M. F. D. A., which report has not as yet been received.

A telegram from E. E. Loper, Los Angeles branch manager for Select Pictures Corporation, states that Clara Kimball Young achieved the remarkable total for a one-day's sale of $101,000 worth of Liberty Bonds recently.

Miss Young's mark will doubtless stand among the highest for a one-day campaign and will be a target for screen stars who are giving so unselfishly of their time, their money and their services.

Sings at Rivoli, N. Y.

Lieut. B. C. Hilliam, of the Royal Canadian forces, is one of the Rivoli Theatre's New York attractions this week, singing "Freedom For All Forever." This is Lieut. Hilliam's own composition and was based on the war slogan which won the prize offered recently in a contest conducted by the Newspaper Enterprise Association. Miss Marion I. Coop, of San Diego, Calif., devised the slogan and Lieut. Hilliam elaborated it into a lyric. The melody is said to be particularly pleasing and has a fine martial note throughout. The composer accompanies himself on the piano during his rendition of the song.

Mme. Olga Petrova
To Tour Country
Give Eyes a Rest

Has Offered Services to Government—To Aid Thrift Stamp Sale

Mme. Olga Petrova, who for the past eight months has taken but one vacation, and that a ten-days trip to Florida, is now obliged, on advice of her physician, to cease activities at the Petrova Picture Company’s studios for the present. Mme. Petrova will temporarily retire from the producing field this week, it is announced, when “Patience Sparhawk,” the fifth Petrova Picture will have been completed.

She will make an extensive tour of the principal cities of the United States from New York to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The noted actress, despite the fact that she is compelled to give her eyes a rest, is not satisfied to be inactive altogether, and will combine business and patriotism along with her rest cure, it is said.

Arrangements are now under way whereby Madame Petrova will make a personal appearance and give a war talk in all of the theatres controlled by the First National Exhibitors’ Circuit. This will be practically the very first time that picture patrons will have the opportunity of seeing the famous film artist in the flesh and hearing her deliver a brief program.

Mme. Petrova contemplates rendering a number of her own original poems, songs, monologues, and scenes, during these appearances simultaneously with the showing of her pictures. She will offer her entire services during this trip to the United States Government in the interest of the patriotic drive now being directed by the bureau of public information at Washington, D. C.

A novel suggestion made by Mme. Petrova, which has met with the approval of the First National men, and theatre managers thus far approached, is that instead of raising the prices at theatres where she appears, each purchaser of an orchestra seat will be required to buy one twenty-five cent war sets for a few weeks’ rest after her every pair of balcony seats. In this way many books will be started by those who had not hitherto been interested in saving war stamps.

Mabel Julienne Scott, who together with Niles Welch, is starred in “Reclaimed,” has left the city for Massachusetts, where she is engaged in arduous work in the leading female role. Mr. Webster is busy making preparations for his next production.

Wily Hindu Plotters
Recently Convicted
Shown in “Eagle’s Eye”

Plots against America, for which Franz Bopp, the former German Consul General at San Francisco, Ram Chandra and twenty-seven others were recently convicted in the Federal Court, are shown in detail, it is said, in two of the episodes of “The Eagle’s Eye,” the twenty episode serial story of the German spy system in America. Bopp appears first in the thirteenth episode of the serial, and the entire eighteenth episode is given over to the plotting in East India, for which the convictions were just returned.

Under the title of “The Reign of Terror,” the thirteenth episode shows activities of the former Imperial German consul at San Francisco, which engaged his attention immediately after the deporation of Captain Franz von Papen, the military attache of the Imperial German Embassy in Washington, and Captain Karl Boy-Ed, the Naval attaché of the Embassy. Bopp took part in the work which had devolved upon these two men, when they were recalled at the demand of the United States Government.

The eighteenth episode of the serial to be published under the title of “The Great Hindu Conspiracy,” pictures in detail, it is said, the plot for which Bopp and Ram Chandra were convicted after a three-months trial in San Francisco. In this case the Imperial German Government worked with Hindus for the purpose of fomenting an uprising in the British East India. It was the hope of the Kaiser's plotters in this country that the rebellion could be made of such intensity that it would seriously weaken the efforts of England and France to cope with the East Indians.

Again the United States Secret Service was too alert for the Imperial German conspirators and the wily Hindus. The plot was discovered early in its inception, it is stated, and its entire ramifications were being traced when the storage places for rifles, machine guns and ammunition had all been found and the spies arrested, and the attempted East Indian uprising was a thing of the past.

THREE BIG SCENES FROM "TEMPERED STEEL"
German Plotters Convicted by Jury
In Brooklyn Trial

Smuggled Rubber Into Germany and Secured Propagandist Films for Use In America

Felix Malitz and Gustave Engler, officers of the American Correspondence Film Co., were convicted in the Brooklyn Federal Court last week of conspiring to smuggle rubber to Holland without including it on the shipping manifests. They may be punished by sentences of not more than two years or fines of not more than $10,000 each. The jury took three hours to convict.

Malitz is president of the American Correspondence Film Company. Engler was his secretary. They were arrested Jan. 2.

Evidence presented by Assistant United States District Attorney Beer was to the effect that the two men bought a rubber film, "The Planter," from the Robert Pierce Company, 80 Reade Street, Brooklyn, representing that it was for domestic use, and shipped it abroad clandestinely during 1916. It is estimated the product was supposed to have been smuggled into Germany, despite the British blockage.

The defendants are said to have taken their rubber to different dealers in fish, meats and vegetables supplying steamers of the Norwegian-American Line. At the piers the stearm steward took charge of the rubber.

By this underground route, Malitz and Engler got 1,000 feet of German propagandist film out of Germany, with the help of the enemy Foreign Office. Malitz admitted on the stand that he had entertained at his office von Bernstorff, von Papen and Dr. Albert.

George Loane Tucker Joins United Theatres

Announcement has just been made by the United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., of the appointment of George Loane Tucker to the advisory board of that organization. "The Planter" PLEASES Washington Audiences

Tom Moore, the Washington, D.C., exhibitor, who has some very definite ideas about publicity, and who expresses himself positively on pictures and the merits or demerits thereof, took occasion to tell Mutual recently what he thought of "The Planter," the seventh reel production starring Tyrone Power.

"The Planter'' went over great," said Mr. Moore, "even though this is the third time that it has been played on Ninth street. We are so satisfied with the box office possibilities of this subject that we are going to play it again in the near future." The Ninth street house is the third of the Moore houses that have played "The Planter," and each one has turned in splendid box office statements, it is said.

More return bookings have been requested on "The Planter," it is announced, than any feature issue by Mutual within the past year, and reports from over three hundred theatres indicate that it has invariably done good business.

"THE OLDEST LAW"

World drama; five parts; directed by Harley Knolles; published May 13

| As a whole | Good
| Story | Improbable
| Star | Interesting
| Support | Adequate
| Settings | Very good
| Photography | Fine

Harley Knolles has taken an improbable story and by degrees worked it into an interesting drama of domestic life, different from the eternal triangle and yet bordering on it. Many improbabilities creep in and yet the whole is interesting and it makes a good program feature and where June Elvidge is a favorite, it should attract attention.

One of the very commendable points of the production is the excellent photography and the fine long "shots" depicting scenes supposedly in the Blue Ridge mountains. The photography throughout is exceptionally clear and the objects though taken at long distance stand out sharply and distinctly. It is a well produced picture from the technical standpoint.

Miss Elvidge, in the role of the simple country girl, who goes to the city to make her living and find happiness, is charming. Supporting her are John Bowes, Charles Charles, Frank Norcross, Eloise Clement and Frank Andrews, all of whom handled their roles pleasingly.

The story: A country girl, Jean Cox, comes to the city to secure employment; after the death of her father, but each time as things run smoothly adversity comes her way. In one of her moments of depression she meets Billy West, recently divorced, who offers her the position of housekeeper. She accepts and comes to love Billy. She consents to marry a man whom she detests in order to save Billy from bankruptcy, but is saved from this by Billy's former wife, who secures the I. O. U.'s and by destroying them it makes it possible for Billy and Jean to marry each other.

"MY FOUR YEARS IN GERMANY"

First National drama; nine parts; directed by William Nigh; published states rights

| As a whole | Stirring
| Story | Patriotic
| Cast | Well balanced
| Settings | Faithful
| Photography | Good

Ambassador James W. Gerard and his interesting and thrilling experiences during his four years' sojourn in Germany have attained nation-wide popularity, and the fact that these incidents have been screened and prepared for the public with actual scenes of the marauding Germans and their murderous attacks, their cynical attitude, their narrow and limited knowledge of the American people, and their misguided idea that their country, their people and their slashing, slaughtering methods of warfare are sanctioned by a Higher Being, provides an exhibitor with unlimited means of widely advertising the production. It will undoubtedly arouse in the public a desire to see these things pictured.

While the picture has its faults from a producing standpoint, there are many points about it that redound to the credit of William Nigh, the director. The selection of the various characters impersonating the Kaiser, the crown prince, Von Jagow and the numerous other heads of the Prussian government run true to type, and the man impersonating James Gerard carried all the dignity one would expect of so high an American official.

The subtitles are excerpts from Mr. Gerard's book, the number of the page appearing in each subtitle. The picture is inspiring and applause-inviting and will stir the patriotism in spectators to an exceedingly high degree.

The nature of the production is such that exhibitors should make an opportunity of seeing it, and in most cases it will undoubtedly be enjoyed and make patrons feel a greater pride in their country and be thankful that they live in America.

"THE TRAIL TO YESTERDAY"

Metro drama; five parts; directed by Edwin Carewe; published May 5

| As a whole | Interesting
| Story | Well developed
| Star | Ample
| Support | Supporting
| Settings | Fine
| Photography | Excellent

Bert Lytell's first Metro production bespeaks big things for this sterling actor under his new affiliation. Anna Q. Nilsson, Harry S. Northrup, Ernest Maupin, John A. Smiley and Danny Hogan, all familiar names, appear in the supporting cast. It is a thrilling mystery story, well developed, with the mystery unsolved to the end and plenty of suspense in every situation.

All the way through the telling of Charles Alden Sedgter's novel is interesting, holds one's attention and at times brings the nerves to a high tension through the well handled situations. There are times when the action becomes thrilling and times when the mystery seems about to be solved, but a slight twist to the plot makes the whole insolvable until the end.

Bert Lytell is a most pleasing character, and his cast renders him excellent support. The settings, all western, are excellent and the photography is the best. It is the sort of production that will make itself enjoyable and for a house where western dramas are in favor, it should prove unusually attractive.

The story: David Langford kills his partner and accuses the son of the murder. A fugitive from justice, Nell Keegles, goes out west, determined on revenge. When he meets Sheila Langford, he forces her to marry him, believing his revenge complete. Then he learns that Langford is only Sheila's stepfather and he is sorry. He tells Sheila so and begs her forgiveness, but his enemies have derided his character and Sheila is slow in forgiving. The attempted murder of Nell's best friend forces him to talk and when Sheila learns the true state of affairs she is satisfied with her marriage and the forced ceremony.

Artcraft to Publish "Can't Have Everything"

Cecil B. DeMille began work this week at the Hollywood studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation on "We Can't Have Everything," a new picture from the novel by Rupert Hughes, the scenario of which is by his brother, Wm. C. De Mille. "We Can't Have Everything" follows "Old Wives for New," which was completed last week and which will be issued by Arterial.

Vivian Martin will begin work within a short time on a new production at the Moreseco studios for Paramount. While the title is as yet unannounced, it is said that the picture will deal with the experiences of a young girl of the social set. James Young will probably direct the picture.

Wallace Reid, supported by Ann Little, having completed "The Firefly of France" is to begin work next week upon "Less Than Kin," to be directed by Donald Crisp.

THE "HERALD'S" REVIEW SERVICE

The dominant aim of the reviewers on the staff of the EXHIBITORS HERALD is to supply the exhibitor with the information necessary to enable him to appreciate intelligently the production under consideration—to know if the picture is exceptional, if it is of standard quality, if it is suitable in theme and treatment to his requirements. The review department is absolutely essential to every person who books pictures. Its independence, strict impartiality and fairness guarantees an accurate estimation of every important production published.

“JOAN OF PLATTSBURG”
Goldwyn drama; five parts; directed by George Loane Tucker; published May 5

As a whole: Good
Story: Good
Star: Fair
Support: Excellent
Settings: Elaborate
Photography: Commandable

The story of “Joan of Plattsburg” is not as strong as one might expect, probably due to the fact that it was necessary to revamp it to comply with the government’s wishes. But Mabel Normand does much to add to its enjoyment and for Mabel Normand’s admirers it will doubtless prove a goal attraction. All the artistry of the Goldwyn standard of production is evident throughout the picture.

For the wide-awake exhibitor there are many ways of advertising “Joan of Plattsburg” to draw large houses. It is a Goldwyn production; Mabel Normand is the star, and the play was directed by George Loane Tucker. The main theme is about a little orphan girl who succeeds in disclosing a nest of German spies and throughout the picture there are scenes of units of soldiers drilling. The leading male players in the story are soldiers, and with the exception of two or three

“LET’S GET A DIVORCE”
Paramount comedy; five parts; directed by Charles Giblyn; published April 29

As a whole: Well handled
Story: Interesting
Star: Capable
Support: Excellent
Settings: Elaborate
Photography: Commandable

Many a whole hearted laugh and subdued chuckle is to be found in “Let’s Get a Divorce,” whose theme is as light, airy and entertaining as that of any of recent comedies. Not detracting one iota from the credit due Miss Burke for a most convincing performance, it can be said truthfully that the subtitles are the backbone of the production. Their naturalness and mirth provoking qualities show the master hand of a gifted humorist. As a light morsel to nibble at while trying to digest her many war dramas being shown on the screen, it fits a long-elt want.

Miss Burke as the wildly romantic Cyprienne Marcey in her effort to find true romance with a capital “R” is delightful.

“BRAVE AND BOLD”
Fox comedy-drama; five parts; directed by Carl Harbaugh; published May 5

As a whole: Good
Story: Full of action
Star: Interesting
Support: Sufficient
Settings: Suitable
Photography: Clear

George Walsh in “Brave and Bold” should prove an attractive offering anywhere. It has all the pep and gaiety that has been prominent in his previous productions and the story is interestingly developed. There are a number of thrilling chase scenes and genuine suspense situations which have been well handled.

George Walsh takes advantage of every opportunity presented him in his role and gives a pleasing delineation of his character. In his support appear Regina Quinn, Mabel Bunyea, Dan Mason and Francis X. Conlan. It is a well produced picture.

The story: Robert Booth is anxious to secure a large contract for his firm as well as marry the lady of his heart, all in one day. The scene is to take place in Pittsburg, where he gets there he is kidnapped by one of his competitors, taken to a deserted shack and in his attempt to escape is arrested and put in a cell. But he manages to get out, arrives at the hotel in time to secure the order, prevent injury to the man from whom he secured the contract, when a bomb is exploded, and marry the girl.

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson in “PASSING OF THE THIRD FLOOR BACK”
Brenon drama; six parts; directed by Herbert Brenon; published First National Circuit

As a whole: Well handled
Story: Interesting
Star: Capable
Support: Excellent Settings: In keeping
Photography: Good

It isn’t an ordinary event to present an actor of such international fame as Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson on the motion picture screen and those exhibitors hooking this production should put emphasis on this fact in their advertising.

The story of the “Passing of the Third Floor Back” is an unusual sort of picture, just as the stage play was an unusual presentation. It is built along allegorical lines, handled in an enjoyable manner and deals with a topic that should prove interesting to the majority of spectators.

There isn’t a great amount of action to the story. It is just a simple tale of the advent of a stranger into the midst of a family beset by discord and the changes that result after a conversation with this stranger, whose eyes seem to be lighted with a Holy light. It carries with it a good moral and because of the excellent handling of the picture, its preachment should not interfere with its enjoyment.

The story is in the heart of the story of Mrs. Shapre there is nothing but discord among her boarders. The “old maid” believes that only false hair and powder will make her beautiful. The major and his wife are continually quarreling. Their daughter, Vivian, is being forced into a marriage for money. The young artist accepts an assignment of not the choicest line of work to secure enough money to marry Vivian. Harry Larkcom is trying to force his attentions on the slack, but the arrival of the stranger at his house makes them realize the selfishness and narrowness of their existence, and before long one finds the boarding house a happy and contented place and his work finished, the Stranger passes out again.

“The Bride’s Awakening” should help to popularize to a larger extent Mac Murray, as in it he does some of her very best work.

The situation in this production, while in many ways old, has been thrown new twists which add greatly to its interest. There is good direction, wonderful scenery, handsomely staged interiors and splendid photography.

The story is a dramatic one and should prove adaptable to houses where patrons enjoy entertainment of this nature. Miss Murray is pleasing in the majority of her scenes and has been given good support in Ashton Dearholt, Lewis J. Cody, Clarissa Selwyn, Harry Carter and Joe Girard. The story is the work of F. McGrew Willis.

The story: Believing he loves her, Elaine Bronson marries Edward Earle at the death of her uncle, but before very long she finds Edward was more interested in her fortune and so she accepts the attentions of Ray Weston. Edward, who had an affair with a married woman, tires of her and appreciates the beauty of his wife, who refuses to have anything to do with him. The woman comes back to Edward and when she learns of his marriage she kills him. This leaves Elaine and Jimmy free to pursue their happiness.

Clever comedy vies with thrills in “Playing the Game,” one of the best vehicles Charles Ray has appeared in. There are no dull moments; action is the keynote. From a shining light on Broadway to a rider of the range is quite a jump, but broad jumps are Ray’s specialty and this newest play is a wonderful opportunity for display of his versatility.

The cast is well balanced. Each one of these capable screen actors fills a very necessary part in the telling of the story. The photography in the early part of the picture presents some beautiful interiors and later unfolds broad expanses of mountainous western country, restful to the eye, and a strong background for the production.

The story: Believing he has killed a professional dancer in a cafe brawl, with his valet, Hodges, flees to the west where he owns a ranch. The two are waylaid, robbed of their clothes and money and set adrift. In this condition they are picked up by the foreman of Larry’s ranch. The latter, determined to make good on his merits, refuses to make known his identity. Hardships follow in which Larry inures the enmity of “Flash” Purdy, the ranch foreman. The young man is the means of saving the ranch payroll in a running gun fight and in the tense moments of a bitter hand to hand struggle learns that Moya Shannon, daughter of the ranch manager, loves him. In the days that follow he squares his account with Purdy, but his adventure draws a close when his real identity is made known through a telegram from his uncle.

Kitty Gordon in “The Interloper”

World Pictures will issue “The Interloper,” a new Kitty Gordon photoplay, on June 3. This is the first completed product of Oscar Apfel direction under the World Pictures trade-mark. It also signals the advent of Irving Cummings as a leading man for Miss Gordon. The supporting cast includes Frank Mayo, George MacQuarrie, Isabelle Berwin, June Blackman, Anthony Byrd and J. Quong.

“The Interloper,” the story of a man on a Southern plantation at the present day, Miss Gordon, in the role of Jane Cameron, portrays the emancipated modern girl of the South. She relegates the old prejudices to the rubbish heap and starts to develop her old homestead into a paying proposition. How she succeeds is interestingly told in this romance.

Marriage Drama and Western Appear

On Triangle Schedule for May 1

A marriage drama, “Her Decision,” heads the Triangle May 12 program, offering J. Barney Sherry and Gloria Swanson in the leading roles. “Her Decision” is a story of sister’s sacrifice. The heroine enters into a loveless marriage to keep the secret of a sister’s disgrace. She loves a man without character and marries a man with character who loves her. As wife she falls in love with her husband.

Jack Conway directed “Her Decision,” which offers Gloria Swanson, former Keystone comedienne, in her second dramatic role. J. Barney Sherry is the other featured player.

“Wolves of the Border,” with Roy Stewart, is the second feature of the month of May 12. Alvin J. Neitz, who has seen fourteen Triangle features, including “Fast Endurin’” and “Paying His Debt,” wrote this play. The Mexican-United States frontier is the scene of the story, which depicts the conditions in that region as they exist today. With the march of progress over the prairies come new methods of cattle raising. A feud between the primitive cattlemen and the progressive newcomer is the result. The high point of the play is reached, it is said, when a three-cornered battle is fought between the feudists and the Mexican bandits.

The concluding feature of the week is a two-reel Keystone comedy, “Newspaper Clippings.” Francis McDonald, Triangle dramatic player who was recently seen in the mystery story “The Hand at the Window,” is a featured player in this production. Claire Anderson, former comedienne, who has appeared in several new Triangle feature plays, “The Answer,” and “Aille Paulette,” has the leading role.

Margarita Fisher in “Impossible Susan”

“Impossible Susan,” the feature that was written for the American star, Margarita Fisher, by Joseph Franklin Poland who is being filmed under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham is said to be one of the best vehicles that this vivacious and popular star has had since returning to the American Film Company. Her supporting company is unusually strong and includes such artists as Jack Mower, Lloyd Hughes, Beverly Travers, Hayward Mack, L. M. Wells and Anne Schaefer.

Lockwood Feature Coming May 27

Metro has set May 27 as the publication date for Harold Lockwood’s newest Metro starring vehicle, “Lend Me Your Name.” The picture is the first subject made by the Lockwood organization since their return to the West Coast after a long season of picture making in the East.

“Lend Me Your Name” is a farce comedy based on Francis Perry Elliott’s novel of that name and adapted for the screen by Fred J. Stallhofer and John B. Clymer. Mr. Stallhofer also directed it.
Minter, Fisher and Russell Appear

In Three Original Comedy Dramas

Feature productions now in course of preparation at the studios of the American Film Company, Inc., will furnish pictures starring Mary Miles Minter, Margarita Fisher and William Russell for Mutual's May schedule.

Mary Miles Minter's next picture, now in course of preparation, is "The Ghost of Rosy Taylor," by Josephine Dodge Bacon, which recently appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. It chronicles the amusing and interesting adventures of a young American girl returned after living abroad, who cannot find her wealthy relatives and to be self-supporting takes charge of the home of a fashionable American woman who is never at home in the day-time and who never sees her thoroughly competent chambermaid.

The rich woman's brother runs across Rosy and falls in love with her. There is scandal galore until Rosy's identity is discovered and she turns out to have better social standing and more money than her suitor.

Miss Fisher as Tomboy
Miss Margarita Fisher, the "Flapper" ingenuity has finished her latest picture, "A Square Deal," at the Santa Barbara studios and is repeating her success before beginning her next, which will be titled "Impossible Susan."

The latter story was written by Josephine Franklin Poland and was adapted for the screen by Elizabeth Mahoney. The plot involves Miss Fisher in a series of rollicking adventures that gives her special talent in that direction full sway, it is said.

The next offering of William Russell will be "Up Romance Road," which is written especially for Mr. Russell by Stephen Fox. The story is a comedy drama and is said to have an original plot which keeps Russell on the jump, from beginning to end. Mr. Fox also wrote "The Frameup," "High Play" and "Saddles of Truth" for Mr. Russell.

Tom Moore Supports Madge Kennedy

In Her Next "The Fair Pretender"

Tom Moore will again be seen as leading man in Madge Kennedy's fifth Goldwyn production, "The Fair Pretender," by Florence C. Bolles. Prominent in the support of the Goldwyn star are a number of other screen players of repute.

Robert Walker, well known for his juvenile characterizations, has an important role in "The Fair Pretender." Paul Doucet, who is in support of Miss Kennedy in "The Danger Game," is entrusted with another important role, "The Fair Pretender" is the third Madge Kennedy picture in which Doucet has taken part, he having also appeared in "Nerly Married."

Miss Kennedy made her first appearance in Goldwyn Pictures. She made her debut on the screen four years ago after a successful stage career. Her work with Frank Keenan in "Loaded Dice" won her much praise.

Gracie Stevens, Warner Walter, Emmett King and John Terry complete the cast.

Uncle Sam's Navy Shown in Film

Uncle Sam's fighting forces—the navy—will soon be presented by the Educational Films Corporation of America in a series of motion pictures called "Your Fighting Navy at Work and Play." The pictures are now being titled with the cooperation of Lieutenant Henry Reuterdaill, of the United States Navy. Mr. Reuterdaill's contributions to magazines on military and naval preparedness have attracted wide attention. He was brought into the department to help in the patriotic work, along with Lieutenant Wells Hawks and other writing experts.

The aim of the pictures is to show the ships and the service is in action today, keyed up to the highest efficiency in the struggle with the submarine, and likewise for the naval Armada that is bound to come with the German high sea fleet before the close of the war.

Bryant Washburn in "Kidder & Ko"

Following his success in Pathe's "Twenty-One" by George Randolph Chester, Bryant Washburn will next be seen in "Kidder & Ko" by John W. Grey. The scenarios for both of these pictures were written by Charles Sarver. "Kidder & Ko" will be published on June 16.

In case you don't know how to say it before, the Fox company is tipping everybody off that "Caillau" is pronounced "Ky-Yo," which is pure French and can not be Anglicized.

The first number of the combined Chicago Herald-Examiner contains this gem in its Photoplay column: "In connection with the Major, it may be mentioned that the Exhibitors Trade Review, the official organ of the country's exhibitors, has taken up the Major's blanketing tendencies," etc. We have heard it spoken of as the official organ of the M. Our correspondent adds: "We got a lot of attention, most of it coming from the colt and the general store is closed indefinitely."

J. R. M.
Constance Talmadge, Norma Talmadge And Alice Brady on Select's May List

Select Pictures Corporation announces three productions by Select stars for the month of May. These pictures are “The Lesson,” with Constance Talmadge, “De Luxe Annie,” with Norma Talmadge, and “The Ordeal of Rosetta,” with Alice Brady.

“The Lesson,” in which Lewis J. Selznick presents Constance Talmadge, is from an original story by Virginia Terhume Van de Water, and shows, it is said, on the screen in dramatic form the reason why many spirited women feel compelled to leave their husbands and carve a career for themselves. Constance Talmadge as a married woman is the novelty which this picture presents.

Charles Giblyn directed “The Lesson.” Miss Talmadge is supported by a cast of screen favorites, including Tom Moore, Walter Hiers, Herbert Hayes and Dorothy Green. The play, which is in five reels, is the sixth of Constance Talmadge’s Select Star Series, and follows her whimsical comedy, “Up the Road With Sally.”

Stage Play on Tour

Norma Talmadge in “De Luxe Annie” reaches picture patrons during the same theatrical season that the celebrated stage play of the same name. Edward Clark is still being shown on tour in theatres of the prominent cities. In the cast supports Miss Talmadge in “De Luxe Annie” are Eugene O’Brien, who is again seen as the star’s leading man; Frank Villis, who plays the role of the husband of an afflicted wife; has many tender scenes with Miss Talmadge; Edward Davis in the role of a detective, and Edna Hunter as a villager. Paul West prepared the scenario from Mr. Clark’s play, which in turn was adapted by Scammon Logan, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. Roland West directed the production.

“De Luxe Annie” is said to possess many scenes of unusual dramatic tension. One of these is a visualization of the thrilling escape over the ice, which, in the stage drama, the audience is asked to imagine from a word description. Miss Talmadge and her company made a special trip to Saranac Lake, N. Y., while the ice still held in order to secure these scenes.

In “The Ordeal of Rosetta” Alice Brady, it is said, provides an unusually clever photodrama in which the star is seen in dual characterizations. Miss Brady not only plays the roles of two sisters, but also the dream counterpart of one and the avenging spirit of the other.

Alice Brady in Dual Role

“The Ordeal of Rosetta” is an original story from the pen of Edmund Goulding, related scenes of a girl of gentle breeding who, born in Italy, is brought to New York by her father after an earthquake has destroyed her Sicilian home and presumably killed her sister. As Rosetta, Miss Brady, is seen first as a soft-hearted, stammering, determinedly fighting to support herself and her invalid father.

Clever work on the part of Emile Chautard, who directed the photo-play, coupled with some exquisite bits of photography by Jacques Bizet, shows Miss Brady in some of the comliest pictures she has ever presented on the screen, it is said.

Novel Lighting Effects in “Salome”

The motion picture realm is to see many innovations in lighting, as novel as they are effective, it is said, in “Salome,” Theda Bara’s forthcoming production.

It is said that although the Fox studios at Hollywood, Calif., where the picture was screened, are among the best equipped in the world, more than $12,000 was spent in installing the necessary apparatus for the scenes. Most of the new work appears in the action that takes place in the chamber of Herod. A score of artists and mechanics worked under the supervision of J. Gordon Edwards for seven weeks on the reproduction of the King’s throne-room.

Margaret Fisher in “A Square Deal”

The next production from the studios of the American Film Company, Inc., on the schedule of the Mutual Film Corporation, starring Margaret Fisher, is “A Square Deal,” scheduled for May 27. Production has been virtually completed at the Santa Barbara studios under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham.

Production of Features, Serials, Etc., Lends Busy Aspect to Pathé Studios

Production of Pathé features starring Frank Keenan, Fannie Ward, Bessie Love and Bryant Washburn is going forward with high speed in West Coast Studios, together with Baby Marie Osborne plays, “The Bells,” and the new serials, and comedies featuring Harold Lloyd and Toto.

At the Paralta studio, Frank Keenan is completing his forthcoming comedy, “More Trouble,” and is preparing to begin work in “The Sierra Sixties,” an adaptation from “The Lyon’s Mail,” a western melodrama.

“More Trouble” is said to be one of the most interesting experiments ever attempted, as it is a comedy in which each word is a picture. After a few days, Miss Washburn, who delights in having the best actors work with him, aided in the selection of the big cast for the picture.

Keenan Selects Cast for Play

Mr. Keenan is inclined toward the name of “Wilson” in national and moving picture affairs. After having Lois Wilson as his leading woman in “The Bells,” he selected her sister, Roberta Wilson, for the leading feminine role in “More Trouble.”

In “Sierra of the Sixties,” Mr. Keenan has an opportunity to play one of the most famous characterizations of his career, a role similar to that of Jack Rance, in “The Girl of the Golden West,” in which he played with an all-star cast including Blanche Bates. An excellent supporting cast has been chosen for this production, it is said.

Fannie Ward is nearing the completion of Sir William Young’s famous play, “A Japanese Nightingale,” under the direction of George Fitzmaurice. The picture is being made true to life in every respect, and Miss Ward has followed the oriental suggestion with certain variations of her own to get over” her thought to the audience.

New Bessie Love Film Begun

A northern New England village of the down east type has been built for the production of “Carolyn of the Corners,” in which Bessie Love appears. Exteriors and interiors have been constructed with careful adherence to detail and the picture is assured perfect “atmosphere,” it is said.

Bryant Washburn is busily at work on “All Wrong,” a farce comedy by Mildred Considine. He has just completed, “The Range Rider,” a drama of the Southwest. Mr. Washburn’s leading woman in “All Wrong” is Miss Mildred Davis.

Final conferences have been held on “Hands Up,” western serial that is to be made at Universal City for Pathé by Astra.

George Larkin Stars in Serial

“The Wolf-Faced Man,” another Pathé serial of romance, mystery and action, also is on its way at the Diadino Studio, under the direction of Stuart Paton. George Larkin, the leading man, is the partner of the leading woman, Horace R. Carpenter, True Boardman, Frederick Malatesta, William Quinn, Harry O’Connor and Ora Carew are playing the big parts.

At the Diadino Studio the Baby Marie Osborne company has just completed “The Soul of a Child,” and Director William Bertram is now cutting and putting the finishing touches on the film. The title of the next picture upon which Baby Marie will begin work within a few days is “The Coachman.”

At the Rolin Studios, Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels and Harry Pollard are hard at work on a new series of one-reel Lloyd comedies for Pathé. In another part of the studio Toto and his leading lady, Clarine Seymour, are turning out Toto comedies under the direction of Hal Roach.

Lois Weber Starts New Play

Lois Weber has started production at her Hollywood studios on “The Forbidden Box,” a forceful photodrama of the uncharted seas of life, written by E. V. Durling. Mildred Harris has the leading role.

Diana Allen in Diamond Comedy

“Wife Up in Society” is announced as the first Diamond production. It has been finished at the New Orleans studios of the Diamond Film Company, R. M. Chisholm, president, according to word which has reached General Film Company, and will soon be ready for distribution. Diana Allen is the featured star.

Fox "Baby Grands" Receive Letter From King of the Belgians

Jane and Katherine Lee, the William Fox "Baby Grand" stars, who have been lending their talent to many functions in behalf of the new Liberty Loan, just as they did on the others, received another incentive to continue their work last week. This tribute came in the unusual form of a letter written at the direction of King Albert of Belgium, from the field headquarters of the Belgian Army.

The famous children have a collection of missives many times their combined height, it is said, but it is doubted they prize any more highly than that from the ruler of the plucky little kingdom.

The letter reads:

General Head Quarters of the Belgian Army.

12th March, 1918.

Cabinet du Roi.

Dear Children:

Your Majesties have been written to you by the Misses Albert, from 28th December, 1917, and is delighted to hear of the kindness you have shown to our gallant allied soldiers.

The King is very pleased to have your charming portraits.

I am, Yours very truly,

Fr. de Johan,

Ch. du Cabinet du Roi a. i. The envelope is inscribed "Service du Roi des Belges." (in the Service of the King of the Belgians). It was Jane's idea that she and her sister write to King Albert and tell him the names of the several Belgian children the Lees have adopted, and of how they have distributed recruiting literature and of their other efforts on behalf of the fighters for freedom.

Frank Mayo Signs Contract

Frank Mayo, who has appeared with great success in many World Pictures as leading man for Ethel Clayton, Kitty Gordon and other World stars, has just signed a long-time contract with the World Film Corporation. He will be featured in several important forthcoming World productions. Mr. Mayo is now working in a new World picture bearing the title of "Tinsel," in which Kitty Gordon is starred.

A Trained Fly in New Minter Picture

We have educated animals of all sorts in the pictures, but Director Soman of the American Film Company studios at Santa Barbara, has given us something new, it is said, in the new Mary Miles Minter picture, "The Ghost of Rosy Taylor." He trained a fly to awaken Alan Forrest, who plays opposite Miss Minter. After repeated lessons, the fly lighted on the classic nose of M. Forrest according to schedule and he woke up just in time to capture the ghost that was apparently walking off with the family silver.

"It's a Dog's Life" Says One Exhibitor

"Showing Chaplin's"

There is one exhibitor in Greater New York who has sworn off playing any more of the new Chaplin comedies. He is Rudolph Sanders, proprietor of the Marathons Theatre on Park West, Brooklyn, N. Y., and the reason he has requested Carey Wilson to erase his name from the bookings is that the National Exhibitors' Exchange is because he has been fined by the fire department for breaking the law regulating attendance at his house.

On the evenings of April 29 and 30, fire inspectors found the patrons of the Marathon Theatre present in such overwhelming numbers to welcome Charlie Chaplin's return to the screen in "A Dog's Life," that they closed up the house and led Sanders away to court on the charge of violating several important provisions of the revised statutes relating to the prevention of fire and panic.

The crowd stormed the box-office, and crowded through the doors so fast that my ushers could not handle them," Sanders told the magistrate. "I took Chaplin's pictures away of all your orders but still they came. I hear it's a great picture, but I never got to see it myself, being too busy trying to keep the people out of the doors. I wouldn't handle another of the comedies on a bet. It's a dog's life. They're too much of a good thing.

Cartoonist for Famous Player

In order to provide special service newspapers and magazines, the W. Coast Publicity Department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has installed a cartoonist. This is not to make special cartoons of each star and production, but to prepare layouts and drawings as they are requested for newspapers and other publications. Dr. Morigeau, former cartoonist on the Gazette in Ohio, has been engaged for this work.

The Publicity Department of the W. Coast studios under the supervision of Kenneth McCarley, now consists of Adam Hull Shirk, Walter Vogues, writers; three photographers; musical composer, who supervises the incidental music scores; cartoonist and the necessary stenographic force.

Blinded by Lights

Louise Glau, the screen star, who just made her debut under the Paris banner in "An Alien Enemy," is suffering at her home in Los Angeles, Calif., from nervous exhaustion due to the severe strain on her eyes in continual work under the dazzling glare of studio lights while filming scenes of her second Paralta play, "Shackled."
Woodlawn Theatre
Formally Opened
By Andrew Karzas

More Than 8,000 Persons Attend Opening of New Playhouse

"Hearts or Diamonds?" first of the pictures from the studios of William Russell Productions Inc., was selected by Andrew Karzas, owner and manager of the $300,000 Woodlawn Theatre, Chicago, for opening night, April 28, and played to 8,000 people.

Mr. Karzas picked "Hearts or Diamonds?" after personally reviewing the offerings of every exchange and state right's office in Chicago. It was his choice from more than 20 productions submitted for his selection, and was selected most appropriate for the opening night of the new playhouse in the high class, south side Chicago neighborhood.

Premier Causes Comment

The successful opening of the new Woodlawn Theatre was the subject of comment among exhibitors and exchanges throughout the Chicago territory. Mr. Karzas paid careful attention to every detail of his opening.

Threatening labor trouble did not deter him from making every preparation for a big opening, nor prevent a record attendance. The house seats 2,000 persons and Mr. Karzas says that it was filled four times during afternoon and evening screenings.

An orchestra of fourteen musicians, a number of them members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, rehearsed the music under the able direction of Leon Bloom, using the special musical setting made for the drama by Joseph O'Sullivan, director of music service for the Mutual Film Corporation. The results obtained were wonderfully effective in synchronization of action and tonal effects. Compositions of Karganoff, Mozkowski, Schubert, Beethoven, Rachmaninoff and Borch were included in the musical setting, and Mr. Bloom received many congratulatory comments from critics present on the splendid results obtained.

In Residential District

The Woodlawn Theatre was built by Mr. Karzas at a cost of approximately $300,000, at 4800 South Woodlawn avenue, Chicago, in the Woodlawn residential district, not many blocks from the University of Chicago.

Mr. Karzas prepared for the opening a beautiful, two-colored announcement carrying pictures of the theatre and of the stars who will appear on its screen. He advertised profusely in the photo play directories of the Chicago newspapers, using maximum space, and with a huge electric sign erected on top of the building which blazes its messages for blocks both ways on Sixty-third street.

"Carmen of Klondike" Passes Censor Board
After Second Viewing

After the censor board had reviewed "Carmen of the Klondike," a second time at the request of D. M. Vandawalker, of the Doll-Van Film Corporation, which company controls the rights of Illinois and Indiana for the production, a white permit has been issued for showing the picture in Chicago.

The Doll-Van company expects prints of its latest purchase, "The Grain of Dust," sometime this week and exhibitors showings will be arranged as soon as possible. It is taken from David Graham Phillip's novel of the same name.

Metro Pictures Corporation
Presents "Revelation"
On White Permit

"My Own United States," the William Frohman production featuring Arnold Daly, was presented at the Playhouse Theatre, Sunday, May 5, under the auspices of the Metro Picture Corporation.

The playhouse is the third of Chicago's downtown houses which has instituted a picture policy for the summer season, the Chicago office of Metro having contracted for a four weeks' stay.

Following "My Own United States,"--"Revelation," the production starring Nazimova over which there has been so much controversy with the Chicago censor board will be presented on a white permit.

Ye Knight Funkhouser
Doeth Soundly Berate
Diana in the Nude

"By my trusty shears," quoth ye knight Sir Mettitius Funkhouser, guardian of ye public morals, as he raised his trusty steed with a suddenness that caused his mount's knees to come together with the rapidity, if not the resultant clacking, of castanets.

"What assails mine eye in ye flam ing poster?" he thundered as he eyed his worthy cavalcade. "Go varlet and ascertain it 'tis not Diana in the nude. Gadzooks, 'tis but ten days since I warned 'The Sower' and now I needs new gird my loins and go forth to more battle!"

"Sir," spake the returned varlet, "tis none other than Diana in the nude and is used by yon rascally showman to lure our good townsfolk into his vile lair."

"By the word of the prophet," thumped the virtuous knight in righteous indignation, his armor rattling like four dimes and a buffalo nickel in an empty cash register, "I shall fear my power. He shall lose his license. Forward men while I return to my stronghold to draw up an indictment against him."

And ye good knight clattered away followed by his cavalcade in a chorus of clatters. And thus in ye province of Chicago are ye good townsman kept morally clean through ye mighty efforts of ye knight of the shears.

Yeggs Crack Theatre Safe

Cracksmen forced entrance into the Strand Theatre, 3031 Lincoln avenue, last Tuesday night, and after blowing the safe escaped with more than $400. The intruders gained entrance through a rear window of the playhouse and exploded a charge of dynamite, demolishing the lock of the safe. The police have, as yet, made no arrests in the matter.

Chicago Man Hears
From Cousin About War Zone Theatres

Phil Solomon of the George Kleine office is in Seattle on leave from Ambrey M. Simmons, a cousin, telling of his experiences in operating a motion picture theatre at Poperinge, Belgium, where much of Van Peeck, which has come into such prominence during the recent fighting.
Mr. Simmons states that the American product is received with the biggest favor in that section. Some of the American pictures which have been unusually successful are "The Lad and the Lion," "The Country God Forgot," "Old Folks at Home," "The Good, Bad Man" and "The Lamb."
Despite the chaotic conditions sur-rrounding Paris, Mr. Simmons states the cinema industry is unusually bright and the motion picture theatres are doing good business.

PERSONALS

"By George"

Old friend "Funkie" just recovering from the shock he received when viewing "The Sower" suffered a second jolt this week when a poster of a nude woman assailed his eye. Now he wants the new exhibitors in town.
Some think the human form divine and others—well others think like Funkie.
Us? We don't think anything about it.
We got to get these notes out.

Ralph O. Proctor, division manager of Pathe, now on the first swing of his territory since his appointment, will probably not be back in Chicago for about a month. If we were Ralph we'd have a berth built in our flat so we'd feel at home when off the road.

E. Thomas Batty, president-elect of the Chicago A. E. A., returned to Chicago this week from the Pacific coast.
His next jump is to Cleveland, we are informed, and then back to Chicago for a nice long stay E. T.?

A number of the local exhibitors are going to take in the convention of the Northwest Exhibitors Association to be held in Seattle, May 7 and 8.
Joseph Hopp will head one party and Louis Frank another. They're expecting a big time and from what information we have concerning the event they'll get it.

That bird who threw the bomb at the Woodlawn theatre is our idea of what King Lardner thinks of "a left hander."
As a bomb thrower he was a good passenger on the elevated.

F. J. Flaherty of the local Four squares exchange spent last week in Minneapolis. Outside of the news value of this announcement it was an awful blow to us. His absence kept our correspondent in the office and as a result he didn't correspond.

"What's new" queried us approaching
T. W. Chatburn, newly appointed manager of the local Vitagraph office, this being our way of trying to find out some news that chatburn, "My hat, quoit he. The atmosphere of Pittsburgh may be dense, but that don't affect the mental efficiency of the inhabitants.

Sam Schaefer, owner of Chicago's only independent projection room, got busy here last week and the dark room didn't stop. Fresh paint, carpets, screen cleaned and everythin'.
That boy will be installing electric fans next and serving ice cream and cake.

There's one exchange manager in this town who, if he don't quit making dates with us to see pictures and then hike away without leaving orders to run the same, is going to get writ up in this Here column. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Say, there's nothing to that about McOath representing a fountain pen company. He's still with the Motion Picture News. The sign painter ain't found time to take the old name off the door of his new office at 1096 Consumers Building. THAT is such a salesman though that he is liable to sell pens until they do take the name off the door.

Rogers, Pathé, peculiar, chap. Wot?
Passed up a banquet to go home and sleep. Now if we all pass up our meals and sleep instead of think of the saving there would be in food. But what do we do? We're trying to start a big movement—there's so many knokers around these days.

W. R. Van Cortland is the new assistant manager of the Vitagraph exchange.
We haven't met you yet, Van, but we're coming in some day if you'll promise not to joke with us like the manager did.

"Carmen of the Klondike," aided by D.
M. Vanaudwalker and the Dol-In staff, started off with a bang. Here's a few of the big ones to sign the dotted line for this worth while production, Paladium and Balaban and Katz. Andrew Karzas for the new Woodlawn and Schoenstatt for the newest of his chain, the Atlantic. They were just waiting for Funkie to O. K. it.

Gentlemen, meet Mrs. Balaban. What? you hadn't heard about it? Sure Abe Balaban of Balaban and Katz. He isn't saying much about it, but we got it straight news of the exchange.
Outs. Our congrats to the happy couple.
We hope they do ree well.

F. A. Bartlestein of the Gold Theatre, 3411 West Twelfth street, is wearing a smile a mile wide, so to speak. Reason?
Business good and getting better every day. Yet some folks will tell you there's nothing in a name.

Louis Tupper of the Hermosa Theatre lost out on a big feed the other night. He says that he was notified too late and adds plaintively that the boys never fail to notify him when there is a game of poker going on. Well, they let you in on something, don't they Louie?

On the Firin' Line

If all those summoned to the army fared as well as Dell Goodman of the Pathe force, who leaves for Jefferson Baracks with Capt. Tom Morrison, the return would have an easy time with the war budget. A few of the things given Dell by well-wishing friends are an old gold Masonic ring with diamond setting military brushes and comb, shaving outfit and a wrist watch.

At a dinner given in his honor at the Hotel Morrison last Friday night the following attended: Ray Florine, William Bremner, M. A. Salkin, N. Joseph Clyde Elliott, J. Foley, Harry Hochstader, George Ferguson, Max Hyman and Privates J. Cahill and J. Hammon.
The latter three spoke on their experiences in the war. Si Greiver of Greiver and Hr.
acted as toastmaster.

From the way the boys looked the next morning, something tells us that the festivities were regretfully called off since the starters from the Firin' Line perform their daily tasks. In parting Dell, good luck to you and yours.

One of Universal's best liked salesmen, Jack Meredith, leaves the ranks this week to devote his talents to the interest of Ascher Brothers. From Meredith of the Kenwood theatre, which will be opened to the public Saturday night this week. Sure, keep on calling him

"Jack," he can't go that mister stuff.

John Richer, formerly of the Triangle sales force of Buffalo, is now sell ing for Thomas, Van, for things in this department. Formerly in the Thir
Third Liberty loan went over in that section of the country. John's job must be about as hard as meeting drinkers in the well known hares.

Will Brimmer broke away from the Paramount-Artcraft aggregation in a flight to take a job for Pathé in Hollywood. Everybody else over there is doing well, Will B. No, I ain't copyrighted. Spring it on him if you want to.

Sometimes we think if it wasn't for La Vene and Salkin we would be up against it for things in this department.
La Veen has been good copy for some time, but he didn't do anything this week. Not so with Morrie.

He moved this week from Vernon and Sixty-fourth street to Boul. Mich, and Forty-seventh street. They didn't hear on the job five minutes before it was evident to the ever alert Salkin that the men were hired by the hour. Well, Morrie slipped the coon driver 122 at the head of the line. The total bill was 818. We don't know how much he saved, but he's satisfied, and when it comes to financing, Salkin could make money out of light pictures.

L. J. Pollard Rounds Out Eight Years Of Comedy Making
Luther J. Pollard, president and general manager of the Ebony Film Corporation, Chicago, who has but recently completed negotiations with the General Film Company to handle the products of the company's studio, has been more or less active in the motion picture business for nearly eight years. He has the distinction of being the first to produce successful films of negro actors. The aims and ideals back of the Ebony corporation are embodied in a statement from Mr. Pollard:

Ebony was making definite plans for comedy making more than a year ago when we were releasing in the state rights—and with our new connection we feel that we are rapidly forging ahead. Photoplay rights on stories written by the best authors are being purchased by our scenario editor, Bob Horner, who has been instructed to go the limit in securing the best available material.

"This is but one step forward in the line of Ebony policy. It is but one step forward in the progress of the photoplay industry, and giving the exhibitors what they want. We have been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Horner to manage our scenario department. He not only is an expert continuity writer, but is a picture executive, thoroughly experienced in all branches of the industry. He has what is known as the 'picture eye' and has prepared all our current subjects, which are: 'He Ran for Mayor,' 'The Bully,' 'Dat Minstrel Man' 'Hercy the Mummy Mumbled,' 'A Reckless Rover,' etc., which are soon to be released to the various General Film exchanges."

"Our negro comedians are really making Ebony Comedies laughable, and the encouragement we are receiving by the unexpected bookings has compelled us to engage a second company of laughmakers to supply the demand. With our production manager A. B. Heath, keeping things humming at the studio, and with our directors, Ralph G. Phillips and Charles N. David, shooting scenes at top speed, we are able to keep up with the demand for our comedies. The public and exhibitors seem to want lively action, and we are meeting this demand, and with a real story to back up the action. Today ninety-five percent of the scenes in a slapstick comedy must be funny to the eye as well as the brain."

Petrova Has Screen School
Madame Petrova, who now has her own studio, having recently rented the Bacon and Backer building on West 35th street, New York City, for the exclusive use of the Petrova Picture Company, has had one of the office rooms enlarged and turned into a small projection room for the purpose of inaugurating a daily school of screen acting for the members of the Petrova Picture Company.

One of the new DeVry portable commercial projectors has been installed, and each day, when the afternoon's work is over, Madame assembles the pupils for the scenes, which were taken the previous day on the screen. Each individual's acting is then frankly discussed and criticized, but always with a view to constructive rather than destructive criticism.

Vitagraph that we're of the opinion that he made a wise step in taking them with him. He thinks so, too.

Here are some of the new faces in the Vitagraph office: Frank W. Redfield, O. W. Kappelman and L. M. Cobb. The latter is in charge of the sales promotion department.

Davies of the Triangle office who has been selling these productions in the city, has been transferred to the Wisconsin territory and will cover this district, for both the Chicago and Minneapolis offices.

A. C. Eckardt, formerly of the Washington office of the Kleine System, is now assigned to the local force. He will cover Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin for Kleine. Welcome, A. C., it's easier to get a room in Chicago than it is in Washington and our town has a lot of other things in its favor.

Walter Hickey, formerly salesman for the U. S. Exhibitors Corp., is now managing the Grand Theatre in Greer Bay, Wis., for Henry Goldman.

George West made his maiden trip into the Wisconsin territory last week in behalf of the Billy West comedies for the Bee Hive Exchange. George made one costly mistake. He strayed into the Toy Building for a short session was relieved of $26 via the African gold route. You can't convince George they were toying with him; he knows by the feeling of that flat wallet that they meant it.

"Chub" Florine had his innings last week and in a two day session rimmer the boys for $800. Sure, he put the money into Liberty bonds. Didn't you hear the whistles blowing last Saturday morning. It was that last push by "Chub," Dave Forgan, George Reynolds, O. G. Ascione and the rest o' the bunch that put Chicago "over th' top."

Eddie Fitzgerald says that the reason the barbers are wanting to raise the price of haircuts is that there are more barbers than haircuts. Sounds reason able. Maybe he has unconsciously stumbled on the cause of the whole agitation.

Milton Simon, of the Chicago sales force of United Picture Theatres, Inc left this week for Indianapolis, where he will take charge of that office for the company. Mr. Simon has been in the game more than nine years and is well known in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

Hard Hit by New Duty Imposed

Tax Increase From Two Cents to Five Cents Per Lineal Foot Adds Thirty Dollars to Cost of Reel

Great consternation was created in Canadian moving picture circles on May 1 by the announcement before the House of Commons at Ottawa by Hon. A. K. McLean, acting Minister of Finance, that the duty on moving picture films imported from the United States would be increased from two cents to five cents per lineal foot. This duty will apply to all "positives" of standard size imported for projection in moving picture theatres, it was announced. The move came absolutely without warning and was totally unexpected in view of the great burden of taxation already shouldered by exchanges and exhibitors, not to mention the Provincial war tax on admissions in almost every Province of the country.

As soon as details were available, the film interests in all parts of the country decided to combat the measure. An emergency meeting was held in Toronto by leading officials of the distributing companies and one thousand telegrams were sent out to all exhibitors and branch exchange managers. Every man in the film business was urged to get busy with influential citizens in order to prevail upon members of the Federal Parliament to rescind the proposed tax. The official telegram which was signed by the "Exchange Managers of Canada," reads as follows:

"Wire and have your lawyer, banker and other influential citizens wire your member of Parliament at Ottawa to oppose the imposition of the new duty of five cents per foot on films. This increase of 150 per cent upon present duty is a burden that the moving picture business cannot stand. In view of the fact that the increase per reel averages about ten per cent, this terrible tax impost on films cannot be justified and, if imposed, means the ruination of the business. Film business is being taken at Ottawa now, so lose no time wiring your member."

Add Three Cents Per Foot

Canadian film companies will pay no less than $38 in duties and taxes on every reel of 1,000 feet, if the proposed tariff is imposed. The former import duty was $10 per reel, but officials of the industry believe that the new tax will result in an increase of $38 per reel, and $20 per cent, or $200 per reel, which makes a total of $38 per reel for all taxes and duties. This is a terrific assessment on an article valued at $80, according to Government valuation.

Various exchange managers have declared that they desire most of all to kill the tax proposal rather than merely pass it along to the exhibitors. Increased taxation of this kind will undoubtedly affect the whole business to such an extent it may become unprofitable. A number have declared import of new films into the country will be greatly reduced if the duty is increased and, in this way, the very purpose of the move, namely to secure more revenue, will be more than offset.

The statement is freely made in Canadian film circles that the ten cent theatre is now a thing of the past and that the minimum admission price will undoubtedly be 15 cents. This move is not desired, however, because it will have a tendency to restrict the attendance at theatres.

Various methods have already been suggested by exchange managers and others for the assimilation of the new "National obligation." One suggestion is that, if the increased duty is enforced, the usual practice of paying an extra charge of fifteen cents every time he makes a booking for any subject or re-rent. Another manager has already indicated that all existing contracts will be cancelled in order to make arrangements for the covering of the new cost, which has come unexpectedly.

To Readjust Prices

A great many film men in Canada have been busy with pencil and paper trying to figure out an entirely new schedule of rentals based on costs and taxes, including duties. These men state that the number of working days in a year, for all purposes, is 250, and the life of a film rental is 250 days. It is also figured that there are generally about fifteen customers for a film rental, and that the life of a film is 250 days. It is also illustrated that there are generally about fifteen customers for a film rental, and that the life of a film is 250 days.

The Sunday Lid is on in Sherbrooke.

Secretary A. H. Beaulne of the Montreal Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association, has opened an employment bureau in his office. No fees are charged those who seek positions or who secure help through the bureau.
Catholic Church Gives Motion Picture Shows

A distinct innovation in the annals of the moving picture realm probably was the adoption of the film form of entertainment for a function in a Roman Catholic Church of Winnipeg, Manitoba, recently. The very unusual point of the event was that the pictures were shown in the church proper, the canvas screen being stretched across the chancel and in front of the altar. The projection machine was placed in a temporary booth in the choir loft at the front of the church.

The scene of the extraordinary show was at St. Edward's Church, Arlington and Notre Dame avenue. Performances were given on three evenings, April 18 to 20, with a children's matinee on Saturday afternoon. The admission was 25c for adults and 10c for children. Several reels of pictures were shown, the feature being "From the Manger to the Cross." The two other subjects were travel pictures. Appropriate music for the films was supplied by the large organ by Henri Bourgeault, the church organist.

Vancouver House Has Orchestra

The management of the Columbia Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., has decided to pay considerable more attention to the musical entertainment of its showings. The theatre, theatre, of five pieces has been increased to eight musicians under the direction of Frank Nichol. Prices of admission have been fixed at 3c, 15c and 20c, with box seats 30c. The new policy was started with the presentation of Clara Kimball Young in "Magda" during the three days starting April 20.

Manager Graham of the Avening Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, recently donated all receipts of a matinee performance to the Red Cross Fund. The show was held under the auspices of the Rotary Club and the attraction was "For France." A packed house helped the good work along.

Starting with the week of April 29, Manager Clarence Robson of the Strand Theatre, Toronto, one of the big downtown houses, opened his theatre at 12 o'clock instead of 11 o'clock. Announcement was made that the change of opening hour was made to save electric current. No official request had been received from the Canadian Power Controller, Sir Henry Drayton, to do so, and the decision was reached voluntarily by Manager Robson. The last performance each evening will be started at 9:30.

The will of the late John Kreitner of Buffalo shows that the deceased held considerable stock in Shea's Theatre, Toronto, and the Hippodrome, Toronto. The late Mr. Kreitner held 767 shares of the capital stock of Shea's Theatre, valued at $34,350; 150 preferred shares in the capital stock of the Hippodrome, amounting to $15,000, and 500 shares of common stock in the latter theatre, valued at $35,350; 100 preferred shares in the projection room of the Strand Theatre, Toronto. Sam Wells, vice-president of the Toronto Kelvin, has succeeded President Dentelbeck at the Allen Theatre. Wells was formerly at the Crown Theatre, Gerrard and Broadview Avenue.

The children of some dozen orphan institutions in Toronto were the guests of the Allen Theatre at a special matinee on Wednesday morning, April 25, for a presentation of the current attraction, "Blue Bird." About 1,200 children were brought to the theatre in automobiles and private street cars for the show. The arrangements were made through Mrs. L. B. Hamilton, of Toronto, who has interested herself in this charitable work. This lady is with the Local Council of Women. This was the third special children's matinee at the Allen Theatre for this feature within a week.

Little Miss Rita Halgrith of Toronto, nine-year-old daughter of Mr. Halgrith of the Regent Theatre, has made a name for herself as an artiste because of her ability in reciting Kipling's "Last We Forget" at local theatres where the Metro feature of the same title has been presented. Rita Halgrith followed Rita Jolivet at the Regent Theatre during the first run of the picture in that house and she also appeared at the Madison Theatre for its second run during the week of April 29.

The Exchange Managers' Association of Toronto has decided to affiliate with the Exchange Managers' Association of Montreal in order to co-operate in various movements. A joint meeting of the two organizations has been proposed.

William Allen, formerly attached to the Toronto Kelcine office, has joined the staff of Superfeatures, Limited, Toronto, Canadian distributors of many state-of-the-art features, Four-Square releases, and several serials, including "The Eagle's Eye."

The Midway Theatre, Montreal, far famed because of its lobby displays, has been further enhanced by the installation of a complete set of brass poster frames and fixtures.

Select Pictures Corp.
Joins N. A. M. P. I.

The Select Pictures Corporation has filed application as a distributor member of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, making thirteen distributing companies which are now affiliated with this important branch of the national body.

The producer membership originally taken out by Lewis J. Selznick has been transferred to the Select Pictures Corporation, so that the Select Company is now on a par with the other big companies, including Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Universal Film Mfg. Co., Pathé Exchange, Inc., World Film Corporation, Fox Film Corporation, Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, Metro Pictures Corporation, Vitagraph Company of America, all of which are represented in both the producer and distributor branches of the organization. Morris Kohn, treasurer, will represent the Select Pictures Corporation in the producer and distributor divisions. The First National Exhibitors Circuit has also joined the distributors' division.

Rothacker Film Co.,
In Celebration of Eighth Anniversary

The Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company is this month celebrating its eighth anniversary. The company was organized in May, 1910, by W. R. Rothacker, who is president of the concern and from the rapid strides the organization has made there is many reason for the celebration.

Considerable activity has marked the personnel of the company. E. F. Lessner of the advertising department has resigned and will join the National army at Camp Grant.

John Hahn, assistant secretary of the Rothacker company, is making an extended trip through the West in the interests of the company. He will spend several days in Denver at the studio of the National Film Corporation and then go to Salt Lake City, visiting the members of the First National Exhibitor Circuit there. He expects to return to Chicago about the 25th of the month.

E. O. Blackburn of the sales department has returned from an eastern trip where he was directing the production of a number of multiple reel industrial pictures. Jack Byrne of the studio department is in Minneapolis co-operating with Major Schmidt in the production of a picture which will be presented by the United States Fuel Administration.

President Waterson R. Rothacker has just returned from New York, where he attended a convention of the First National Exhibitors Circuit.

Ebony Players in "Spooks"

The colored players producing the Ebony Comedies, appear in "Burlesque Romance," a lively current film published by General Film Company. Following this will come "Spooks" which is said to be filled with some of the most characteristic humor ever seen in pictures. Work on the second block of six stories is now well under way at the Chicago studios of the Ebony Film Company.
Naught to Protest,

Theatre Men Don't;

Everybody Pleased

Los Angeles, Cal.—The Motion Picture Theatre owners had a strong representation before the members of the council finance committee to protest against the proposed new license fees on their business. It required only a few minutes to convince them that there had been a serious misunderstanding on their part and that so far as the large majority of the owners were concerned there was nothing for them to protest against.

When they learned that with few exceptions their fees would be smaller than at present the situation took on a different complexion and they left in improving humor.

The new schedule is on a sliding scale, being 3 cents a seat for houses charging 10 cents admission and more, and 2 cents a seat for those whose admission fee is 9 or less. In most cases this works out to the advantage of the picture houses. A few large theatres in the downtown district who are paying straight license fee of $35 a month will be hit pretty hard, but in the main the fees will be lower.

There was some protest from the 3 or 10 cent houses on the ground that they were required to pay as much as a 20-cent house their burden would be inequitable, and the members of the committee decided to make a special provision for this class of theaters.

Exchange Managers

And Film Inspectors

Come to Agreement

Dallas, Texas—Conditions, which, for time, threatened a walk-out of film inspectors in the exchanges of this city, has been averted through a meeting of exchange managers and representatives of the inspectors. The trouble arose over the terms of the girls to form an organization. They were at once notified by the change managers that no such body could be recognized. They then threatened to walk out.

The meeting was executive in nature. It is understood that the situation is reviewed thoroughly and that the girls were convinced that to permit to form an organization such as they intended would be futile. "We told them," said Ned E. Sepinet, manager for the managers, "that their present working conditions and pay were bad and produced figures to support the claim. They work from 6 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the evening and receive 12.50 a week, which is more than is paid some girls on other lines of business. We showed them that they had nothing to gain by organizing a union and told them that they would not recognize the organization."

Indianapolis Film

Exchange Protest

Fire Prevention Law

Indianapolis, Ind.—Objectors to provisions of the proposed fire prevention ordinance now in the hands of the finance committee of the city council, were heard at a special meeting of this committee at the city hall last week. This ordinance, which was introduced by request of Mayor Jewett at the last regular meeting of the council, provides for the establishment of a fire prevention bureau for Indianapolis with property owners to work out a city-wide system of fire prevention. Standardized methods applicable to every store, residence, business and industry are to be introduced, according to the provisions of the ordinance.

Sourhier Heads Objectors

A delegation of motion picture men, headed by Manager Sourhier, president of the Keystone motion picture theatre on North Illinois street, comprised the principal objectors at the meeting. They are objecting to the provision of the proposed ordinance which provides that no film exchange may maintain headquarters in a building wherein the public congregate. Mr. Sourhier has leased the upstairs quarters of his building to a film exchange and the passage of the ordinance containing the present provisions will entail a heavy loss.

The motion picture men, at a conference, drew up several amendments which were introduced at the meeting. While no definite agreement was reached between the opposing factions, it is thought that the word "hereafter" will be inserted in the motion picture clause in order to harmonize with present conditions.

Survey of Exchanges

Following the meeting the members of the committee, together with the objectors, made a survey of several local film exchanges.

The results of this investigation will be reported at the regular meeting of the council Monday evening.

Baltimore Exhibitor

Wins Legal Battle

Against Film Corp.

Baltimore, Md.—Benjamin S. Chester, owner of a local motion picture theatre, successfully defended a suit brought against him by the K. E. S. E. exchange of New York City, for payment for a film destroyed in Mr. Chester's playhouse.

The company, it was set forth in the bill, furnished Mr. Chester with a film known as "Little Shoes," which was made in five reels, measuring 3,000 feet. During the showing of the film at the theatre it broke in half and coming in contact with an electric light, 1,500 feet of the picture was destroyed. The company sued for $150.

Judge Heusler, in the superior court, ruled that a liberal construction of the terms of picture-exhibiting contracts of this character exempt the owners of the moving picture shows from any responsibility for injury or damage to the films entrusted to them which is not directly due to negligence on their part.

Exhibitor Arrested for Operating Minus License

Youngstown, Ohio.—Film shows conducted by Albert Sofron in his Albert street theater have been closed and Sofron placed under arrest charged with operating without a state license and in violation of state fire laws. Sofron gave bond for release to await hearing. A witness said he found conditions in the theater dangerous to the persons who went into it. Sofron, it is alleged, was operating the projector himself, without having a license for such work.
Women Hysterical When Film Magazine Explodes

Fall River, R. I.—The audience of the Savoy Theatre, this city was thrown into a panic and a wild rush for seats followed the explosion of a film magazine in the second balcony of the playhouse. Several women fainted and others became hysterical.

Stephen Rose, one of the operators, was the only person injured. He was seriously cut on both hands. The projection booth was partly destroyed. The flames were extinguisued in a few minutes. An investigation as to the cause of the explosion has been put under way by the state police. The house is owned by William Durenne and is considered one of the best in this city.

Circle Theatre Head Visits Goldwyn Plan

Although A. L. Block, the big Indian apartment magnate, is president of the popular and nationally-known Circl Theatre in that city, he had never until last week visited a motion picture studio. For „seeing the movies from the inside” he selected the star who ranks as one of his greatest personal favorites—Mr. Marsh, of Goldwyn.

Accompanied by Mrs. Block and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Mann, of Albany, N. Y., the Indianapolis visitor put in an entire afternoon at the big Goldwyn plan in Fort Lee, saw Mae Marsh at work under the direction of Hobart Henley, made his favorite star and appeared a delighted with her in the flesh as he had been by her on the screen. He photographed with her as a souvenir of the occasion.

Mr. Block found Samuel Goldfis waiting for him at the studio and was then shown through the entire plant by A. Lehr, the general manager of the company’s Fort Lee activities and showed much interest in the various details of picture manufacture.

Clever Touches in Billie Rhodes Comedy

Billie Rhodes, it is said, does some clever bits of acting, and Cullen Landii and Lilian Hamilton, playing with her in Strand-Mutual comedies, help her over some extraordinarily funny situations in “Her Terrible Time,” the Strand offering on the Mutual Schedule for May 14.

The story is said to be a happy little farce, snappy and original, with a small touch of the risque, not enough to offend, but just sufficient to intensify the interest.

Billie, as Mary, gets caught in Jack’ bedroom on his unexpected return from a business trip and when Jack’s family walks in her announce that they have been married. After they have extended their blessing Jack and Mary leave the window to find the nearest preacher that Jack’s story may be made good.

in "A Dog's Life"

First of the long-awaited $1,000,000 comedy series.

A three-reel cataract of laughter that will flood any theatre in the universe with patronage, and sweep away the grim cares of life on a tidal wave of mirth.

Charlie, the world’s beloved vagabond, and his faithful jass-hound, Scraps, will bring tears of joy to the eyes of the most confirmed grouch who ever wore a frown.

The captions and sub-titles of "A Dog’s Life" have been translated into eight foreign languages within the past month, making this funniest of all Chaplin comedies available for fans wherever films are shown.

"TARZAN of the APES"

The screen's supreme adventure story.

A real superpicture filled with all the primitive strength and wild beauty of the jungles in which most of its scenes are laid.

The only motion picture that played to S. R. O. on Broadway, New York, despite lightless nights and heatless days last February.

A masterpiece of the art of story-telling, so novel in conception and so grippingly presented that every person with eyes to see—no matter what his sex, age, race, religion or station in life—will find himself a captive to its sweeping vigor and exotic charm.

One of the few productions that will justify any exhibitor going the limit in announcing it to his patrons.

PETROVA PICTURES

A series of superb dramatic screen plays built around the personality of Madame Olga Petrova, whose beauty and creative intelligence have given her a world-wide following.

"Daughter of Destiny," her first release of the year. A story of international intrigue shown against a background of vivid contrasts. How an American girl conquered a group of unscrupulous European diplomats by her brains and beauty. One of the most artistically presented productions of this or any other season.

"The Light Within," second Petrova picture. A big human document done with the master-touch that only genius can impart. The life-drama of a woman whose ability as a scientist arouses the cold fury of her husband's jealousy.

Herbert Brenon's massive production of the overthrow of the Russian autocracy.

With Iliodor, the former confidant of Rasputin, whose assassination sounded the death knell of absolutism in the Empire of the Knout.

History told with the overpowering force of great fiction.

The kind of a romance that Alexander Dumas might have written for the screen if he were alive.

Superb direction, acting that runs the gamut of human emotion, unusual photography, and a box-office appeal that marks it as one of the outstanding triumphs of motion picture art.

A picture that is going to live as long as the people of the world are interested in the tremendous cataclysm that has overwhelmed the crumbling thrones of the Old World.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW
"A mighty good attraction for all first-class theatres."
Support Move to Oust Funkhouser

CHICAGO has been distinguished before the country for some time for its idiotic censorship scheme. Under the present system one man—and a police officer at that—has held imperial sway over the destinies of every picture brought to Chicago for exhibition.

The gross inconsistencies of this plan finally has become apparent to all, and expressing a well-defined public opinion there has been introduced in the City Council of Chicago an ordinance stripping the notorious Funkhouser of his czar-like authority and investing the final decision regarding any picture in the opinion and decision of a majority of members of the censor board.

Concerted action in the Council to remove Maj. Funkhouser has been inevitable for some time, both because of the injustice of the existing scheme and also because Funkhouser as overlord of films in Chicago has evidenced such bad judgment in the censoring of propaganda pictures that he has been made the target for attacks from various sources, even including George Creel, presidential appointee to the chairmanship of the Committee on Public Information.

Censorship in any and every form is bad—unreasonable, inequitable and un-American and it exists in its worst form when placed under the jurisdiction of a man of the Funkhouser type. The arbitrary and unreasonable rulings of the Funkhouser outfit breed contempt and distrust and instead of working for the law and order of the community, have an opposite effect.

The proposed ordinance is aimed to ameliorate a deplorable situation and in view of this it should receive the support of all who value the best interests of the community and who desire to see the freedom and safety of the motion picture protected. Already the newspapers of Chicago have endorsed the plan for readjusting the censorship method and many men and women prominent in civic and educational work favor the elimination of Funkhouser and the institution of a majority rule for the censor board.

The entire motion picture trade is vitally interested in the move to rationalize the Chicago censorship method. Exhibitors in Chicago have suffered greatly through the scheme and there is practically no producer who has not at some time or other been made the victim of Funkhouser's autocratic methods.

The trade should not regard this as simply a problem for Chicago because the results of the move to displace Funkhouser will have a great bearing on the entire censorship question. Chicago has been and is a stronghold for the most iniquitous type of censorship and whatever progress is made here for its elimination will set a favorable precedent for similar action elsewhere.

The entire support of the trade should at once be marshaled behind the proposed ordinance. Companies that have suffered at the hands of Funkhouser should come to the front now, confer with the aldermen who are supporting this measure and add their influence to a readjustment of the measure in order that they may not again be subjected to the expensive course of taking their cases into court in order that they may obtain justice for their pictures.

Funkhouser must go and the opportunity to accomplish this desirable end is at hand.
Petty Deceit

The petty deceit of the misleading title may be productive of a certain profit for the producer for a time, but it is definitely and immediately disastrous for the exhibitor.

This practice of giving a picture a title which in no way applies to the subject itself, but is used because it is daring or suggestive, seems to be gaining in popularity. Word of some unearned profit through this subterfuge evidently has spread about the trade and several producers are vying with one another in the selection of titles which are just within the law, yet are backed up by pictures that are utterly innocuous.

Looked at squarely, this is a plain case of misrepresentation of goods. The exhibitor, too often unfamiliar with the subject he is offering his patrons, becomes a party, unknowingly, to the perpetration of a fraud. While the public occasionally may enjoy being fooled, it does not enjoy being buncoed. And in many cases what ordinarily might have been passed as just ordinary entertainment causes sharp indignation with a resultant apathy toward anything the particular theatre has to offer.

This matter of falsely titling pictures with a view of attracting sensational interest is one that exhibitors should look into very carefully. To bring such a picture to their theatres is offering deliberate affront to their intelligent patrons. Many theatre-goers elect to view pictures merely from their titles because titles as a general rule are suggestive in a general way of the nature of pictures.

Naturally when a picture carries a title which is a deliberate bid for sensational interest and is not backed up by a consistent story the result is a most unsatisfactory one for the patron.

Misleading titles are a reversion to the methods of the circus fakir of days gone by. Such a practice discourages the confidence of the public and presents the exhibitor in the guise of a charlatan. No exhibitor who values the good will of his patronage can afford to run a picture entitled “The Girl Who Went Wrong,” which may be based upon the story of a girl who boarded the wrong railroad train for her destination.

Stormy Session Marks Minneapolis Convention

Attempt of Insurgents to Smash Organization Slate Frustrated
In Hot Fight—By-Laws Jeopardize Legality of Election—President Gilosky Refuses to Seek Reelection

BY GEORGE CLIFFORD.

Minneapolis, Minn.—(Staff Correspondence)—Patrician addresses and pleas for harmony and a united front worked with telling effect at the Minneapolis convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors Corporation this week and made an attempt to elect an insurgent ticket and a reported movement toward withdrawal of the corporation from the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America.

The convention was held in the West Hotel in Minneapolis, last Tuesday and Wednesday, and more than one hundred exhibitors of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin and Iowa had registered when President James G. Gilosky called the body to order with his gavel.

The undercurrent of dissatisfaction did not come to the surface until the second and last day of the session. Intense feeling manifested itself in both camps of the organization and times rose to almost complete disorder with a number of exhibitors on their feet all shouting at the chairman for permission to talk. President Gilosky was forced to resort to his gavel repeatedly during the second day's session.

Constitution Greets Announcement

The climax of the convention came when, after the votes had been cast for directors, at the opening of the afternoon session President Gilosky said that he had an important announcement to make, rising to his feet. He said that he was informed of this by-laws of the corporation, the rule governing the election of directors: "My attention has been called to a section of the by-laws, which provides that a majority of the stockholders shall constitute a quorum or the election of directors or for the taking of action.

"The committee on credentials informs us that we have not a majority of the stockholders present and I am therefore forced to declare the election illegal. I have no other alternative."

Pandemonium Breaks Loose

Pandemonium broke loose at the conclusion of the president's remarks. Practically every exhibitor in the room sought to speak at the same time. Many isles showed that under the by-laws provision a confused babel of voices resulted which drowned out the imperious summons for order from the president's gavel. President Gilosky, aker of the insurgents and heading the "blue" ticket, got the floor: "Because," he shouted, "the officers of this corporation have admitted themselves as being unable to get enough exhibitors present to form a quorum, I declare that each and every one of them sign forthwith.

"His heated remark called for more of the same. From the rear of the motion hall came the last year's voice, out, and you did not rule that election illegal."

Gilosky Changes Ruling

President Gilosky then announced that all rising and investigation of this statement should be made and Secretary H. Hitchcock was asked to look up records. He reported that the records showed that the by-laws provide that the officers of the corporation shall be elected from the floor of the convention. Following a stronger indefinite ruling by an attorney brought before the convention regarding the legality of altering the by-laws to effect this, President Gilosky urged that the matter be taken up by the board of directors.

Considerable constructive business was taken up, including the ironing out of misunderstandings between managers and exhibitors, concerning the shipment of films and advertising matter. Exhibitors complained that unnecessary delays and expense. Zander put them to an unwarranted expense.

With the exchanges present the matter was adjourned. A plan of closer cooperation was deter-

Plan Sweeping Red Cross Drive
William Fox Chosen to Head Team at Astor Luncheon—Campaign to Last One Week

Enthusiasm such as probably never has been known in the history of the industry marked a meeting of representatives of the motion picture federations and associations held last Wednesday at the Astor Hotel, New York, when plans were made for participation in the forthcoming drive May 20 to 27 for Red Cross funds.

Preliminary organization was effected of the Allied Theatrical and Motion Picture Interests team, plans for a sweeping campaign were outlined and One subscription—that of Samuel Goldfish of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, for $1,000,000—was announced. In addition, numerous pledges of hearty co-operation were reported, both from members of the moving picture and the theatrical industries.

The meeting took place at a luncheon given by Mr. Goldfish, who had been designated by William C. Breed, in general charge of the drive, as head of the allied theatrical and motion picture team. Information of this election was unanimously voted by the representatives of the photoplay industry, Mr. Fox having expressed his unwillingness to serve until the persons who would assist in directing the army of workers had been consulted regarding the chairmanship. The appointments of John Manheimer as Colonel for Borough of Manhattan, William Brandt for Brooklyn and John J. Wittman for the Bronx also were approved.

Central Committee

Mr. Fox, who has been captain of theater's team, and that they would be deducted under Jewish and Knights of Columbus auspices, presided at the meeting, and outlined in detail the plans under consideration for conducting the big Red Cross campaign. Arrangements were being made, he said, for a ball to be given Saturday night, May 25, at the Astor, at which the admission price would be $25. Another big affair, this conditional on the Governor's sanction, is to be a three-night wrestling and boxing tournament at Madison Square Garden. The main campaign, however, is to be waged through the theaters, with the aid of special speakers and prominent actors and actresses, and in the restaurant district along Broadway, which is to be invaded by scores of stars of the stage and screen in a series of forays for funds.

Headquarters Established

It was estimated by Mr. Fox that an army of 6,000 workers would be engaged on the theatrical and motion picture interests' team, and that they would be able to reach about 1,500,000 people during the seven afternoons and evenings of the drive. Headquarters already have been established, two lofts having been donated by the management of the Subway Central Building at 1465 Broadway, where a telephone, Bryant 2600, has been installed, and where all of the divisional officers have been actively at work since Thursday morning.

Short addresses were made at the Lasky to Rebuild

Hollywood Studio

Destroyed by Fire

Los Angeles, Calif.—Plans are being completed for the immediate rebuilding of the Lasky motion picture studios in Hollywood, which were partially destroyed by fire last evening. Officials of the film company announced that the total loss will exceed $150,000.

After a brief conference, it was said by heads of the company that a large temporary concrete building containing many departments, would probably be erected to replace the burned structures. The new building would probably be erected at a cost of $150,000, it was said. The fire started in the color room of the plant.

Mr. Lasky says that the work will not be interrupted to any great extent at the studio, and that work now being done on several pictures will continue as planned.
“Go to Boston and Clean House”

Pettijohn’s Recipe for Harmony

Amalgamation of Two Existing Exhibitors’ Organizations Depends Upon Action of M. P. E. L., He Says

Upon the action taken by the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League in its convention to be held the week of July 13 to 20, depends the possibility of an amalgamation between that association and the American Exhibitors’ Association. The ultimatum was issued by Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors’ Association, at the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of the Northwest held in Minneapolis last week.

Mr. Pettijohn’s address came as a somewhat surprise to those present, as much as he urged the exhibitors to continue their association with the parent body—the M. P. E. L.—appoint their delegates to the Boston convention, attend and “clean house.”

The speaker was one of the leaders in the bolt at the Chicago convention last July, which resulted in the holding of two conventions and the formation of the American Exhibitors’ Association.

One Organization Possible

“While present at this convention,” said Mr. Pettijohn, “I have heard considerable talk about withdrawing from the M. P. E. L. Don’t do it. Stick to the organization. Appoint your delegates and attend the convention in Boston in July. Do three and a clean house, and when you have done this the American Exhibitors’ Association is willing to meet you on a 50-50 basis in any effort to bring about the formation of one national organization in the United States.”

Mr. Pettijohn told the exhibitors present that he had held a conference the night before with Frank J. Rembusch, national secretary of the A. E. A., and at that time the message he gave out had been arranged.

Ever since the united meeting of the three organizations in Washington last December, in an effort to have the conditions of the war revenue bill as applied to the motion picture industry modified, there has been constant talk and rumors of an amalgamation.

Ochs Talks Harmony

Lee A. Ochs, national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League, presided at the Pettijohn meeting, in talking before the convention. He made a plea for a larger attendance at the Boston convention and of exhibitors of the northwest. He said all indications point to one of the largest gatherings of exhibitors that has ever taken place. He also announced that a large amount of space had already been subscribed for the exposition to be held in connection with the convention.

“It is absolutely essential that we have a national exhibitors’ organization,” said Mr. Ochs, in speaking for harmony at one association. “I know that I am the bone of contention at the Chicago convention last year, which resulted in the formation of the organization. I think that condition no longer exists, however, and I will not, under any circumstances, be a candidate for any office of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League.

Pauline Frederick Signs With Goldwyn

Announcement comes from Willard Mack, following the publication in the East telegraphic dispatches from Los Angeles, that Pauline Frederick pictures shortly will be produced by the Pauline Frederick Feature Film Company and distributed through Goldwyn.

Mr. Mack further states that he has assumed personal charge of Goldwyn’s scenario department, with offices at the company’s studios in Fort Lee, N. J.

Miss Frederick, at the termination of her contract with the Famous Players, will be starred by the Frederick Feature Film Company, recently formed. When she begins work she will be under the personal direction of Mr. Mack.

Director Drafted

Alan Crosland, the able young director who worked with Alice Brady on a forthcoming Select Picture in her Star Series, has been placed in Class One A of the selective draft and has already joined the National Army. Mr. Crosland’s motion picture career has been marked with signally successful achievements and his work with Miss Brady has been of the highest order.

Fox Employe Joins Colors

Gerald B. Spiero, who has given excellent service on the Fox Publicity staff for the past two years, has been called to the colors, and reported at Fort Slocum ready for duty last week. Mr. Spiero will probably be detailed to the Quartermaster’s department, since slightly defective eyesight barred him from the aviation corps, for which he volunteered.

ETHEL CLAYTON AND SUPPORT IN A SCENE FROM “SILVER LINING.” (World) control of Paralta Plays Passes Into Hands of De Wolf and Katz

Messrs. Anderson, Kane and Brown Sell Interest—Company to Continue to Produce on Coast

A deal which has been in progress for some time was consummated last Tuesday by John E. DeWolf, Herman Katz and associates when they bought out the interests in Paralta Plays of Messrs. Carl Anderson, Robert T. Kane, and Nat I. Brown. The consummation of the deal, it is said, is the result of an amicable understanding between these men. Under the terms of the agreement, Messrs. Anderson, Kane and Brown have sold their entire holdings in Paralta and subsidiary companies.

A complete re-organization has taken place, it is announced, and the Paralta Pictures Corporation is now in the hands of well-known business men who will continue the making of playhouse offerings of exceptional merit.

Robert Brunton, who has been the chief executive at the Coast studios, will remain in his former capacity of manager of productions. He will retain his entire staff of directors whose work has lent much to the excellent quality which has marked all Paralta Plays up to the present time.

Made Rapid Strides

Paralta Plays, Inc. made its entrance into the industry during March of last year. At that time there was much speculation as to the quality of the productions of the new organization. A number of photo-dramas were produced before any were presented to the public. "A Man's Man" with J. Warren Kerrigan as the star, was the first Paralta Play to be issued. The production was immediately pronounced a success and was shown in the larger theatres throughout the country. "Madam Who," with Bessie Barriscale, was the second Paralta Play, which was published on December 15 and established this popular star in a vehicle far different from any in which she had appeared prior to that time.

Louise Glann, who is the most recent addition to Paralta's list of stars, achieved a notable success in the making of "An Alien Enemy," which was published April 1. She has now completed her second Paralta Play, "Shackled," and is working on "Snapdragon," which will be completed within a few weeks.

Eighteen productions have thus far been completed by the Paralta organization and the studios will continue without let-up under the new executive direction, it is said. About nine weeks since Walthall was released from his contract to permit him to go with David W. Griffith.

Studios Near Completion

The productions which have come from the Paralta studios in Los Angeles, Cal, have won for this organization an important place in the industry as producers of the highest type of photodramatic offerings. Mr. DeWolf and his associates state, however, that it is their intention to produce in the future still larger, better and stronger plays than the organization has presented in the past.

The new Paralta studios are now practically completed and the company boasts of not only the largest, but the most complete producing studios in existence. In the future the Paralta policy will be to present only strong, human-interest stories, enacted by eminent stars, who will be directed by the foremost geniuses in the industry.

A few weeks ago, the rumor was circulated that Paralta would probably discontinue producing. This rumor is denied emphatically by Paralta. Louise Glann and J. Warren Kerrigan are now at work in the California studios. Bessie Barriscale, it is said, will return to the coast within ten days and the executives of Paralta are negotiating at this time with other stars of prominence and expect to be able to announce important additions to their galaxy of stars in the near future. The policy of the company will remain as before. Each star will make eight productions a year, it is announced, which will be distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Directors Raise $482,000

The third Liberty loan drive among the directors of the Los Angeles Studio Motion Picture Directors' Association, netted $192,700 from thirty-eight directors. Reports from the 150 members, including the New York Studio, have not yet been received, but from seventy-five directors who have reported, $122,500 had been subscribed.

"Booster Dinner" Held at Boston For Coming Expo.

Plans Formulated to Make Affair Notable One—Committees Selected

Following the publication of the official call issued by President Lee A. Ochs of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America designating Boston, Mass., as the scene of the annual convention and exposition to be held this summer on July 13-20, the "Boosters Boom Boston" held a "get-together" dinner for the purpose of formulating plans to make the Boston convention and exposition the most successful in the history of the business. Most of the picture men of Boston and its vicinity attended, together with several guests.

Chief among the various items of business transacted during the course of the dinner was the appointment of a special committee to take the necessary steps to bring to Boston during the convention period leading representatives of the film industry throughout the civilized world.

Speaker called attention to the fact that "Pictures will form the main line of defense against German propaganda, and it is the opportunity and duty of the national association industry, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and all other allied associations to make the 1918 Exposition in Boston of sufficient interest and importance to attract the men of the allied nations and the president of the United States."

Committees Appointed

Other committees that were chosen with members aggregating a hundred in number included that on Arrangements, Harry A. Chamberlain, chairman; Publicity, Joseph A. Di Pesa, chairman; Guest, Jacob Loury, chairman; Entertainment, Harry F. Campbell, chairman; State Director, A. S. Black, chairman; Finance, Irving E. Jones, chairman; Decoration, George K. Robinson and A. E. Somerby, chairmen; Executive, E. K. Gregory, chairman; N. A. M. P. Industry, Michael J. Lydon, chairman; and Badge, L. Dadmun, chairman.

Owing to his attendance at the convention of the exhibitors of the Northwest at Minneapolis, President Ochs was unable to be present, but a telegram addressed to his successor, Sam Grant was read in which he prophesied unprecedented success for the coming exposition.

During his stay in the Northwest Mr. Ochs was informed that that section would be represented with full quotas at the convention, and the response to his call generally insures a greater gathering of exhibitors than ever before.

Mr. Grant, who has been made co-manager of the exposition with Frederick Elliott, also announced that a sufficiently large number of producers and stars, accessory dealers and all others connected with industry who volunteered to participate in the Boston exposition to assure its success in advance.
General Film Co. Stockholders Get Hearing on $2,000,000 Suit

Percival L. Waters and James B. Stark, preferred stockholders of the general Film Company, through their attorneys, Cadwalder, Wickersham & Taft, secured a hearing last Friday in New York before Supreme Court Justice Sullivan, in the $2,000,000 action instituted May 11, 1916.

The plaintiffs, in their bill of complaint, charge the defendant producers and film corporations with declaring dividends to themselves out of funds of the General Film Company. These, it is alleged, amount to more than the New York state law allows.

Judge Samuel Seabury, who represents the defendants, Albert E. Smith, George Kleine, A. A. Berst, Frank L. LeRoy, William N. Selig, Siegmund Loew, Alice M. Long, administratrix for Samuel Long, deceased; George K. Poore, W. T. Rock, William Pelzer, Fremiah J. Kennedy, Paul G. Melles, Carl H. Wilson, Frank J. Marion, Biograph Company, Kalem Company, Inc., etc., were all present.

The hearing was adjourned to a later date, when the balance of the defendants will be called to testify.

Tom Furniss Retires From League Affairs

Tom Furniss, of Duluth, announced at the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest, just held in Minneapolis, that he had retired from active participation in organization affairs. His decision means a distinct loss not only to the exhibitors of the northwest, but to exhibitors in general all over the country.

In speaking before the convention, Mr. Furniss said that he was no longer physically able to work as he had in the past and expressed the hope that younger men would step forward to take up the cause where he had left off.

Many tributes were paid to Mr. Furniss by President Giloski and by other exhibitors in the hall who had been associated with him since the organization of the northwest corporation eight years ago. Mr. Furniss was characterized as one who had worked diligently and unfailingly for the betterment of exhibitors everywhere to the detri-

City Official Held In $10,000 Bail On Fraud Charge

New York.—Redondo Beach, a suburb of Los Angeles, recently reelected Harry L. Brolaski for its mayor. Brolaski was arraigned last week before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions charged with fraud in connection with the sale of stock of the Standard Films Industries, Inc., and was held in $10,000 bail, following his return to New York in company with Detective Joseph Daly. Brolaski was indicted by the grand jury with R. S. Davidson of 42 Broadway and Louis D. Jennings, president of the moving picture company. The two other men also are being held in $10,000 bail. The indictment charges them specifically with publishing false financial advertising.

Edward S. Brogan, assistant district attorney, declared after investigation that the company had unloaded $300,000 worth of stock of the company on mostly poor persons. The R. S. Davidson Company, it is said, was the selling agent.

Nation-Wide Tour For F. J. Hawkins

F. J. Hawkins, manager of distribution of the Haworth Pictures Corporation, left Los Angeles on May 4 for New York. He will visit all the leading exhibitors of the United States and Canada, it is announced, and arrange for first-run bookings of the principal photoplays. C. S. Cole, New York distributor for the company, will accompany Mr. Hawkins on his journey to the Atlantic Coast cities and through-
George Backer Buys
Hopp Hadley’s Film
“The Lost Chord” Producer and Distributor
Gets Cinema-Symphony
For Foursquare

After a private showing of Hopp Hadley’s symphony for motion pictures, which he calls the first “Cinema-Symphony” arrangements were completed whereby George Backer immediately took over the controlling interest in the new-idea production with a view to putting it on the market at the earliest possible moment.

Although important changes in the elaborate musical setting made it impossible for Mr. Backer to see the production screened in conjunction with the Symphony and he was compelled to judge it from the standpoint of story, production and its value as a novelty, he closed a contract with Mr. Hadley at once and is completing arrangements for its early distribution through the Foursquare exchanges.

The subject of Mr. Hadley’s innovation is Sir Arthur Sullivan’s “The Lost Chord.” The production in five reels and tells a beautiful heart interest story written around the hero of the famous song, it is said. An interesting love story leads up to the combination dramatic and musical climax in which the organist strikes the “chord of music like the sound of a great amen.” A tragedy interrupted this moment of supreme happiness, however, and the chord is lost, not to be found again until, after many days of stirring events, an act of beautiful self-sacrifice brings the musician a heavenly reward.

Sol P. Levy and M. Winkler are working on the symphonic arrangement. They see wonderful possibilities for musical works of great value, it is said, as well as powerful photodramas, in the development of the Cinema-Symphony idea.

From the commercial angle Mr. Backer, whose success both as a producer and distributor of big special productions is a matter of record, sees in “The Lost Chord” an excellent opportunity for theatre managers to call the attention of their patrons to the strenuous efforts they are making in their behalf to give them musical programs in keeping with the elaborate photodramas that make up their daily picture programs.

Mr. Backer feels, that subjects like “The Lost Chord,” will give the theatres a chance to advertise their musicians in conjunction with the pictures and thus not only give an added interest to the particular performances of which “The Lost Chord” is the feature, but will also awaken a new and permanent interest in their daily efforts to supply music of quality.

F. A. Powers Heads
New Company to Manufacture Film

Power Camera and Film Company Capitalized at $5,000,000

P. A. Powers, treasurer of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., in conjunction with the executive heads of practically all the other producing companies, has purchased the plant formerly owned by the Fireproof Film Company, near Rochester, N. Y., and has capitalized it at $5,000,000 the Powers Camera and Film Company.

Activities of the new company will be devoted to the manufacture of celluloid base and a completely equipped plant for this purpose is a part of the purchase, the Powers company will buy its base from concerns which have been engaged in this branch of the business for fifteen years.

Sufficient orders are already on hand, according to Mr. Powers, to take care of the capacity of the plant for a year. When operation of the plant is brought up to full capacity the employment of 1,000 hands will be necessary. Manufacturing of film has been going on while negotiations were pending the purchase of the plant which have been in progress for a period of six months.

The transaction for the purchase of the plant was closed by Mr. E. Dopyon, acting for the new company. The plant is fully equipped and covers about five acres of land. The original cost of the building was about $400,000, including a power house, and about $200,000 was spent on equipment.

Arthur J. Lang on Long Southern Trip
For Power Company

A. J. Lang, export manager of the Nicholas Powers Company, left last week for an extended South American trip. Mr. Lang has only recently returned from Mexico and Cuba, and, having found the projection machine business in such a flourishing condition in the Latin countries north of the equator, decided to make his South American trip at an earlier date than usual.

The tour which Mr. Lang contemplates at this time will take him from Panama almost to Terra del Fuego, and Mr. Lang advises if the natives of the Land of Fire were a little more advanced in indoor amusements, he would, without a doubt, install a Powers machine in that country.

The fact that Mr. Lang speaks Spanish and Portuguese like a native-born and understands the customs and business methods of the people makes him a welcome visitor and one who can always make a return trip and get the glad hand of the South Americans. Mr. Lang expects to be gone about ten months and will cover the following countries: Panama, Colombia, Ecuador, Brazil, Argentina and Chile.
Affiliated Distributors Corp.
Rapidly Organizing Exhibitors

Meetings Held in Minneapolis, Chicago and Pittsburgh Last Week Show Exhibitors Enthusiastic

That the Affiliated Distributors’ Corporation will be organized on a nationwide scale, and ready to start a definite schedule of picture distribution within a short time, is the promise held out by the progress which the new company has made, according to Charles C. Pettijohn, its general counsel.

Although incorporated only three weeks ago, this new cooperative booking movement has been well received by exhibitors all over the country, and the work of completing the affiliation of the various independent exhibitors’ booking associations that are now operating with this national body is going on rapidly.

Just as soon as these affiliations are consummated, the exhibitor organizers of the central body will take up the work of assisting exhibitors in territories where units have not yet been formed, in the organization of their association.

Minneapolis Meeting Held

The principles of the new Affiliated were presented in detail by Mr. Pettijohn, following the Minneapolis convention last week, at which steps were immediately taken to gain for the Minnesota exhibitors, the benefits accruing from an affiliation with this plan.

Byron Parks, the secretary of the Exhibitors’ Committee which is responsible for the formation of the Affiliated, addressed a meeting of the Pittsburgh exhibitors on Tuesday night, and under the direction of Fred Herrington, the organizer of the Tri-State Exhibitors’ Circuit, the Western Penn. exhibitors are now completing the details necessary to join in this cooperative movement.

Following the meeting Mr. Parks left for Salt Lake City to effect the affiliation of the exhibitors of the six western states, now organized in the Exhibitors’ Booking Association in the inter-mountain states.

Many States Active

Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and Eastern Pennsylvania exhibitors are also lining up their forces, enthusiastic meetings having been held in Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago and Philadelphia during the past week. The meetings in the first three cities were attended by Mr. Pettijohn, and the one in Philadelphia by Sydney Cohen and John Manheimer of New York.

That the exhibitors of these various sections see in the Affiliated Distributors Corporation the means of obtaining the fullest advantage to be derived from a co-operative booking organization, is evidenced by the readiness with which they have responded financially to the organization of their respective units.

While the investment required of each exhibitor is a most nominal one, the willingness with which exhibitors everywhere have come forward has been a revelation to those who know what a task it is usually to raise money in the industry, regardless of the purpose, and is regarded as a striking testimonial of the confidence of exhibitors generally in the fairness of the plan.

The secret of this response, according to those responsible for the Affiliated, is the fact that these funds remain in the control of each exhibitor’s unit, the nature of the financial arrangement between the unit and the Affiliated being simply that of a trust agreement.

Anita Stewart Hurt
In Auto Accident

Anita Stewart, the Vitagraph star, Wilfrid North, director, and Virginia Nordon, a member of Miss Stewart’s company in “Mind-the-Paint-Girl,” had a narrow escape from death last week, when an automobile in which they were returning from the studio was struck by a trolley car at Sixteenth street and Third avenue, Brooklyn, and hurled against a motor bus containing twelve members of the Vitagraph company.

Miss Stewart suffered injuries to her hand and neck. Mr. North’s foot and head were bruised and Miss Nordon suffered severe bruises. Eight of the twelve occupants of the motor bus were also injured slightly.

THREE SCENES FROM FORTHCOMING FOX PLAYS

Patriotism was certainly the keynote of the convention. It could not have had a more appropriate address than that of State Representative Thomas D. Schall, of the tenth district of Minnesota; Richard Preuss, state auditor, and Corporal Arthur, a member of the Fifth Battalion, Canadian volunteer infantry.

Exhibitor "Tom" Foster, of Stanley, Wis., whose son, Frank, fell at the battle of Vimy Ridge while fighting in the same battalion as Corporal Arthur, introduced the veteran of the world war, now out of the struggle, due to wounds. The soldier's tribute to American fighting men, his firm belief in the final victorious outcome and his unaffected manner in relating his own deeds of valor, won the cheers and applause of those present.

One of the bright lights of the convention was the presence at all sessions of Mrs. Henrietta Starkey, the only woman exhibitor to attend the annual convention. Mr. Starkey and his son, Edward, are the proprietors of the sole motion picture house in LeSueur, Minn.

Beginning business a few years ago in a vacant store, Mrs. Starkey soon took over the only theatre in the town, which was devoted to traveling productions of the day. It is now a 92-seat motion picture theatre and is named the Star.

She is a firm believer in the future of the motion picture industry, is progressive, and showed a keen interest in all that transpired during the two days.

"Sinnator" Tom Hamlin's speech on "The Working Man," tried out in the lobby of the Hotel West, was loudly applauded by two trade paper representatives and the room clerk, the young lady presiding over the tobacco stand showed a passive interest.

Another thing that has aroused our keenest interest is Lee Och's promise that "fireboats will be provided to take visiting delegates up and down the river and around Boston." Our idea of the last word in adventure is to ride gracefully around the business district of the Hub city in a fireboat.

There should be no doubt in the mind of Tom Furnish, of Duluth, as to where he stands with the exhibitors of the northwest. His announcement that he would retire from league activities was greeted with profoundest regret and a rising vote of thanks for his efforts during the past year greeted him at the conclusion of his talk.

Ed Hinz, of the Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, was the means of having an exchange manager elected from the executive session of Tuesday afternoon. Ed's not an eagle eye for exchange managers.

W. B. Valleeau, of the Broadway Theatre, Albert Lea, Minn., stepped into the center of the limelight when he placed the blame upon exhibitors for the way the exchange men shipped their advertising matter. He contended that the exhibitor did not return the matter promptly to the exchanges. Exhibitor Valleau got a good hand from the exchange managers present.

Speaking of the standing vote proposition: There were so many of them that when we returned to Chicago, every time anyone addressed themselves to us we stood up and applauded.

William A. Steffes, chairman of the committee on by-laws, started the excitement the second day in an effort to so change the laws that the officers of the organization could be elected from the floor. Before the smoke had cleared an attorney was brought before the convention to rule on the matter. His ruling appealed to us as follows: If thus and so is so and thus then thus and so is thus.

President Gilosky's plea of "Gentlemen, don't get excited, everyone will be given the floor" was much in evidence during the second day's session. It undoubtedly had considerable effect, but there was enough excitement left for the most fastidious.

More than two hundred persons registered for the Beef Steak dinner tendered to visiting exhibitors by the Exchange of Minneapolis. It was a spectacular entertainment for the ladies being provided at one of the local theatres.

T. E. Mortensen, managing editor of Amusements, was given a vote of thanks by the convention for the publicity and advertising carried in Amusements in the interest of the meeting.

Exchange Manager Fox of the Minneapolis Goldwyn office entertained visitors in the Gold Room of the Hotel Radisson on Tuesday night by showing the latest productions of his company. The showings were well attended.

Exhibitor Brown, of the Rainbow Theatre, Riceville, Iowa, had considerable interest of his regarding exchanges which charge the 15-cent reel tax on productions made before the bill governing the tax was put into effect by the government.

The opinion of W. M. Abrahamson, of Duluth, that the up-state exhibitors should be represented on the board of directors seemed to meet with favor. His candidate, Ralph Parker, smashed the organization slate and drew more votes than any of the others. Mr. Parker is also of Duluth.

Heyes Returns to Fox

Herbert Heyes, one of the best known and most capable leading men in photo-plays, has returned to the William Fox forces after a long absence, will be seen opposite Gladys Brockwell in "The Bird of Prey," a new picture that Edward J. LeSaint is directing.

J. S. Woody Becomes Select Field Manager

J. S. Woody, who until recently Pacific Northwest General Manager for Select Pictures, with headquarters at Seattle, over which Select branch he had charge, has been promoted from this position to become Select Pictures' field manager. Mr. Woody will no longer have charge of any one branch or branches, but will travel among exchanges. He will thus be able to give his personal attention to specific situations in various fields at the occasion may require, it is said. Succeeding Mr. Woody, the Seattle Exchange will be under the management of H. B. Dobbs.

Hettie Gray Baker
Speaks at Luncheon

Hettie Gray Baker, editor of the Wm. Fox productions, who is frequently referred to as "the lady who lives in the dark," because of the number of hours she spends in the various Fox projection rooms, spoke last week at the annual luncheon given at the Hotel McAlpin by the National Board of Review. About two hundred persons were present and the other speakers included Cranston Brenton, chairman of the board, who was about to go overseas on Y. M. C. A. work; George Middleton, the playwright; and Dan Beard, famous naturalist and author.
Hodkinson Handles
Douglas National Color Pictures

Leon Douglas, prominent in the development of the Victor phonograph, presented his latest invention, the Douglas Natural Color Pictures, in their perfected form at the Cinema Theatre of Los Angeles, during the week of April 27.

Mr. Douglas told me that by his secret process he is able to recreate in their natural colors all the marvelous scenic beauties that the world offers. Some attempts have been made before to produce color in motion pictures, but it is asserted these were not entirely successful, owing to the fact that mechanical means were used to produce the effect.

In the Douglas color pictures, it is said, is really a direct photograph taken while the colors are actually obtained and are said to be marvelously true to nature. The range of tint and hues is unlimited. The presence of grays and neutral tints which are always present in monochrome, and which soften and tone down the harsh colors, are plentiful in these pictures.

Mr. Douglas has announced that W. W. Hodkinson, his National Color Corporation, distributors, will handle this product throughout the United States.

Melbourne, Australia
Likes “Polly of Circus”

“Polly of the Circus,” Goldwyn’s big production starring Mae Marsh, has scored as tremendous a success at the Town Hall, Melbourne, Australia, as any classic of the big tops achieved in America. Reports from the Antipodes are that fully 2,000 persons were turned away during the three-day run. It was the first Goldwyn production shown in Melbourne, and its remarkable success prompted F. W. Thring, managing director of the J. C. Wills & Son National Film Corporation, Melbourne, to write Goldwyn, to write the home office of the splendid achievement.

General Moves Offices

Simultaneously with the removal of the New York branch of General Film Company to the former Paramount exchange quarters in the Godfrey Building, relocations took place in three other cities. The new exchanges are located as follows: Buffalo, 106 Pearl Street; Chicago, 508 S. Wabash Avenue; Washington, 8th and F Streets, N. W.

The Washington move marks this branch’s third location in six months, the demand by the government for office space being in the main responsible for the removals.

Select Employees in Army

Ed. H. Good, of Select Pictures Pittsburg branch, has been called to the colors and has gone to join the National Army at Fort Thomas, Kentucky.

From the home office in New York, Messrs. Austin Keough and Jerome Michael, of the legal department, have proceeded to Camp Upton within the last few days.

In 1914, Ruess made a study of the motors returned to the Nicholas Power Co., for repairs, and decided that most of the trouble was caused by the different lubricants used. The result of experiments is embodied in Leonard’s Motor and Gear Grease.

R. Wetter, Jr., sold 3,000 cans of the grease in October, 1916, and with Mr. Ruess organized the company of Ruess & Wetter.

Marcus Loew theatres, New York, and fifty-five theatre circuits, it is said, have adopted the Leonard oil, and are using it in the manufacture of parts of two hundred supply houses, Messrs. Ruess and Wetter announce, are handling the lubricant, including the United Theatre Equipment Corporation and Exhibitors Supply Company, Chicago.

RAMSEY: SPIKES IDEA GRAB OF N. A. M. P. I. SECY.

Well-Known Publicity Director Answers Epistolary Assault of F. H. Elliott on Origination of Fifteen Cent Coin Scheme

"Anent yours of May 6 and enclosed from one F. H. Elliott:

"I was annoyed and planted the idea of fifteen-cent coins for Elliott, if he has any function in the flowering of the idea. It was a happy one for me, and something. May his aromatic fame increase."

"The article in your paper of which I objects was as you written in you nazines."

"Despite Mr. Elliott, it is a matter of common knowledge in the industry that he fifteen cent piece was invented, and I leave it national and international publicity something more than a year ago. Long before others were interested in it. The bills of any trade paper and most newspapers will prove that."

"Finally, I gained support for the movement from different sources—F. H. Pfeil & Co., Chilengo; the United Ciga Stores, the Pfeils; publications of large number of national interests, in cluding I. L. W. U., A. F. of L., and legislators. This is all substantiated by con temporary facts and documents prior to any interest expressed by Mr. Elliott."

"It is interesting to recall also that Mr. Elliott, while engaged in a campaign to force or deny the Mutual Film Corporation into membership in his National Association, wrote a letter to John R. Fesler congratulating the Mutual Film Corporation for the best of wishes."

"The Mutual refused to join the National Association."

"Meanwhile Mr. Elliott appropriated the fifteen-cent piece."

"I know that Mr. Elliott used it."

"The same is true of the motion picture publications as well as the national publicity and many others who lend their support."

"It has not come from me, and I am not at liberty to give credit to Mr. Elliott who has steadfastly avoided arising me or concern.

"The move was a number of trade papers and ran stories about my part in the history of the idea and movement."

These stories were spontaneous and voluntary. They brought the name to Mr. Elliott’s attention, and they have added further stories about the origin of the idea, causing it to go forward, however, concerns the bill in Congress. I did not and do not propose to the Mutual. Elliott hide my light under a hi-wire cup."

"I note that Mr. Elliott in his letter says that I have nothing to do with the motion picture publications as well as the national publicity and many others who lend their support."

"I have the honor of the acquaintance of Mr. Elliott, but I know 'sue' feelers."

"I can leave to the open forum of opinion my reputation in the film trade. I can leave to the open current judgment, the attempt at piracy and mayhem."

"A salute to Mr. F. H. Elliott!"

Montagu Love in "VENGEANCE"
World drama; six parts; directed by Travers Vale; published May 27

As a whole: Interesting
Story: Novel
Star: Convincing
Support: Good
Settings: Excellent
Photography: Fine

The novelty of the situations, the excellence of production, the convincing portrayal of the featured star and the realistic Oriental atmosphere, all combine to make of "Vengeance" an out-of-the-ordinary picture, one that should immediately attract and hold interest.
The action of the story covers a period of perhaps thirty years, showing Montagu Love as a young man turned out of his home through a scheming brother; Charles Johnson, as the young son of the disgraced man, and Montagu Love, again as the son grown to manhood. All the phases leading up to this period, when the actual plot develops, have been handled in an interesting manner. Madge Evans, George MacQuarrie, Louise Vale, Barbara Castleton and Elia Chester, as well as the other members of the cast, have been given roles that befit their particular talents.
Laid in India and London, the atmosphere of the two countries has been preserved in a truly remarkable manner and the spectator seems to feel the dreaminess of the east as well as the apparent fogginess of London. Because of its unusualness it should afford exhibitors a good box office attraction. At the Riviera Theatre, Chicago, found it a good drawing card last week.

The story: Bent on vengeance, John Cuddleston, a Swami, follows Andrew Cuddleston to London and before long makes of him a financial wreck. Lady Drillingcourt, Andrew's ward, demands an explanation from the Swami. He tells her of the years before Andrew had denounced his father as a cheat and the younger son had been driven from his home. He went to India, married one of the native girls and in a tiger hunt had met his death. His last message to his son was to avenge his father's wrongs and the Swami had followed his father's bidding. His work accomplished, the swami returns to his country and Nan, his waiting sweetheart.

"THE YELLOW TICKET"
Pathe drama; five parts; directed by William Parke; published special

As a whole: Good
Story: Effective
Star: Competent Support: Excellent
Photography: Very Good

The popularity attained by the speaking stage presentation of "The Yellow Ticket" should be duplicated by the screen version prepared by the Pathe company which is to be congratulated for its excellent choice of cast and intelligent direction. The production, dealing as it does with the persecution of the Jewish race in Russia under the rule of the Romanoffs, is of necessity a rather heavy offering but, because of its excellence, should be well received.
Fannie Ward in the title role does everything demanded of her and does it well. She has a success she attained her first picture for Pathe, "Innocence." Milton Sills, as the young American studying Russian conditions, does commendable work. Armando Kalisz, J. H. Kilmour, Leon Barry and Helene Chadwick are included in the cast.
The story: Anna Mirrel, her mother dead, in attempting to reach her father in St. Petersburg where he has been jured is unable to go to him except by means of the "yellow ticket" which in Russia meant a woman of lax morals, he accepts the stigmata and reaches him before his death. Left alone in the world she is befriended by Marya Varenka who is killed in throwing a bomb at the head of the secret police. In impersonating her friend Anna is exposed by the police, but gains the friendship of Julian Rolte, an American studying Russian conditions. When Baron Andrey instead of giving her the protection he has promised, attacks her, she kills him and gives herself up to the police. Rolte finds her and upon threatening to make public the scandal in connection with the baron's death, obtains her liberty on the promise that both will leave the country.

"MASKS AND FACES"
World drama; five parts; produced by the British Academy of Dramatic Art; published May 6

As a whole: Good
Story: Fine
Star: Excellent Support: All-star Settings: Fair
Photography: Good

A cast containing such notables as Forbes-Robertson, Dennis Neilson Terry, Irene Vanbrugh, Lilah McCarthy, Gladys Cooper and Ben Webster is presented by the British Academy of Dramatic Art in a studied screen version of Charles Reade's famous play. The film was made to bring funds to the aid of the Allied armies. The talent, the pick of the English stage, donated their services. George Bernard Shaw, Sir James Barrie, Sir Arthur Pinero and a host of equally famous literary personages are shown in the first reel making plans for the production of the film.
All this makes for great advertising appeal. The play itself should please. Though a costume piece, the plot is so strong and so capably delivered that interest is maintained throughout. There is the customary stamp of the foreign-made picture about it, but in this case it is hardly so pronounced as to cause displeasure.
The story: Peg Wollington, an actress, makes her successful debut at the Covent Garden Theatre, London, in 1747. Ernest Vane, a country gentleman in the city on business, becomes infatuated with the lady and postpones his return to his home and wife. The latter goes to London to be with him and Peg returns Vane's affection, to the displeasure of Sir Charles Pomander, an unscrupulous rival. Triplet, an impoverished painter and writer of verse, is an old friend of Peg's less happy days. She goes to his home to bring food to his family, and is shadowed by Pomander and Vane. They cover their embarrassment by ordering Triplet to do literary work for them. Vane gives a party for Peg, during which his wife arrives. Pomander apprises her of the situation. She eventually appeals to Peg to return her husband. That lady, because Mrs. Vane has treated her as a woman with a heart, restores her happiness, dismisses Pomander and devotes herself to her work.

Reaching the top-notch in production and entertainment value, “An Honest Man” offers exhibitors an unusually good picture, one that should prove a good drawing card for the once-in-a-while patrons to come back.

The story is altogether original. The role of Benny, the tramp, could not be more appropriate for William Desmond had Henry P. Dowst, author of the story, created it especially for him. The interest in the entire play has been sustained in a remarkable fashion. After three reels one begins to realize that up to that time no woman has made her appearance on the screen and in fact it takes four and a half reels before the charming Mary Warren and Ann Kroman do appear and then they help, in a pleasing fashion, to bring the story to a happy and surprising end.

There are plenty of laughs throughout and just a little touch of pathos when the tramp believes his new found friend is about to die. To give it timely interest after the tramp decides to discontinue his vagabond life and settle down and is assured of the love of the one girl, he enlists and offers his services to his country.

The story: After tramping for years, never begging, but always working for the food he gets, Benny stumbles upon old man Cushing and an unusual friendship is formed. The old man takes Benny’s honesty for granted and when he realizes he is about to die entrusts him with the money for his missing daughter. Benny accepts the money and goes to the city in the hope of finding the girl. He comes across Beatrice Burnett and through her finds Cushing’s daughter. A trip to the old homestead reveals that after all Cushing did not die and there is a happy reunion of father and daughter and a happy understanding between Beatrice and Benny.

“The Little Runaway” is an average program feature possessing a small amount of interest for those who appreciate Irish humor and a goodly amount for those who admire the work of Gladys Leslie. For audiences of this type the picture will undoubtedly provide fair entertainment.

While weak as to plot, the picture has its moments of interest and the work of Gladys Leslie, who is rapidly coming to the fore as an entertainer of the harem scarmum genre type, is pleasing. Edward Earle registered well as the young lord who falls a victim to the charms of one of his Irish tenant’s daughters. The late Mary Maurice, William Dunn, Jessie Stevens, William Calhoun and Betty Bythe appear in the supporting cast.

Scenes of the story are laid in Ireland and the charm of this country has been well preserved. There is much excellent photography throughout. Paul West claims authorship to the story.

The story: When Peter Doud escapes with her aunt’s rent money and Ann has gone to America, she follows, determined to get the money. She comes across a young man who, back in Ireland, had rescued her from drowning. He brings her to the home of his fiancee and their friendship develops into love, which arouses the jealousy of the fiancée and Ann is sent away. One night she comes back to take a peep at the man she loves and is about to be denounced as a crook when the young man intercedes. It is then he tells her that he is her aunt’s landlord, Lord Killaway, and that he loves her.

It is not a pretty story this film version of Tolstoy’s novel “Resurrection” is, however, well produced with a capable cast headed by Pauline Frederick, whose ability as an emotional actress makes her well fitted for the role of Katusha, a servant girl, betrayed by an army officer, a member of the Russian nobility.

The settings both exterior and interior are of the best. Efficient photography marks the production throughout. The play, intensely dramatic in character, depicts faithfully the life of the lower class in Russia prior to revolution.

The story: Katusha, a servant girl, betrayed by a Russian officer, a member of the nobility, is forced through the inexorable Russian custom to become a woman of the streets. As a social outcast she is accused of the murder of a prominent merchant and sentenced to Siberia by a jury of which the army officer is a member. Overcome by remorse he seeks the czar and obtains a pardon for Katusha. Upon his arrival in Siberia he gives the girl $100 and offers, in atonement, for the wrong he has done her, to make her his wife. In the meantime, however, she has been taught right living by Simonson, a peasant, and determines to stay with him until his sentence is completed.

"TRUE BLUE"

Story: Entertaining
Support: Capable
Photography: Very good

"True Blue" represents five reels of excellent screen entertain- ment, an enjoyable story and when it is realized that the dependable star who has the faculty of registering his varying emotions in a convincing manner; and it should prove a sure fire success.

It is a western picture with beautiful scenery, plenty of cowboys, horses and cattle. In comparison to this life is the low, dignified existence of the Earl of Somersfield and his dis-pated son.

In support of Mr. Farnum appear Charles Clary, Katherine Adams and William Scott, all of whom handled their roles ably. Frank Lloyd also wrote the story, which is different from many of Mr. Farnum's recent productions and affords his virtu star with a strong and pleasing role.

The story: Bob McKeever never forgets that he is the death of his mother, who died of a broken heart when her husband deserted her, because he had fallen heir to a title. His opportunity comes when he rescues the dissipated Earl of Somersfield from rough cowboys and puts him to work on his ranch. The employment, however, tends to make a man of the weaker boy and when he gets in with a group of cattle rustlers he tries to put up a fight for Bob's cattle, but is shot. Bob nurses him back to health for the school teacher, whom he loves, but who he believes to be in love with his brother. But Bob has a big heart and when he learns that the school teacher loves him for himself he is ready to forgive Earl and his son.

As a whole: Enjoyable
Story: Good

There seems an endless amount of mirth to stories depicting the eventful or uneventful lives of married folk and in "I Love Charles Albert" is offered a two-reel comedy of FOUR QUALITIES, providing a source of wholesome entertain- ment that is free from slapstick and yet full of amusement. Fritzie Ridgeway and Ann Kroman are included in Brady's supporting cast.

The story: Hubby becomes suspicious when he hears his wife mention the name of Charles Albert in her sleep and determined to find the wreck of his happiness he orders detectives to round up all the Charles Alberts in the town and bring them to his house. Imagine his chagrin when he sees that Charles Albert is a small orphan whom his wife anxious to adopt.

Mary Pickford in
"MLISS"

Artcraft comedy-drama; five parts; directed by Marshall Neilan; published May 13

As a whole: Humorous Story: Excellent Support: Good
Photography: Fine

The role of M'Liss gives Mary Pickford a further opportunity to display her talents and she does it in a most pleasing manner. Marshall Neilan has handled the production of 'M'Liss' in very capable style and judging from the way audi- ence, at the Ziegfeld Theatre, Chicago, received the picture, it will please the public.

There are many humorous situations in the telling of the story, and the subplots have been well written and contain many a laugh. And with such players in the supporting cast as Thomas Meighan, Theodore Roberts, Tully Marshall, Monte Blue and Charles Ogle, there is an assurance of capable delin- eation of the various roles.

The majority of the scenes of the picture are laid out of doors. The photography is excellent and many scenes show the depths of the canyons and rolling mountains. While the produc- tion does not surpass any of Miss Pickford's recent work, it is equally as good and provides a goodly amount of entertain- ment and fun.

The story: M'Liss is known as the wildest girl of the town because of her hoydenish antics, which are subdued somewhat upon the arrival of Charles Grey, the new school teacher. Their friendship soon ripens into a love story part of M'Liss and she endeavors to win his regard. Her father is mysteriously killed and Grey is held for the murder. M'Liss believes Grey innocent and she helps him to escape. Their is a wild chase between the sheriff and some crooks, whom he believes to be Grey, but coming upon the refugee he finds it to be Peter- son, who acted as one of the jurymen on the Grey trial, and who was trapped, confesses to the murder. Exonerated, Grey finally acknowledges his love for M'Liss.

There is a novel situation in "Mlle. Paulette" which has been entertainingly developed. Added to this is good direc- tion, a charming star, ample support, wonderful exteriors with appropriate interiors and excellent photography.

Carefully avoiding the objectionable, there is a touch of spice throughout that adds considerably to its enjoyment and detracts none from its wholesomeness. The spirit of George Cowl's story has been retained in Frank Condon's screen version. Claire Anderson's interpretation of the lead- ing role and Raymond Wells' direction.

Wallace McDonald as the scapegoat son, George Pearce as the stern father, Walter Perry and Dot Hagar as the loving servants, George Hernandez as the "balmy" individual and responsible for mixing the whole company in an eternal tangle all add amusing bits to the story.

The story: Jack Wayne rescues Paula Grey from drown- ing and taking her to his room he provides her with a bathrobe. His father, on an unexpected visit, sees Paula leaving Jack's room. He believes her to be the housemaid and sends the boy back to the city, first thinking the boy had eloped with the housemaid and then learning of his engagement to an actress. Accused of being a member of a notorious gang of crooks, the father is delighted when he finds that the actress is the charming Paula Grey, and gives the happy couple his blessing.

That "Blue Blood" is an excellent production and that its story is an interesting one goes without saying, but whether or not it will appeal to audiences at large is for exhibitors to decide.

The producer has handled the topic in a delicate and yet forceful manner. Throughout the picture bears the stamp of class, splendid acting, excellent settings and clear photography.

At no time does the picture become depressing and while it carries with it a moral, its dramatic intensity is too well developed to allow it to be looked upon as a preaching.
For the exhibitor catering to discriminating and adult audiences there is every reason to believe "Blue Blood" will be appreciated from the technical as well as the entertainment value of the picture.

Howard Hickman gives a finished performance as the wealthy man, who, despite warnings from his physician concerning his tainted blood, marries a young society girl.
Mary Mersch as the young society girl is pleasing and convincing. George Fisher as the physician does some good work. Other members of the cast registered well. J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton collaborated on the story.

The story: Despite warnings from his physician, Spencer Wellington marries Grace Valiant and their child is born a hopeless defective. Grace’s mind becomes disordered and with thoughts of helping her an orphan child is brought in, but Grace watches an opportunity in which she might kill the child. She does escape and pursues the child, but falls down an embankment. The shock of the fall restores her to her normal senses and she finds happiness in the child she sought to kill. A constant victim of his heredity, Spencer Wellington finally succumbs to the disease.

The petite Peggy Hyland is cast in the role of a pretty young lady who is captured by sea pirates and carried out upon the high seas to suffer many inconveniences at the hands of a gang of bad men. A love sick poet who overhears the Mayor dickering with the captain of the pirates, and forces him to fit up a boat that he might rescue the fair Peg plays an important part. The final marriage of Peg and her lover brings the play unto a happy end.

"Peg of the Pirates" is a pretty costume play possessing an average amount of interest. There is little "punch" to the telling of the tale and in its present form it perhaps is adapted to children’s programs and audiences desiring entertainment of a lighter vein. It proved a fair attraction to patrons of Chicago’s Alcazar Theatre this week.

The story: On the day of her wedding to the man selected by her uncle, Peg is captured by pirates. Terry, a poet in love with Peg, overpowers the captain of the pirates and the mayor dicker on the looting of the pirates and forces the mayor to fit up a ship that might go to the rescue of Peg. Meanwhile Peg is successful in saving herself from the pirates by pretending to die and then representing herself as her ghost.
Everything goes well until the pirates discover her duplicity and then it is found that they have attacked the pirate ship and after a terrific struggle, the pirates are finally subdued and Peg and Terry return to shore to be married.

There is plenty of good material in "Cyclone Higgins, D. D." and with the proper handling it might have proven a fair comedy-drama, but because of poor direction it falls short of being even fair entertainment. It does not average up to the high standard of former Bushman-Bayne productions, through no fault apparently of either Mr. Bushman or Miss Bayne.

Little Baby Ivy Ward adds a delightful touch to the picture with her pretty curls and smiling lips. The exteriors of the picture carry all the beautiful ruggedness of mountain country and throughout the photography is excellent. If an exhibitor feels sure his patrons like these stars sufficiently then he can see them in a picture not as good as usual, then it is safe to book it.

The story: Cyrus Higgins arrives in the town of Lilly-ville where preachers of the gospel are about as welcome as cyclones, but his manner of handling his tormentors gives him the privilege of remaining in the town, something which no minister before him had been able to do. He rescues Sally Phillips from the onslaughts of the village’s bully and immediately falls in love with her. He sends her away to be educated and then fears he might lose her, but she returns to him and they are happily united.

"Birds of a Feather" affords a novel two-reel comedy of unusual merit, minus slapstick, plus an original plot. It is an enjoyable story of domestic life done in high class fashion. Mabel Malone offers "Bill" Parsons pleasing support.

The story: Bill, before his marriage was a "stepper" and believes Molly, his wife, prefers checkers to cabarets. Molly, however, the life of her crowd before her marriage to Bill believes the same of her hubby. But one night they each go out with their friends of single days and through carelessness each is forced to spend the night in cells. After suspicions, quarrels and learning the nature of the other’s adventure and incidentally their true likes in life, which is decidedly not checkers.

“The Venus Model” for Mabel Normand

Goldwyn announces Mabel Normand’s next feature as “The Venus Model,” written by H. R. Durant expressly for the comdiene. It is said no expense has been spared to improve the production with richness and beauty and to surround Miss Normand with a cast which could not be improved upon. The star’s role is said to fit her like the proverbial glove.
Bessie Barriscale in a Book-Play

A brand new characterization is promised by Bessie Barriscale in her seven act adaptation of Grace Miller White's popular American novel, Rose O'Paradise, which is her forthcoming Paralta Play.

The story concerns the adventures of a little optimist, Jinny" Singleton, rightfuild heireess to a fortune left by her mother, but made victim of a chain of unpleasant circumstances by her scheming uncle. The part it is said offers her countless opportunities to score heavily, not alone with her emotional powers, but with her effervescent personality as well. She has invested the story with all the charm and sweetness that has won for her such a host of friends the world over, it is said.

Propaganda Comedy for Billie Rhodes

"My Lady Nicotine," the Mutual-Strand comedy scheduled for Mutual for May 31, is, in addition to being a clever and thoroughly funny Billie Rhodes subject, a happy piece of propaganda for "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fun," it is denounced.

The story is built around the efforts of a young wife to break her husband of smoking. Persuasion failing she tries a few tobacco cures with serious and laughable results.

The wife's persistence in the face of defeat, however, seals to the husband's sense of humor and he decides to aid all his cigars to the soldiers in France. The final scene shows a group of tobacco famished "buddies" receiving the tobacco in the trench.

Melodramatic Role for Mme. Petrova

A radical departure from the type of role usually portrayed by Madame Olga Petrova, it is said, will be found in "Tempered Steel" issued. Written especially for the leading artists by George Middleton, Madame Petrova's fourth special feature is styled an out and out melodramatic thriller. The first production to mark the contract under which Ralph de has been engaged to direct the Polish star in a series of pictures, "Tempered Steel" has all of the "punch" elements which Ince is observedly noted, it is said.

The role of Lucille Caruthers, which Petrova depicts as a young and stage-struck southern society girl who, happily finds herself involved in the mad whirl of theatrical life in Manhattan. Through a chain of peculiar circumstances she finds herself guilty in the eyes of the law of murder. The working out of the various dramatic situations Petrova built upon to furnish what is said to be acting of the most realistic variety. "Tempered Steel" is to be distributed through the exchanges of the First National Exhibitor's Circuit and will follow "The Life Mask" on the star's calendar.

The Periscope

It's a cinch the war won't be won by our swivel-chair charges.

Rupert Julian's a wise director. He has discovered that the bow of a bell-hop is regulated by the size of the tip one slips him. Ten cents gets a curt nod; twenty-five a right-angle bending of the back, and four bits a deep salaam.

In case you might slip and break the rules unconsciously, let us tip you off: Under the law no person may own war savings stamps to the value of more than $3,000. So don't overbuy. You'll get pinched if you do.

Nerve Will Win the War

We note another Broadway ace is fighting for his country, safely entrenched behind a magazine desk.

What would the country do today without such men as are in the film game. Two stories drifted in this week telling of students of the cinema division going broke, the government having failed to provide for the necessary expenditures and it being up to the motion picture financiers to loan the Signal Corps students money for carfare and "eats."

This has been a great week for the old Spanish missions. First, Metro comes through with a contribution of $10 to restore the buildings at San Fernando. In return for the privilege of taking some scenes for "The Only Road," and then the Sherman Productions contributed $300 toward an electric-light plant for the San Xavier convent at Tucson, Ariz., after "Dusty" Farnum got through with the grounds.

Joe Farnum of New York, publisher of the "Harpoun," goes Webster one better when it comes to digging up new definitions for words. In court last week Joe said a "yellow-bellied lizard" meant "slow of action," and when questioned as to the meaning of "He makes the 'million and two'" competitors along Broadway look like a rheumatic tortoise 'longside of an amorous youth of the 'gavotteing gentry' in the race for 'milady's caresses,"" said it also indicated the man in question was slow.

It's a New Expression, Anyway

(From Bd's Daily)

H. M. Horkheimer's new personal star, Mona Lisa, arrived in New York yesterday.

Vitagraph ought to call the new Anita Stewart film "Mind the Contract, Girl" instead of "Mind the Paint-Girl."

How personal some of these new films sound. For instance, Cecil de Mille has completed "Old Wives for New" and begins another, "We Can't Have Everything."

 Betting on a "Fixed" Fight

The avidity with which most Americans bought liberty bonds during the recent drive looks as though they wanted to get their money down on a sure thing.

The poor actor who cannot get into pictures needn't worry about his two weeks' notice and winter clothes. He can get four months of work abroad amusing the boys "over there" with jokes that went big over here.

Marie Dressler has discovered a new anti-fat cure—selling liberty loan bonds. She lost twenty pounds in two weeks, she says.

That honest-to-goodness press agent that waited into N. Y.'s last week and failed to land a job, after giving a company a sample of his work, simply got into the wrong office, that's all. We've seen lots worse stuff than that "Number 19" story. jold on Harkimer Henry. You're batting .300 plus along side of some of 'em.

New Booking Plan
Well Received by Local Exhbitors

Thirty-Two Theatre Owners
Unite to Form Chicago Unit

One of the most enthusiastic meetings yet held by the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation was staged in Chicago last week when representatives of this new cooperative booking plan met with local exhibitors in Fraternity Hall and formed the Chicago unit, which is to be one of twenty necessary to carrying out the venture.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the company, F. A. Brink, one of the financial backers of the project, and Byron Park of Salt Lake City, addressed the exhibitors and briefly outlined the plan which had its origin at the recent meeting called in New York City by Frank J. Rembusch of Indianapolis.

Session Well Attended

Thirty-three exhibitors attended the session and following a general discussion of the project, thirty-two of them signed up for a total of $3,150 as a guarantee that they would complete the formation of the local unit. Under the plan the amount of money necessary to be raised is approximately $8,000, and in order that no one might have a controlling interest in the unit the amount of subscriptions was limited to $100 for each theatre.

Wednesday of this week the stockholders who signed up last Friday, will meet and perfect their organization. At that meeting various officers will be elected and application made for a charter under the laws of the state of Delaware.

The subscription list was closed following the meeting last week and will not again open until the meeting on Wednesday. Exhibitors wishing to join the project may at this time, if acceptable to the majority of stockholders, purchase stock in the corporation.

Old Parkway Reopens
With New Title of Drury Lane Theatre

Completely remodeled and almost rebuilt, the old Parkway Theatre at Clark street and Diversey boulevard, Chicago, was reopened Saturday night, May 4, as the Drury Lane Theatre, under the ownership of the Drury Lane Amusement Company, and the management of W. H. Riddle, an old-time Chicago theatrical and picture house manager.

The opening show was "Hearts or Diamonds," first of the pictures of William Russell Productions, Inc., released by the Mutual Film Corporation. The house was packed for three performances. It has a capacity of 400.

Mr. Riddle went to unusual efforts to book a picture for his opening night which would be certain to please his patrons and at the close of each performance he stopped outgoing members of the audience to inquire as to the quality of the entertainment.

The Drury Lane is, to all intents and purposes, a new theatre. The lighting, heating and ventilating systems have been rebuilt, the house has been redecorated, a new screen built—the largest in Chicago—and a new $3,000 Kimball organ installed. Mr. Riddle is a veteran Chicago theatrical manager and has been for three years manager of the Bertha theatre, Chicago.

Novel Stage Setting Installed at Harper

By Manager Corbett

Manager Harry J. Corbett of the Harper Theatre, one of the finest on Chicago's South Side, sprang a pleasant surprise upon his patrons last week in the form of a beautiful and artistic stage setting.

Beginning after the performance was the final scene, manager Corbett working through until 6 o'clock the following morning, Manager Corbett installed the new setting without any interruption to performances.

Painted scenery has given way to an arrangement of soft, graceful hangings, in the center of which the screen is set. The hangings are of a shade of grey that admits of the use of colored lighting, and by making use of the lights with which the stage hangings are drawn, hid it from view.

While the orchestra is rendering the overture, a multiplicity of colored lights are constantly playing upon the stage hangings in harmony with the music. At either side of the stage is placed a stately floor lamp.

The setting was evolved by Paul G. Smith, of Screen Opinions, and installed by Mr. J. Blanding Sloan, of The Player's Workshop staff.
Universal has installed an efficiency expert, whose name is F. W. Barlet and he comes from New York. He's got good material to work on. For instance, the brigade of payers. If he can convince them that the projection room is not the place to practice voice culture, it’ll prove to us that this "efficiency" stuff isn’t bunk.

Well the Pathe staff is now complete. Rogers has with him former secretary at the Standard, Miss Mable Strick- roth, who’s a competent and everybody agrees she’s easy to look at and what other qualifications need a secre- tary have?

Quite a crowd had gathered around the window of a State street drug store, where a picture of Douglas Fairbanks, taken during the recent Liberty Loan drive, was on display. A huge Ethiopian had the center of the stage. "A powahful- man, Billy Sunday, yes sah, mighty powahful man," he commented.

If anybody tells you that there ain’t goin’ to be no summer this year just because we’ve had a few rainy days and the like, don’t believe ’em. Bill Heaney, he’s our barometer, and Bill’s made his annual pilgrimage to McHenry, III., where he signed a lease on a houseboat. Summer had lasted a summer what’s a little rain more or less to a houseboat?

We’ve suspected Joe Hopp of many things, but we never even suspicioned him of nourishing a secret aspiration to become a vocalist. His first public appearance was made in the crowded drawing room of a sleighing car, Minne- apolis bound. He held his audience— they couldn’t get out. The song, “The smoke blew up the chimney just the same, was in it the same key sometimes twice in succession.

Lynn S. Card of the U. S. Exhibitors Booking Corporation has been in our city looking after the interests of his company and also, by way of diversion, disposing of state rights to the Lewis feature, “Nine-Tenths of the Law.”

As a personal investment, Frank J. Fialherty, manager of the local Foursquare office, has relieved Mr. Card of some of the production, the same being Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Min- nesota, North and South Dakota.

It is said that one can learn something new every day if one wills. Paul Smith, editor of the esteemed S. O., has found out that that "guest register" which has been everything over Pathe office is the time record for the employees.

Martin Sachs, manager of the Lub- lin theatre, Frizzi’s nickelodeon theatre, is the latest one to answer the call to the colors. Martin’s got the right idea, too. He’s making plans for "after the war.”

It’s thought that she'll be over when Martin Sachs the Huns.

Phil Solomon saw us in the Kline offices t’other day, took us over in one corner and whispered in our ear that "The Unbeliever" was booked for 104 days solid. Then he started in to list those who would show it—Ascher Bros., Lubkin & Trinx, the Wood- lawn, Schindler’s, Century, Crawford.

and a whole lot more—and now we finished wondering how he had it down to 104 days.

A lot of the out-of-town boys were in the city last week, including Norman Samwick, owner of the Amusement and Family Theatres of Clinton, Ia.; J. D. Cuddihy of the Calumet Theatre, Cal- met, Mich.; Manager Koppen of the Colonial Theatre at Rock Island; B. J. Vogt, owner of several theatres in Co- lumbus City and South Whitley, Ind.; J. M. Oberg of the Gause City, W. E. Obridge of the Cort and Lyric Theatres, Sycamore, Ill., and Manager Bostwick of the Merrill, Milwaukee.

Messrs. Dollman and Vandawalker of the Doll-Van Film Corporation, will leave for New York May 10th over the state right here with the intention of adding to their list of successes. A special trade showing of their latest ac- quisition, "A Grain of Dust," was held in the Vitagraph projection room Mon- day of this week.

On the Firin’ Line

Dell Goodman, who left the ranks of Pathe salesmen to join the national army, writes in his latest Barrar correspondent that he is almost discouraged—that he is a private still. You’re lucky you ain’t in the guard house, Dell, private stills don’t go no more in the army than blind pigs in dry territory.

Jack Camp, “Handsome Jack” selling Metros out of Milwaukee, arrived in Chi- cago last week with the announcement that he is the father of a bouncing baby boy. His chest was extended to such dimensions that a traffic cop informed him he would have to go to the city hall and get a parade permit if he wanted to promenade the fair streets of our great city.

Sam Norvel, former Wisconsin sales- man for Vitagraph and now peddling the same line in Chicago, has his eye on a bond they sold for a quarter. He says he is going into the army. When he gets across, the Europeans will think more than ever that we are a nation of spend- thrifts.

Winnie Delo, booker of the Artcraft, Milwaukee, office, said to be the smallest booker in captivity, he measuring a few inches under five feet, lost his wallet on the train. It contained $80 and Winnie was nearly prostrated when some honest fellow returned it to him. After a pleasant talk with the head of the American game with some of the film fraternity, Delo had again lost the contents of his wallet. There were no apparent signs of suspicion of the man and Winnie had to float a loan for $10 to get home.

Clay Bond, city salesman for Artcraft is trying to corner all the business on the north side and in his frantic chase for the elusive dollar has purchased a Ford car. Clay has another who is erasing the same territory with Pathe pro- ductions, says he can call on three cus- tomers while Clay is cranking the darn thing.

Life has its little compensations. Wil- liam J. McGrath, advertising solicitor for the esteemed M. P. news, is small in stature, but when the sign painter got through with the door of his new office he was a darn sight bigger than the publication he represents.

When Morrie Salkin lived at Sixty- ninth street and Prairie avenue, it was his only home. It is said to arrive home in the evening about 11 o’clock. Now that he has moved to Forty-third street and Boul, Mich., it is rumored that he don’t go up to his office after 9 o’clock in the morning. Far be it from us to mix in family affairs, but if he ever mentioned moving into the loop, we’d view it with suspicion.

Van Gelder, one of Pathe’s salesmen, was mistaken by a film manufacturer the other day, to be George Ovey of the Ovey company. “He realized his er- ror,” said Van Gelder, “before he slipped me George’s check.”

Little “Mc,” over to Foursquare, says that now he knows “Mac” is Scotch because the latter will not invest three cents in a stamp to write a letter. We don’t think it’s money “Mc,” it’s a stiff proposition to typewrite a letter when you use the Hunt system.

Mary MacLane to Enter Vaudeville

Mary MacLane, who bares her love affairs in the Essanay “Journey’s End,” created considerable excitement both in the film world and among the general public by mysterious disappearance from the Plants Hotel, Chicago, recently.

For more than a week no trace of her could be found. Finally she turned up and called. She’s announced. She’ll hang out the Auditorium Hotel under an assumed name in order to get a rest from her arduous work in filming the Essanay pictures. She’s preparing to go into vaudeville, it is said.

The Hayakawa Productions, which are to be released through the Haworth Pictures Corporation, are understood to be for the Haworth Company, with whom the Hayworth company has entered into a leasing arrangement.

A definite deal was reached last week by Jesse Hayakawa and F. J. Hawkins, vice-president and general manager of the Haworth Pict- ures Corporation, and Hayakawa and his company began work of production at Universal City this week.

Thrift Stamp Day
Latest Innovation
Of N. Y. Theateeman

"Thrift Stamp Day" was inaugurated at the Broadway Theatre, New York City, during the presentation of "The Bride's Awakening," on Wednesday,
May 15.

On that day the only money accepted at the box office in exchange for tickets was the small amount demanded by the government as the war tax on theatre admissions.

The idea of "Thrift Stamp Day" belongs to Manager Nathan of the theatre, who worked out all of the details. He arranged for the placing of the booths, at which thrift stamps were sold in the lobby of the theatre by members of the Mayor's Woman's Committee on National Defense.

The plan of Manager Nathan was made possible through the offer of President Carl Laemmle of Universal to accept all of the thrift stamps received at the Broadway box office.

Screen Telegram Shows
Two Big Film Fires

The destruction of two big motion pictures by fire are shown in Screen Telegram No. 2, scheduled for May 12 by the Mutual Film Corporation.

The blaze at Waukegan, Ill., which wiped out a dozen government warehouses and destroyed the clearing house which dangled from a crane, as well as the destruction of 40,000/feet of re-tired film, was caught by Screen Telegram cameramen. The fire which destroyed six pieces of the Lasky company at Hollywood, Cal., is pictured in the same reel.

Four war pictures show scenes from the world great war taken in the Alps. An interesting picture in this section shows the mountain dogs hauling munitions and troops traveling on skis through the mountains.

Other pictures from France showing methods adopted by Allies to guard against German spies are also in the section. The operation of aircraft guns, are shown in Screen Telegram No. 20.

Other war scenes show the wreckage caid by the bombardment of the Huns in a village in Lorraine, France, and the people returning after the bombardmant to hunt for homes.

William Fox star sold $7,000 worth of bonds hour affair, Miss Bara had disposed of a total of $40,000 of the third issue officially received by Liberty Loan Committee representing the film industry.

Friction Between Regina Officials
Over Censorship

The Regina Board of Trade has protested against the close co-operation between the distributors of Oshawa and the one censor for the Province of Sastatchewan, whose office is located at Winnipeg, the capital of Manitoba, in placing Regina, the capital of Saskatchewan. The Regina board has denounced the "shameful fact" that Saskatchewan accepts as sterling, face value, the Manitoba censorship of moving pictures. The statement is made that Saskatchewan was to be entirely independent from that of Manitoba and there is a desire for the transfer of the censor's office from Winnipeg to Regina.

This expression of opinion, coming as it does from a source outside of the moving picture business, is highly inter-teresting in the friction which has long existed in Winnipeg between the Manitoba censors and local film men. Many decisions of the Manitoba board have vexed Winnipeg, exchange managers and now an influential body of men in Saskatchewan has protested against the "dictation" of the Manitoba Board of Censors in the Saskatchewan censorship matters.

On the other hand, if the Saskatchewan censor's office is moved from Win-ipeg to Regina, the film exchanges will find it necessary to open branch offices in Regina. This may not be a desirable development at the present moment, in view of the great increase in federal and other taxes.

Two New Theatres

Orono, Ontario, a small village near Oshawo, Ontario, now boasts a regular moving picture theatre. Port Burwell, Ontario, also has a new moving picture theatre, which is being operated by L. A. Crawford. The Royal Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, which has had many ups and downs during the past three or four years, was recently sold by auction. The premises are to be converted for other purposes, it is announced.

Leo Devaney, formerly a well-known newspaperman of Toronto, has joined the staff of the Fox Film Corporation in Canada. Mr. Devaney was, until recently, the assistant sporting editor of the Toronto Globe.

No Exemptions From Tax

Howard Douglas, of Edmonton, chief moving picture censor for the Province of Alberta, has ruled that there are no exemptions for the operation of the Amusement Tax Act, which went into effect in that province on May 1. He points out that even soldiers in uniform, including returned warriors, are required to pay the tax when entering a place of amusement, although in all other Canadian Provinces soldiers in uniform are exempt from the amusement war tax. Mr. Douglas has also declared that all passes and complimentary tickets must be accompanied by the tax stamps applicable to a theatre. Mr. Douglas has notified Calgary exhibitors to this effect.

Exhibitors Scored;
Show Uncensored
City Clean-Up Film

The managers of twenty-eight moving picture theatres in Winnipeg, Manitoba, have been found guilty of exhib-ing an uncensored moving picture. The film in question was a one-reel subject which was released by a civic committee in charge of a clean-up campaign.

Charles H. Webster, secretary of the committee, when called upon for an explanation, said: "We had no time to run over the film or to do anything else but give it a chance. Of course, the censor board can close the shows and arrest us, but they will not do it because there is a good coming. If they do this, the Province will lose a couple of days' re-cipts from the Amusements Tax Act." It was pointed out that the members of the Clean-Up Committee were liable to arrest and prosecution over the matter and local newspapers took up the discussion editorially. No actual pro-cussions are expected, however.

T. A. D. Bevington, of Winnipeg, recently appointed chairman of the Manitoba Board of Moving Picture Censors, has been given a new job by the Provicional Government. He is now head of the Provincial Amusement Tax Detartment. T. Hedley Garland, who has been in charge of this department since its inception in March, is now chief collector of the new department.

A new chairman for the Manitoba Censor Board is to be chosen shortly.

After operating the Strand Theatre, a 200-seat house, for several months, Snider Bros., of Peterboro, Ontario, prominent local jewelers, have arranged to erect a brand new moving picture theatre to seat the hundred people Contracts have been let and the work is to be rushed to completion. The old theatre is to be closed permanently after the opening of the new house.

Two exhibitors of Hamilton, Ontario, have decided to switch from short programe releases to five-reel features. They are: David Stewart, of the Red Mill, and George Swanwick, of the Princess. The latter recently paid a visit to New York, after which he signed a contract for a year's supply of Vitagraph pictures. Manager Stewart has booked a number of Bluebird and other Universal features. One reason given for the change is the growing shortage of tworeelers on the market.

NEW WAR EXCISE TAX
OF 15 CENTS PER REEL PER DAY PROPOSED

On top of the move by the Canadian government to increase the duty on film imports from two cents to five cents per lineal foot, making the duty on a reel of 1,000 feet no less than $50, came the provision on Oct. 24, made for the House of Commons at Ottawa, the cap-bital, by Hon. A. K. McLean, acting Minister of Finance, regarding a special levy on each reel of film on each day that it is used of fifteen cents per day. Hon. Mr. McLean's resolution, which was presented on Tuesday, May 7, reads as follows: "That it is expedient to provide that a war excise tax be levied, collected and paid on all cinematograph films and uncinematograph films, for each day that such film is used. Mr. McLean moved that his motion be referred to the Finance Committee of the House of Commons and that the Committee be empowered to confer with the Finance Committee of the House of Commons in Ottawa, and other cities went to Ottawa on Wednesday, May 8, to protest against the new assessments as proposed. The film men say that they will stand for an increase of not more than one cent per foot in import duty on films and no more. The war excise tax is out of the question entirely.

After successfully organizing the Montreal Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association, Al Bigelow, one of the most influential members of the organization, has resigned to become controller of branches with the Specialty Film Import Limited, Canadian Pathé distributors. Before his resignation from the association, Mr. Beaulne had secured the memberships of forty of the district's exhibitors during the two months that he had been in office, Mr. Beaulne had been active along many lines for the benefit of the association.

Eugene LeFevre has resigned as manager of the Crystal Palace Theatre, Montreal, and has been succeeded by another manager who joined the Montreal staff of the Speciality Film Import Limited. He was formerly with various Montreal exchanges.

The Montreal offices of both the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, and the General Film Company (Canada), Limited, have been moved to more suitable premises. The Famous Players' of-office is now located at 437 Bleury street, while the General has moved from 243 Bleury street to No. 6 McGill College avenue. The General company is busily engaged in the handling of Kleine releases in addition to its own pictures.

The exchange managers of Montreal, Quebec, organized an Exchange Managers' Association recently at a largely attended meeting given by the Royalton Hotel, Montreal. James O'Loughlin was -elected president of the new organization, which immediately got busy on problems having to do with the new duty and war taxes in the Dominion.

At a second session, held on May 6, an address was heard from F. R. Len- non, of Toronto, representing the Ex- change Managers' Association of that city. It was also decided to help with the organization of an association for the Maritime Provinces. Messrs. Mar- getts and Smith, of St. John, N. B., came to Montreal to get pointers for such a body. Further discussion took place at a third meeting several days later.

Pres. Wilson Applauds Farnum's Loan Film

Tremendous applause from leaders in governmental officialdom, including President Woodrow Wilson himself, is said, greeted the exhibition recently at Keith's Washington, D. C., theatre, of William Farnum's Liberty Loan boosting film. The picture was made at the William Fox studios on the Coast under the direction of Frank Lloyd, in two weeks, and half-hours snatched during the period that "True Blue" was in work.

The celluloid playlet carries a stirring appeal to everyone to do his utmost in putting the third Loan strongly and solidly over the top. And aside from its purely patriotic aspect, it is said to be a highly interesting featurette in itself.

Mutt, Chaplin's Dog Dies of Broken Heart

"Mutt," the little white mongrel that played so important a part with Charlie Chaplin in "A Dog's Life," is dead. After a siege of illness lasting four weeks the petted idol of the noted screen comedian "cashed in," having died of a broken heart, it is said, mourning the absence of his friend.

Denied the loving attention of his master, who has been touring the country in the interests of the Liberty Loan, "Mutt" refused to eat and though he had the services of a veterinarian the doctor found no remedy for the little dog's broken heart. Charlie was the only one who could feed "Mutt." He could not get used to the comedian's absence and no one could make him understand that Charlie would be back some day.

"Mutt" jumped into fame over night. He appeared at the Chaplin studio under his groom, shaking and cowering and was taken in and befriended by Chaplin. It wasn't long before they became fast friends and he followed Charlie about from morning until night. His little bits in "A Dog's Life" scored an instant hit with followers of the screen.

Ebony Film Corp. Signs New Star

Mattie Edwards, former vaudeville headliner, has been added to the Ebony Film comedy forces at the Chicago studios. Miss Edwards is an experienced screen actress, having been featured for over two years by Latham, when her com- pany was producing comedies enacted by colored comedians.

Miss Edwards' first picture is "Mercy, the Mummy Mumbled," prepared for the screen by Bob Horner, a story by G. A. Frampers, and directed by Ralph G. Phillips.

The theatre has been entirely re-decorated from pit to dome and will play a policy of the "rigid" policy as the Two-Rigids manager. J. Flader, William Seitz, an-theater manager the large regular picture booking through the exchanges of Paramount, Arco, Metro and Bluebird. The resident manager will be Charles Riffe.

The manager of the Murray Hill Theatre, Mr. Krummeck will still conduct the Krummeck Studio, situated in the Savoy Theatre Building on West 43rd street, Manhattan, where he has established a sign painting shop catering to the mercantile and theatrical profession.

Exhibitors and Operators
Ask License Law Change

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Managers of moving picture theatres in the city and operators of moving picture machines has united in petitioning the city commissioners to amend certain ordinances relative to examination and licensing operators so that conditions now said to be working a hardship to the theatres may be removed and the present ordinance on inspection of operators must pass a rigid examination before a special board. It is sought to have this board supplanted by one which can not license without salary, who could permit operators with but one year's experience to regularly occupy the projection booths.

The petition stated that the war had depleted the ranks of the operators to such an extent that it was almost impossible to obtain such men as the ordinance now required. The petition was referred to the examining board.

Operator Severely Burned

In Chester, S. C. Blaze

Chester, S. C.—Fire at the Chestonian, a moving picture theater here, caused $1,500 loss. The blaze was kept to the operator's room, which proved to be perfectly fireproof, only a little smoke getting into the theater. The theater was not occupied and all easily got out. Two costly new machines were badly damaged and a six-reel feature picture was burned.

Failure of the fire protector on one of the machines to work caused the film to ignite. L. B. Richardson, operator, fought the blaze bravely with fire extinguishers until it got beyond his control. F. M. Abeel is manager of the Chestonian.

'Frisco Man Promoted

J. W. Allen, formerly manager of the San Francisco office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been promoted to the position of special representative to Exchanges, and has taken up activities in connection with his new post in New York. Myron H. Lewis, formerly manager of the Los Angeles exchange has been made manager of the 'Frisco office, and J. J. Halstead, formerly assistant manager at Los Angeles, has been made manager of that office.

More Arrests Made in Sunday Closing Fight

Sandusky, Ohio—Commissioner Carl H. Stubbig is keeping up his war on Sunday amusements. In municipal court he has sworn out new warrants for the manager of the Sandusky Theatre, and George Schade, William F. Seitz, Jr., and W. H. Pope, operators. All are charged with having kept their respective places open on Sunday.

Two weeks ago the first warrants were sworn out. A week ago the second accusations were lodged, and these are the third.

New Branch Managers

Appointed by General

H. K. Evans, well known in theatrical and moving picture circles, has assumed charge of the General Film Company's Minneapolis branch. He was formerly manager of the Pathe exchange at St. Louis.

Irving C. Jacocks, a former General Film employee, has returned to assume charge of the eastern branch of the New Haven, General offices, succeeding W. V. Hart, who will, in the future, be attached to the New York City exchange.

H. H. Elder has been transferred from the St. Louis office, which he managed for a long time, and is now in charge of the Washington office of General.

First National to Move

About June 1 the head offices of First National Exhibitors' Circuit will be moved from 15 East 41st street, New York, to larger quarters occupying the entire eighth floor of the new building at 6 and 8 West 44th street.

This change has been necessitated, it is announced, by the steady increase in the volume of business carried on by the circuit since it was established.

With the publication of the first of the $1,000,000 Chaplin comedies and the taking over of "Tarzan of the Apes" and "My Four Years in Germany" for distribution throughout the United States and Canada, the suite of offices on 41st street soon became too crowded for comfort or efficiency, it is said.

Tuttle Made Manager

Beginning May 6, the Select Pictures' branch office in Atlanta came under the management of T. O. Tuttle, who is well known in Southern film circles on account of the splendid work which he accomplished in this field for George Kleine System. Until joining Select Mr. Tuttle had charge of Kleine's Atlanta and New Orleans offices.

Another Company to Handle Features

The Liberty Distributing Corporation has been formed with offices at 229 Seventeenth avenue, New York. P. E. Meyer, formerly attached to the sales forces of E. J. Flader's "Feature Show" Corporation, and New York exchange manager for the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation, will be in charge as manager.

The first two subjects to be distributed by the new concern are "Open the Law," in which Mitchell Lewis portrays the leading role. This production already has been booked for a full run of one hundred days over the Loew and Fox circuits. The second feature will be "The Devil's Playground," in which Vera Mitchelken, the musical comedy star, portrays the leading role.

Exhibitor's Briefs

Albany, Mo.—F. A. Flader, formerly connected with the Birdwing Photoplay Company in New York, has leased the Liberty Theatre this city, and contemplates operating it as a first-class motion picture theatre.

Batavia, Iowa.—Ed. Sturgis and sons will start a motion picture theatre here shortly.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The West Allegheny Motion Picture Company, on 25th and Allegheny, has been purchased by Frederick G. Nixon-Erdlinger from Albert M. Greenfield, Inc., at a consideration of $30,000, $25,000 of which is assessed.

Booneville, Iowa.—E. R. Steel, proprietor of the Star Theatre at Owensville, Ind., has purchased the Star Theatre of this city and will change it as a high-class motion picture theatre.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Hodupp-Towne Photoplay Company has been incorporated with a capital stock representation from Indiana of $6,500. V. H. Hodupp of Indianapolis has been named as the company's agent.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—After being closed since some time February, the Olympic Theatre has again opened its doors to this city's public, thoroughly remodeled and enlarged. It is announced by the proprietors, Messrs. Boziotes and Antonopolis, that the cost of remodeling reached the $175,000 mark. The opening feature was the Fox production, "Rough and Ready," with William Farnum.

Reading, Pa.—The Rex Theatre has been taken over by Walter C. Kantner of this city. The house will be entirely renovated by its new owner and the name changed to Liberty.

Tulsa, Okla.—The motion picture operators of this section held their annual convention in this city. According to an announcement there was a large delegation
First National Books "Tarzan" Film For 6,009 Days

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit has closed bookings on "Tarzan of the Apes," the company announces, up to May 10 totaling 6,009 days. These figures are said to top anything on record by a margin of picture annals, when the fact is taken into consideration that "Tarzan" was issued but two months ago.

Realizing the sure-fire box-office possibilities of the film, many of the leading exhibitors have preferred to play it on a percentage basis, and have cashed in proportion to the brains and energy they have invested in its promotion. Whenever a flat rental price has been paid by a big house the amount has been worthy of comment, it is said. In Los Angeles, for instance, T. L. Talley, who holds the First National franchise for southern California, closed a cash contract with Emil Kehrlin, Jr., proprietor of the Kinema Theatre, for $3,500 for two weeks' run.

"Tarzan" is also playing profitable weekly engagements at Toledo, Canton, and Youngstown, Ohio; the Empire Theatre, San Antonio; the Rialto, Tulsa, Oklahoma, and the Princess, Sioux City, Iowa.

New Ebony Series Announced by General

The Ebony Comedies, General Film reports, have gained wide popularity in the last few weeks because of their novel and forcible presentation. The use of these subjects in the same manner as a black-face act is used in vaudeville has brought excellent results.

World Film Aids Recruiting

One of the recent World-Pictures, "The Cross-Bearer," is being used with great success, it is said, by the Naval Recruiting Bureau, which operates under the direction of Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, as a means of procuring naval recruits. An unique plan is put into operation in this work. The picture is flashed on the screen and is then stopped at some scenic showing and treating the audience of the weakness of the Belgians by the German invaders and the speaker, who is conducting the recruiting rally, asks the audience if they will stand up for America. If they do not they are urged to enlist at once.

At the Star Casino, in New York City, over 100 recruits were secured at a single showing of the picture, it is said.

Russell Productions In Wide Demand

The increasing popularity of William Russell is reflected in his first-run bookings of "Hearts or Diamonds," which he is producing of his own company, William Russell Productions, Inc.

"Hearts or Diamonds," a strenuous type of rapid-fire action, has been described as "The Midnight Trail," "In Bad" and "New York Luck" has made him solid bookings. Exhibitors who are looking for pictures with a "full body" of action and "Hearts or Diamonds" has established a record for first-run bookings.

Among the prominent theatres which have booked this exciting drama of mystery for first-run are; The Stanley, New York; The Liberty, Seattle; The T. & D., San Francisco; Tom Moore, Washington; The Strand, Denver; The Butterfly, Milwaukee; The Green Mill, Dallas, Texas; The Rialto, Indianapolis, Ind.; The Park's, S. F.; The Palace, New Orleans, and The Strand, Cleveland.

The Woodlawn Theatre and the Drury Lane Theatre, new high-class neighborhood houses in Chicago, both opened with "Hearts or Diamonds" and reported sold-out houses and enthusiastic comments.

Hayakawa Company Uses Famous Tea Garden

The Japanese tea garden in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, was in possession of Sessue Hayakawa and his company for an entire day last week and a number of the prettiest scenes of the current Hayakawa production were filmed there.

Sidney, one of the largest and most attractive outside of the realm of the Mikado, for years has been one of the chief attractions to the thousands who have discovered the pleasant grounds. M. Haga, owner of the tea garden, was acquainted personally with Hayakawa and Tsuru Aoki, his wife, in Japan years ago and gladly turned the place over to the star and his players when asked if he would consent to their using it.

Director Worthington writes W. J. Connelly, treasurer of the Hawthor Pictures Corporation, through which the pictures starring Hayakawa are to be released, that the owner of the tea garden placed every facility at the disposal of the company and all his pretty Japanese girls were permitted to appear in several of the scenes.

Pathé to Distribute "Moral Suicide" Film

Following the announcement that under Pathé's new feature policy, big productions made by independent concerns would be distributed through Pathé a statement this week carries the news that Pathé has acquired from the Graphic Film Corporation rights to "Moral Suicide."

"Moral Suicide" is Ivan Abramson's dramatic interpretation of the Moralscope problem with a cast including John Mason, Leah Baird, Anne Luther, Hazel Washburn, Sidney Mason, Alan Hale, Jack McLean, Claire Whitney and William Lamp.
Development of Mazda Light Projection

By Albert C. Derr, E. E. Ph. D.

(Copyrighted)

The arc light has passed through a varied history of changes and improvements, until today it has evidently reached its zenith. The improved degrees of efficiency or higher screen illumination have depended upon the various kinds and forms of control. First came the ordinary rheostat or choke-coil, then the oil rheostat, a combination of oil and choke-coil. This was followed by the compensator, which proved to be quite an advancement, then the mercury arc rectifier, motor-set, rectifier motor-generator set, and rectifier and rotary converter, changing the alternating current to direct current. The last four methods are costly and the equipment expensive.

The best carbons used with the arc light were made in Germany. When the European war broke out, shipments were discontinued. Many and varied attempts and experiments have failed to develop a very satisfactory carbon. Necessity, the mother of inventions, then suggested a new turn, which has resulted in developing and standardizing the new Mazda nitrogen lamps.

The two divisions of the General Electric Company have developed satisfactory lamps. The National Lamp Works developed a 20 ampere, 30 volt or 600 watt lamp which is very satisfactory. They have been working on a 50 ampere, 12 volt or 960 watt lamp. This, however, is not ready to offer to the public. The Edison department have developed a 20 ampere, 30 volt or 600 watt, and the 30 ampere, 25 volt or 750 watt. The Westinghouse Lamp Company have developed a 20 ampere, 30 volt or 600 watt, 30 ampere, 25 volt or 750 watt and a 30 ampere, 40 volt or 1200 watt.

The perfection of the lamps and putting them into actual satisfactory operation have proved to be two very separate, distinct and difficult problems. The developing of the lamps was one problem, putting them into actual, satisfactory operation was quite another. The question of proper housing and control proved a more vital question than at first anticipated. The old apparatus was too crude, of wrong voltage and the lamp-houses unsuitable, hence cannot be used.

Comparing the Mazda lamp in its latest perfected form with the necessary control apparatus, with the harsh, crude arc light, presents the comparison of the large, old-fashioned wooden wheel hall clock and the most perfect full jewelled ladies' watch.

Many problems enter into the Mazda question. When the line voltage on the arc-light was low, a higher adjustment, or in other words, jumping a portion of the resistance, produced the satisfactory results. This was often accomplished by tampering with the resistance. A difference of 5 or 10 amperes, or 10 to 20 volts did not hurt the lamp. With the Mazda light proposition it is different.

To explain fully we will use the 20 ampere, 30 volt or 600 watt lamp, as all others work on the same principle. The filament of the lamp burns at a very high temperature and when passing much beyond the 600 watt point, will soon burn out a lamp, the average life of which is estimated at 100 hours. Ten to twenty watts above the 600 watt point materially shortens the life of the lamp. At 19 amperes of 570 watts there is a 25 per cent reduction of light.

To take care of the variation in line voltage, different flaring points at 105, 110 and 115 volts have been used in different transformers. This had to be mechanically adjusted, by plugging in one point to the other, which has proved that a difference of 5 volts is entirely too great, either giving a loss of 10 to 30 per cent or burning out the filament. Floating adjustments have not proved sufficiently stabilizing. Automatic adjustment or fool-proof, also leave too wide a range, with practically the same injurious results. The closest experiments yet made with automatic, have proved that the amount of energy caused by the difference of one ampere is not sufficient to properly adjust, to burn at accurate 6 0.0 volts. Other difficulties have been that the operator, wishing to increase the light has gone above the 20 ampere point and burned out the lamps, which cost $6.00.

As we are the most familiar with the Lebel transformer, built by the Imperial Electrical Company, of Union City, Indiana, we will describe their overcoming of these difficulties. We have found this transformer meeting the exacting requirements, the best of anything found up to the present time.

The following types are being made:

Type A—Two unit for 20 ampere, 30 volt or 600 watt for two machines. Extra controller for the second machine.

Type F—Single unit for 20 ampere, 30 volt or 600 watt for one machine.

Type C—Two unit for 30 ampere, 25 volt or 750 watt for two machines. Extra controller for second machine.

Type D—Single unit for 30 ampere, 25 volt or 750 watt for one machine.

Type E—Two unit for 30 ampere, 40 volt or 1,200 watt for two machines. Extra controller for second machine.

Type F—Single unit for 30 ampere, 40 volt or 1,200 watt for one machine.

It utilizes a shell type auto-transformer, the most rugged and durable type known with special characteristics, which has been developed and perfected by an electrical wizard, who has already presented to the electrical world a number of satisfactory and surprising developments.

Each transformer is equipped with a very accurate ammeter, built for a special amperage. The transformer takes care of the variations... in line voltage, ranging from 100 to 125 volts. The amperage is regulated by a controlling knob, making a series of contacts from 10 to 12 amperes, according to the line voltage. This delivers a cherry-red light, permitting the accurate focusing of the filament and also heating it. The next step is 15 amperes, then advances by steps. By a special arrangement the final delivery of current is made from the secondary, which, responding to the turn of the controller, accurately delivers the proper amperage and voltage to the lamp at all points carrying the proper ratio.

Six types of transformers are now standardized. Two are for the 600 watt, two for the 750 watt and two for the 1,200 watt. Types B, D and F, respectively, are for 600, 750 and 1,200 watts, controlling one machine only. These last are built in a single unit, containing the transformers and regulator, weighing less than 20 pounds and intended to be bolted on the wall immediately in front of the operator, below the opening through which he views the screen. It is only necessary to see that the indicator is at the 20 ampere point at all times. If line voltage advances, the must turn it back. If too low, turn it forward. Types A, C and E are made, two units, namely, transformer and controlling board for two machines for the moving picture booth of a theatre.

The cut illustrating type A shows the transformer. Types C and E are identical in appearance. One set of wires leads to the incoming line. At the other terminal they branch and lead to each of the two controlling boards, which are the same in appearance as types B and are located the same in the booth.

Type A transformer in an endurance test at the factory, carried a double load of 40 amperes for two hours, and at the Underwriters' Laboratories for three hours. As a destructive test it carried 120 amperes for about an hour without doing any injury.

The 600 watt is for short throws; the 750 watt for medium and the 1,200 for long throws. Alternating and direct current have the same effect on Mazda lamps, hence the alternating and transformer should always be used. Direct current requires a rheostat with 72½ per cent of wastage.

The loss in transforming is about 2½ to 7 per cent, the Lea-Bel loss being 5½ per cent. By actual light measurement the 20 ampere, 30 volt Mazda gave the equivalent of the 15 ampere alternating current light. The light from the arc is white and harsh. The Mazda is a yellowish tinge similar to the effect on the gold fibre screen. It is soft, penetrating and as easy on the eye as the front seat as in the rear.

The transformer being sensitive in its operation, care must be taken in following instructions in installing. When built for the 110 volt, 60 cycle, no mistake must be made in permitting it to go on a 220 volt connection, which would burn out the lamp and transformer. The two wires marked “line” must lead to the incoming line wires through a switch. The remaining two, on Types B, D and E must lead to either side of the separate controlling board, and the remaining two wires go to the lamp. Controller should always be at the low focusing point at the beginning, then gradually advanced. When these instructions are followed, there will absolutely give and deliver satisfactory results.

Additional helpful features are a close adjustment of the reflector. An arc light loses 75 per cent of the light in the lamphouse without the reflector the Mazda does the same. With the reflector only 30 per cent is lost. In adjusting, the reflector filament must be thrown between the filament of the lamp. If thrown on it, it increases the heat and causes the filament to buckle. If the reflector is 150th of an inch out of adjustment it will lose 15 per cent of the light. Adjusting in this manner, about 1/16th of an inch in you lose 30 per cent. If 1/16th of an inch out you lose 40 per cent, hence careful adjustment is necessary.

A metallic face screen, such as aluminum, gold fibre or mirror screen, add to the brilliancy and clearness of the picture. The specially made prismatic condenser also utilizes a greater percentage of the light, the center of light being a bulb's eye diverges, while the prismatic rings converge, thus overlapping.

An interesting feature is the saving in current. A 55 amperes alternating current arc lamp consumes about 600 watts, 650 watts, and 800 watts in the 600, 750 and 1,200 watt machines, respectively.

The Motograph has a very satisfactory lamp house of this kind. The Powers lamp house is arranged to hold two lamps, and instantly turns from one to the other. The Simplex lamp house is not quite ready, but will be soon.

The “Nu-Movie-Lite,” invented and furnished by H. M. Livingston, of Peoria, Illinois, is an adapter for reducing the inside of the Simplex lamp houses and used with the plano condensers. The Lea-Bel lamp house is equipped with Mazda lamp, reflector, prismatic lens and screw adjustment operated from the outside, complete and ready to replace the arc lamp house on the Simplex, Powers and Motograph back to 1912 models.

The benefits to be derived are: (1) Saving in current; (2) steady, soft, smooth light; (3) no gasses or dust, and less heat for the operator; (4) less danger and lower insurance rate.

Nicholas Power Company Improves Cameragraph Projection Machine

The Nicholas Power Company announces that since April first all Power's Cameragraphs are, without addition to list price, equipped with the Grip-o, glass peepholes in the upper magazine, both sides so that the operator can look through and see how much film remains at any much film remains at any time, together with a revolving spindle in upper magazine. All these improvements are good and will be appreciated by operators. Especially will be the glass in the upper magazine. This glass does not only in some degree reduce the fireproof qualities of the magazine, it is said.

United Theatres Endorsed by Many Western Exhibitors

H. J. Brown, of Idaho, Contracts for Four Theatres—Urges Friends to Follow

The enthusiasm with which exhibitor-members of United Picture Theatre of America, Inc., are aiding in the spread of the doctrine of cooperative operation is reflected, it is said, in the letters that pour into the United offices. Several of them have composed form letters which they are sending to their friends and fellow-exhibitors endorsing the United project and urging affiliation.

By no means the least interesting of these letters is that which has been sent out by Herman J. Brown, the president of the Exhibitors’ League of Idaho, to his acquaintances in the business. In it he states: “The United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., is destined to make the opening of a new era in our business. There is no company in the field with which it cannot compete, provided you give it your support. It is the most clean-cut business proposition that has ever been offered a retail dealer in America. The funds of this company are protected. If it does not raise enough capital ninety percent of the money turned in by you will be returned to you. Could anything be more fair? I earnestly urge every exhibitor in the state of Idaho and my friends everywhere to join United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., even if they have to go to the bank and borrow the money.

Mr. Brown adds, “I have contracted for four theatres under my management, am receiving no bonus of any sort, or the promise of any office or any other inducement, but I am working for the success of the project merely because of my confidence in its ultimate success, based on a thorough investigation, and because of my belief that it will benefit the industry.

Similarly, L. W. Brophy, secretary of the American Exhibitors’ Association of Oklahoma, writes that he has investigated both the personnel of the company and the standing of its depository and that he has found them of the highest order.

A. J. Gillingham, one of Michigan’s foremost showmen, also informs his exhibitor friends that he “knows the proposition is going over and going over big, not only because some of the biggest men in the business are affiliating themselves with it but because the whole plan is based on thoroughness.”

Meanwhile, the organization of the personnel of the United organization is rapidly nearing completion, it is announced. President Berst will in a few days be ready to give out the names of the full Advisory Board.

Gerard Feature Helps Strand Theatre Liberty Bond Sales

According to the figures compiled by the New York Federal Reserve District, the Strand Theatre, New York, led all other motion picture houses in Greater New York in the amount of Liberty Loan bonds sold in the recent drive. This enviable record, it is said, was made chiefly through the agency of “My Fours Years in Germany,” which was shown during the final week of the campaign, the entire gross income from the Gerard picture being converted into bonds.

Following the close of the double run of “My Fours Years in Germany” at the Knickerbocker Theatre and the Strand, the production was shown during the week of May 5 simultaneously at the Crescent Theatre, Brooklyn, the Academy of Music and the Mount Morris Theatre, to record crowds, it is said.

Goldwyn Pictures On Board Transports

Goldwyn Pictures are to be used to amuse American soldiers on their way to fight the foe in France, it is announced. In an effort to make our boys’ trip across the Atlantic as comfortable and as pleasant as possible, the Community Motion Picture Bureau, acting for the Government, has arranged with Goldwyn to have six of its best productions shown for an indefinite period on U. S. transports bound for Europe.

The contract for showings on the transports provides that the films are not to be exhibited ashore and that Goldwyn against monetary loss through the possible destruction of the productions by U-boat attacks.

Sidney Garrett Sells Foreign Rights to Many Feature Films

Sidney Garrett, president of the J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., exporters of films, announces the sale of Metro specials, “Revelation” and “Blue Jeans” for Scandinavia.

Mr. Garrett recently sold the entire Metro program under contract for Argentina, Chile, Paraguay, Uruguay, Bolivia and Peru.

As president of the Bengar Picture Co., Mr. Garrett has sold “Brown of Harvard” for Brazil and the “Garden of Allah” for Java and the Straits Settlements, and he has the entire Selig output under contract for Argentina, Chile, Paraguay, Uruguay, Bolivia and Peru.

Fegan Joins General

General Film Company has made a change at St. Louis, having just installed Mr. F. J. Fegan as branch manager at that point. Mr. Fegan has been for some years in charge of the Standard Film Company at Kansas City, and is one of the most widely acquainted exchange men in Missouri. He succeeds H. E. Elder, one of General’s veteran employees, who is to be transferred to another point.

Whattons Complete “Eagle’s Eye”

The Whattons have completed the filming of the nineteenth and twentieth episodes of “The Eagle’s Eye,” the serial story of the Imperial German Government’s spies and plots in America. The twentieth episode, it is said, brings the serial to a dramatic and patriotic conclusion by showing the events which immediately preceded the declaration of war on Germany by the United States.
NOTE: Below is printed a blank form which exhibitors may use in keeping records upon which to base tax reports on admissions. It is essential that a daily record be kept in order that the Government may be able to obtain the information it requires in each case. This form has been sanctioned by officials of the Internal Revenue Department.

An Exhibitor-Exchange-Service Proposition

The Triangle Distributing Corporation is founded upon the three fundamental angles of a progressive business:—the Customer—the Product—the Organization.

Three sides form the angles of this business—the Exhibitors, the Exchanges, and Service.

The EXHIBITORS' side receives first consideration and "tops" this organization, since without Exhibitors there would be no need for Exchanges or Service. And every TRIANGLE Exhibitor is welcomed as a component part of the business.

EXCHANGES then, are operated on the principle that Exhibitors come first. Every employee who helps to construct this second side of TRIANGLE realizes that upon the welfare of the Exhibitors depends his welfare. And notice we say Exhibitors—the plural—which means careful consideration to all alike, rich or poor—great or small—old or new. This brings us to the third side of our TRIANGLE.

It is evident from the very construction of the TRIANGLE Distributing Corporation that steadily increasing profits will depend upon the cultivation and growth of the three factors—Exhibitors, Exchanges and Service.

And TRIANGLE profits are defined as a just reward for service rendered.

An expansion of the new kind of Service necessitates better Exchanges and more Exhibitors. Likewise the increasing number of Exhibitors means better Exchanges and better Service.

Exhibitors—Grasp the opportunity now of associating with TRIANGLE—the Distributing Corporation that cooperates for the mutual benefit of all.

Brightening Business Prospect

LITTLE while back we heard a great deal from exhibitors about business going to the bow wows; that film rental was so high no one could make a profit; that the public did not want the class of pictures producers were making; that advance deposits, contract stipulations and other conditions were making the lot of the theatre man a sad one.

Recently, however, complaints and laments of this nature have been noticeably absent and, while exhibitors have been reluctant to admit it the reason is that for sixty days business generally has been exceedingly good. This applies almost universally and the exception is those theatres in localities where competition is too great in proportion to the available patronage and also in the case of theatres whose seating capacity restricts as to the caliber of pictures possible to run.

The basic fact upon which the entire prosperity of the motion picture business rests is attendance at theatres and from all reports attendance recently has broken all records. This is probably due in a measure to general conditions incidental to the war which require the abandonment of many of the more expensive forms of amusement. Another fact is the many splendid pictures that have been offered to the public recently which came at a time when the public required diversion and refreshment from the serious thoughts of war and have been rewarded with excellent patronage.

The prosperity of the exhibitor is a positive indication of the increased prosperity that will come to the entire industry, provided only that producer and distributor continue his co-operation with the theatre-man in order that theatres everywhere may steadily mount up in popularity.

On Projectors

THE subject of projection and projectors in the abstract is one which every successful exhibitor must be familiar with.

The first step is the selection of a machine with a record of demonstrated service and once such a machine is installed the exhibitor for his own protection, should be especially wary of the salesman who endeavors to substitute another make of machine by allowing a high price for the used machine in a trade.

Obviously, the allowing of an excessive price on the used machine in order to make a sale is simply the cheapening in price of the new machine. Again, if a used machine is worth a large price to a manufacturer in a trade it is worth just as much to the exhibitor who owns it, and much more if a trade on such a basis is to result in the exhibitor being supplied with an inferior machine.

The subject of projection is a too important one in which to risk an experiment. The public generally has been educated to good projection and to supply projection of an inferior quality may cost the prestige of a theatre.

A standard machine of proven quality is the only safe course for exhibitors in this matter.

Also, the height of folly is for an exhibitor to attempt to satisfy his patrons with even the best pictures if they are projected from a machine that a long life of service has rendered inefficient.
Importance of Local Manager

ANY facts indicate that branch managers should be given greater authority in the fixing of rental prices and in the adjusting of other matters with the exhibitor.

The branch manager should have a more intimate knowledge of local conditions than officials of the home office. If he has not he should be supplanted by someone capable of gaining such an intimate knowledge of the local field.

Our attention is frequently directed to instances in which exchanges have lost business because of the inability of the local manager to make adjustments which facts in the cases seem to warrant fully, and negotiations through the home office in instances of this nature usually do not terminate satisfactorily, largely because of the necessarily limited information of the local situation possessed by the home office.

A local representative of a film company must be manager in more than name only if he is to obtain the greatest revenue the territory can yield. Conditions do not remain stationary in any territory; they are constantly changing and the branch manager should be authorized to meet these changing conditions with whatever solutions apply.

Casual Comment

Ten years in the penitentiary for Robert Goldstein, producer of "The Spirit of '76," is a graphic warning for those who may have been tempted by Huns propaganda money.

* * *

Everywhere throughout the trade there is encountered a rising note of optimism, and an excellent feature of this situation is that a close study of existing conditions warrants the assertion that the trade is veering into an immediate future of most substantial prosperity.

* * *

Negotiations seem to be under way for the elimination of the differences keeping apart of the American Exhibitors' Association and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. The dominant fact suggested by this situation is that one strong organization, properly conducted and with a respectable numerical membership is eminently for the best interest of exhibitors.

Chicago to Have Big Down-Town Photoplay House

Nathan Ascher, Head of Ascher Brothers Theatrical Enterprises Purchases Loop Property in West Monroe Street—Will Have 3,000 Seating Capacity

After years of delay during which period nearly every city of note in the United States has possessed itself of a large down-town theatre devoted exclusively to motion pictures, Chicago finally is to have a photoplay palace second to none in point of equipment and general effectiveness.

Credit for the long waited achievement is due to Nathan Ascher, head of the Ascher Brothers theatrical enterprises which controls a chain of neighborhood houses in Chicago. The deal, however, is a surprising one for the Ascher organisation, and will not be completed until the latter part of this week.

The site of the new playhouse is the Inter Ocean building, No. 2525 West Monroe street, and the Thompson property adjoining. The purchase price of the property has not been made public and details concerning the new theatre complex cannot be obtained at this time due to Mr. Ascher’s hesitancy in talking about the project before the deal was closed.

Need Long Apparent

Assurance of a large down-town theatre in Chicago is hailed as one of the big developments of the year in the motion picture industry. Need of such a playhouse has long been apparent to the large producers and distributors.

With the promise of a three-thousand-seat house in the loop district of Chicago producers will no longer be confronted with the problem of how to exploit pictures properly in the middle west. In the past it has always been necessary to resort to some theatre primarily designed for presentation of the spoken drama and not suitably fitted for proper presentation of motion pictures.

“Legitimate” Theatres Used

The need for a theatre of the nature Ascher Brothers intend to construct was never more forcibly demonstrated than this Spring when the producers sought downtown showings for many big war features and government propaganda productions. “My Four Years in Germany,” a First National Film, “Hearts of the World,” a M. P. E. L. Masterpiece, and “The Unbeliever,” an Edison-Kline production dealing with the war situation, were shown simultaneously in the loop district, each theatre designed for spoken drama.

“I am not ready as yet to make public the details of the new venture,” said Nathan Ascher when asked concerning the project. “The deal has not yet been completed and will not be until the end of this week.

“I will, however, say this: We are going to have as fine a theatre as there is in the country devoted exclusively to the showing of motion pictures. It will contain all the improvements which have been adopted by theatres already erected and a number of things too recently conceived to have yet been used in the construction of photoplay houses.”

Other Cities Equipped

Practically every large city in the United States with the exception of Chicago, has one or more magnificent theatres in the heart of the business center in which motion pictures are shown. New York City leads with the Astor and Rivoli — Rothapelt houses — and the Strand. Announcement has already been made of the construction of another theatre in upper Broadway to seat 5,000 persons, work upon which started recently.

Cleveland has the Stillman Theatre; the Circle Theatre in Indianapolis has attained national prominence; Grauman’s in San Francisco is one of the latest on the West coast, while Harry Davis alone recently completed his down-town Pittsburgh playhouse at a cost said to be near $1,000,000.

Washington, D. C., both Tom Moore and Harry Crandall operate down-town houses.

Neighborhood Houses Successful

The long experience of Ascher Brothers in successfully conducting their chain of outlying theatres makes them the logical ones to put through the deal they have already practically closed. Nathan Ascher is closely allied with the Jones, Linick & Scharer film interests and is also financially concerned with the Central Film Company, which exchange handles the productions of the downtown Ascher houses.

Inasmuch as the last named organization rarely, if ever, buys anything but feature films, the theatre will be of great value in giving as much profit as possible to the showings to these productions in Chicago and the Central West.

Joseph Hopp in Lively Tilt at State Convention of M. P. E. L.

National Vice-President of Exhibitors Body Resents Insincerity Charge and Hurts

“Short and Ugly” at Accuser

Hardly had Mr. Hopp finished when Robert Levy jumped to his feet and characterized the words of the speaker as “pure bunk.” He added that he could prove it was nothing more or less than “bunk.” He waved a paper which he shouted would convict Mr. Hopp of “treason.”

This is a letter written on the stationery of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, known enemies of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League, and bears the signatures of C. R. Plough, Joseph Hopp and Louis Frank, he charged.

Treason Charge Made

“It is nothing less than treason for Hopp’s name to appear on stationery with one of the signers who has brought suit against members of this association, Hopp, as an officer of this association, could not be associated with him without being a traitor to our organization.”

Upon the suggestion of William Heaney the paper was given to the chairman of the session, Fred W. Hartmann, and proved to be a call for a meeting at which the Allied Amusements Association was formed.

Mr. Hopp then resumed the floor and addressing his remarks to Mr. Levy, said:

Hopp Passes Lie

“If the gentleman means to infer by his remarks that I am insincere in the stand I take he has uttered a deliberate lie.”

Many more pleasantries were exchanged between the men during the day’s session. Mr. Hopp then asked the Los Angeles Theatremen Protest Movement to Restrict Attendance

Samuel Goldfish Brings Matter to Brady's Attention Who Enlists Vanderlip's Aid

Action to restrict school children from attending motion picture theatres in Los Angeles, said to have been sponsored by the War Savings Committee of that city, was nipped in the bud last week when the N. A. M. P. I. through an appeal to Frank A. Vanderlip, chairman of the National War Savings Committee, took steps to halt the movement.

William A. Brady, president of the N. A. M. P. I., took the matter up with Mr. Vanderlip, in New York upon receipt of a telegram from Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, who is at present in Los Angeles on business. Mr. Goldfish wired as follows:

"A very serious situation has arisen in the city of Los Angeles whereby the school children are made to pledge themselves not to patronize motion picture theatres, thereby buying thrift stamps. This situation is so serious that the proper officials in Washington have been deprived recently of 50 per cent. of their revenue. If we as an industry allow a condition like this to develop throughout the country, it will mean the majority of exhibitors in this country to bankruptcy, thereby affecting the producers and reducing their revenue. I therefore strongly urge you to immediately call a meeting of the war committees and put this before them, so that the matter may be taken up with the proper officials in Washington immediately. I am at the Alexandria Hotel and will appreciate advice as to what action you have taken. Regards."

Theatremen Protests

Frank R. McDonald, president of the Theatre Owners Association of Los Angeles, also wired President Brady appealing him to assist in convincing the theatremen in overcoming the concerted action of the War Savings Committee.

Mr. Vanderlip took the matter up at once with C. A. Davidson, State director of the National War Savings Committee, Los Angeles, directing his attention to the seriousness of the movement and calling attention also to the fact that motion pictures had played a vital part in the Government's war plans. His letter was as follows:

"Word just comes to me from Los Angeles that there is a movement there in connection with the War Savings campaign to have the school children specifically not to attend motion picture shows. The motion picture men are naturally very much concerned about such a movement as this, for they feel that it is the sort of movement to be encouraged. I am very strong, indeed, in the belief that school children and every one else should be pledged to economize to save and to buy War Savings Stamps, but for the War Savings organization to pick out the specific thing to be refrained from it seems to me a mistake. I am certain that the general pledge scheme which has been so successful in Nebraska and which we are adopting for the whole country is the right move, but if we add to that pledge to specifically refrain from any particular type of expenditure it seems to me we are exceeding what would be good judgment."

Films Helped Government

"There is, too, another side to the matter. The motion picture people have been very well disposed, not only toward War Savings, but toward all the Government activities, and in many ways have been extremely helpful to the Government. Right at the moment many motion picture organizations are offering to carry 'trailers' on all the releases of new pictures for the next three months, and it comes particularly hard when they are operating in this way for us to specifically select them as particular ground for economy. That a child may find it necessary to economize in his motion picture expenditure if he takes a pledge to save, that it may be desirable for him to refrain from such expenditures, is undoubtedly true, but I do not think that we should start a campaign specifically to pledge school children not to go to motion picture shows."

Wrist Watch for Ince

At the conclusion of the scenes for "Tempered Steel," the fourth Petrova Picture, Madame Petrova presented Ralph Ince, who directed the feature, with a handsome Tiffany gold wristwatch with radium numerals on the face.

Cameraman La Voy Plans Third Trip To Western Front

Merl La Voy, war camera correspondent, is leaving shortly for his third tour of the European battlefronts, on an engagement with Burton Holmes, the lecturer. Mr. La Voy will travel in company with Mr. Holmes in his excursions along the battle lines.

La Voy's camera work is well known in the motion picture industry in connection with the film entitled "Heroic France," issued through the Mutual Film Corporation. More recently, returning from his second journey to the front, Mr. La Voy completed "Heroic Serbia," a picture portrayal of the personalities and activities of the Serbian front. The Serbian pictures were made under the auspices of Howard Logan of Chicago, who has presented the American Red Cross with the film.

In his work for the screen Mr. La Voy has visited the French, English and Serbian fronts, spending nearly two years in France and England and a year in Serbia. He has posed, it is stated, many of the great men of the war, including Asquith, Bonar Law, Clemenceau, Castelnau, Briand and many others. His exploits in affairs photographic have ranged from a climb of Mount McKinley in Alaska to looping the loop in an allied war plane over Mount Olympus in Greece.

An infantryman's heavy marching outfit weighs seventy pounds. La Voy's consists of about 125 pounds of camera and equipment.

Southern Exhibitors To Hold Convention

Motion picture exhibitors of Virginia, it is announced, will hold their convention this year in Gray's Armory, Richmond, on June 13, 14 and 15. A motion picture star ball will be held on the evening of June 15.

Harry Bernstein, Colonial theatre, Richmond, Va., has been named chairman of the convention and is urging every exhibitor to "come to Richmond on June 13."
One National Exhibitors Body Sought by Prominent League Men

Sydney S. Cohen of New York in Correspondence With C. C. Pettijohn Seeking to Start Movement Toward Amalgamation

Added impetus to the movement on foot to consolidate the two existing organizations of exhibitors into one national body has come about through the making public of correspondence between Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of New York state and C. C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors Association.

Mr. Cohen sent forth in his missive the necessity of the two national organizations coming together under one banner and asked Mr. Pettijohn if it would not be possible for the two of them to start a movement which might result in great good to motion picture exhibitors throughout the country.

The president of the New York state exhibitors expressed a willingness to take the initiative for this movement in his organization if Mr. Pettijohn was willing to take similar steps among the members of the American Exhibitors Association.

Selfish Interest Scored

"I know, and I think you realize that there are big, clean sincere men in both organizations," reads a part of the Cohen letter, "and we may as well be frank with each other and admit that both organizations are, at present, hampered by members who have selfish interests to play."

Mr. Pettijohn in response assured Mr. Cohen of his confidence in him and added that he was willing to join with him in an effort to bring about one national organization. Mr. Cohen's letter follows:

"Believing in your sincerity and fairness and that you have the welfare of motion picture exhibitors at heart, I am addressing this letter to you in an effort to ascertain at least if it is possible within the next sixty days to bring the two national exhibitor organizations together under one banner."

"I know, and I think you realize that there are big clean, sincere men in both organizations, and we may as well be frank with each other, and admit that both organizations are, at present, hampered by members who have selfish interests to play."

Mr. Pettijohn's Co-operation

"I believe that you and I are in positions, at present, or we can at least start a movement which may result in great good to motion picture exhibitors throughout the country."

"I am willing to take the initiative for this movement in our organization if you are willing to do likewise with the members of the American Exhibitors Association. Will you cooperate with me in an effort to bring about a fair understanding among our respective members, and if possible an amalgamation of both national organizations into one united, efficient, and selfless organization which will divert itself from all side issues, and devote itself solely to the business of the motion picture exhibitors of the United States and Canada?"

Will you favor me with an immediate reply to this letter, and if you feel that we can conscientiously work together in the furtherance of a plan which will bring us all under one banner, I will be glad to meet with you and your associates and start the 'ball rolling'."

Pettijohn's Favorable Answer

Mr. Pettijohn in reply said:

"I am just in receipt of your letter dated May 13th, and I am trying to comply with your request for an immediate answer."

"While in the middle west last week, I consulted with several of the officers and directors of the American Exhibitors Association on practically the same subject mentioned in your letter."

"I believe in you, Mr. Cohen, one hundred per cent. I have the utmost confidence in the men who surround you. I have so stated to the men with whom I talked last week, and I have this day sent a recommendation to Frank J. Rembusch, our national secretary, that only a tentative date be set for our national convention and that such tentative date be not sooner than the last of August, or the first of September. In the meantime, I am willing to join hands with you in an effort to bring about one national organization; with no side issues, devoted exclusively to the business of exhibitors and ever ready to co-operate with any other branch of the industry for our common good."

Potent War Factor

"Uncle Sam has recognized us as a potent factor in this great world war. He needs us, and I personally believe we will be worth more to him under one banner—the banner under which all American people are this day united—his banner."

"I am ready to meet you."

Mr. Pettijohn in his talk earlier in the month before the Motion Picture Exhibitors Corporation of the Northwest, expressed practically the same sentiment as conveyed in his letter to Mr. Cohen. He urged the exhibitors present, who were members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, to go to Boston and "clean house" and once this was done the American Exhibitors Association would be willing to meet them on a 50-50 basis in negotiations tending toward one national body of exhibitors.

New Ruling Sought

For "Rose of Blood"

In an effort to have a ruling of Federal District Judge Carpenter set aside in which the jurist refused to grant a writ of mandamus against Major M. L. C. Funkhouser in connection with the Fox production "Rose of Blood," Attorneys Schwartz and Friedman, representing the film corporation, appeared early in the week before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago.

The attorneys took with them a print of the picture which they exhibited to Federal Judges Evans, Alschuler and Baker, sitting jurors. When the case came up before Judge Carpenter, after Major Funkhouser had refused to issue a permit, a lengthy deposition from George Creel of the committee on public information was read into evidence in which the government official expressed himself as favorably disposed toward the picture.

Goldwyn Adds Stars to Roster And Plans to Double Output
Geraldine Farrar to Make Six; Pauline Frederick Eight Pictures, Says Goldfish

In its second releasing year Goldwyn Pictures Corporation will double the number of its productions from the present basis of twenty-six annually to thirty-two, a news item in a left-hand margin just made from California by Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn.

This step will be good news to thousands of exhibitors and comes in direct response, it is said, to exhibitor demands and their whole-hearted support of Goldwyn since the company was organized.

During its second twelve months Goldwyn will publish: Geraldine Farrar, six productions; Pauline Frederick, eight productions; Mabel Normand, eight productions; Mae Marsh, six productions; Madge Kennedy, eight productions; Rex Beach, six productions from an anonymously famous author, and six productions with a popular male star, whose name cannot be announced at this time, it is said.

"Within a fortnight," says Mr. Goldfish, "Miss Farrar will begin her first Goldwyn production, and it is good news to be able to tell of her association with our company. From the day of her entry on the screen this brilliant artist has been a sensational success, and our plans for her future foretell a doubling of her popularity through the selection of ever greater screen stories than she has ever had before.

Pauline Frederick Popular

"Miss Frederick unquestionably ranks as one of our greatest emotional actresses; a beautiful woman of rare charm and constantly increasing popularity, both with the public and exhibitors. Owners of theatres everywhere have had proved to them her great box-office drawing power.

"It gives me great pleasure to witness the successes of Miss Normand, Miss Marsh and Miss Kennedy, three of our stars who have carried us so far forward during our first year as a producing organization.

"Heretofore, as is generally known, there has been usually but one Rex Beach production annually. Every production ever made from one of his famous stories has made money for exhibitors. Goldwyn is assured of six Rex Beach productions in a single year, thus guaranteeing six additional titles in each year when theatres playing his productions will do capacity business.

"I am not yet ready to announce by name the popular male personality to be starred by Goldwyn, but I am assured in advance of his great popularity with the American public.

Universal Makes Big Changes
In Distribution Organization
Wipes Out Bluebird, Jewel and Other Brand Exchanges—Under One Head Now

The Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., on May 20, took over the business of all of the branch exchanges distributing Universal products in the United States, with the exception of a few exchanges not controlled by the producing company, it is announced.

Universal attractions will hereafter be handled by Universal Film Exchanges, Inc. These exchanges also will handle the output of Jewel Productions, Lois Weber productions, Bluebird plays, Century Comedies, and Lyons and Moran Comedies.

It is in combining the numerous interests that economy in distribution will be practiced, the company states. For a long time Bluebird controlled its exchanges and Jewel also had exchanges, entailing a large overhead expense in rents, salary of office force, deliveries and incidentals. With the combining of the exchanges, this excessive expense will be saved. Eventually the saving will be felt by the exhibitors, it is said, who will be given the benefit of the economies caused by the new system.

Many Exchanges Affected

The following exchanges will be taken over by the new corporation: Independent Film Exchange, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Universal Film Exchange, Detroit, Mich.; Universal Film & Supply Company, Kansas City, Mo.; Universal Film & Supply Company, St. Louis, Mo.; Universal Film & Supply Company, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Universal Film & Supply Company, Fort Smith, Ark.; Universal Film & Supply Company, Wichita, Kan.; Universal Film Exchange, Chicago, Ill.; Universal Film Exchange, Milwaukee, Wis.; Universal Film Exchange, Denver, Colo.; Universal Film Exchange, Salt Lake City, Utah; Universal Film Exchange, Butte, Mont.; Film Supply Company, Portland, Ore.; Film Supply Company, Seattle, Wash.; Film Supply Company, Spokane, Wash.; California Film Exchange, San Francisco, Cal.; California Film Exchange, Los Angeles, Cal.; California Film Exchange, Phoenix, Ariz.; Laemmle Film Service, Minneapolis, Minn.; Laemmle Film Service, Omaha, Neb.; Colonial Film Exchange, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Laemmle Film Service, Des Moines, Ia.; Cincinnati Buckeye Film Company, Cincinnati, Ohio; Cincinnati Buckeye Film Company, Columbus, O.; Cincinnati Buckeye Film Company, Louisville, Ky.; Central Film Service, Indianapolis, Ind.; Rex Film Service, Albany, N. Y.; Victor Film Service, Buffalo, N. Y.; Victor Film Service, Cleveland, O.; C. H. MacGowan, general manager of Universal, left New York last Saturday, accompanied by six assistants, for a trip around the entire circuit for the purpose of effecting the taking over of the exchanges by the new corporation. Before leaving, Mr. MacGowan said that the change would automatically go into effect May 20 and be working smoothly in every one of the exchanges.

Plans Carefully Arranged

Notwithstanding the tremendous amount of detail work necessary to bring about the change, it is said that the preliminaries have been so carefully arranged that no confusion occurred. All of the necessary forms have been printed and the hundreds of banks with which Universal does business in the several cities changed the accounts to the name of the new holding company.

The change in the method of distribution does not mean that changes will follow in the Universal sales organization. All of the branch managers will retain their position, but hereafter will be given assistance by the home office that will lead to greater possibilities for themselves and for the exhibitors served by them, it is said.

MALITZ AND ENGLER
GET PRISON TERMS

Convicted by a jury in the United States Court, Brooklyn, of having conspired to smuggle rubber into Germany and of conducting a campaign of pro-German propaganda by attempting to show that the devastation in Belgium was as great as alleged, Felix Malitz and Gustave Engler, former officers of the American Correspondence Film Company, were sentenced to terms in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga. Judge Martin T. Manton sentenced Malitz to two years in prison and pay a fine of $5,000, and Engler will serve eighteen months.

Two Aviators Die
On French Front

Spencer Alden and Philip Mosser, aviators who were recently killed while in the service of the United States, were formerly employees of the Wharton studios, Ithaca, N. Y. During the time they were attending Cornell University they worked in several of the serials and other pictures which were produced at that time.

Howard Cody, known as the nervous property man in the motion picture business, who did all the heavy work-off scenes for "The Eagle's Eye," has enlisted in the medical department, following the completion of the serial story of the Imperial German Government's spies and plots in America by William J. Flynn, the recently retired Chief of the United States Secret Service.
Mutual Adopts Every-Other-Week Plan Of Issuing Five Part Productions

Past Experience Has Shown Large Waste Through Summer Period Says President Sheldon

The Mutual Film Corporation announces a contract for the distribution of a series of five-part productions from the studios of the American Film Company, Inc., one every other week beginning May 27.

A new whirl of activity is sweeping through the Mutual and plans are under way for the publication of a series of special productions, it is said. An announcement of these is shortly to be issued from the offices of James M. Sheldon, president of the Mutual. Mr. Sheldon is dividing his time between the Chicago and New York offices of the Mutual in his negotiations and operations.

More Goodrich Films

The preliminary arrangements have been made for the production also of a series of feature productions starring Edna Goodrich. Production will start shortly in New York studios. It is planned to give Miss Goodrich more prominent productions and bigger vehicles than any of those in which she has previously appeared.

The Mutual schedule of short length productions of feature quality including Billie Rhodes in Strand Comedies and the Screen Telegram, the Mutual news reel, will be maintained, it is said. In addition a series of one-reel specialty pictures of a new type and extraordinary quality is shortly to be announced. "The prospects are exceedingly bright for Mutual," observed President Sheldon. We have by the contract just announced a consistent sequence of high-class productions featuring Mary Miles Minter, William Russell and Margarita Fisher. We have almost ready to announce, a series of special features of the very first magnitude, featuring one of the best known stars of the screen. We have a well established and constantly improving news reel, the Screen Telegram. I do not need to make comment on the Strand Comedies, they have set a standard of their own in the trade.

Explains Bi-weekly Plan

"There may be some question as to why we have adopted an every other week release for the five-part productions on our regular schedule. In the first place it was desirable to make room in our releasing plans for the special productions that are to come. Then, also it is wise to take cognizance of the fact that the schedules of the last few summers show that there has been a large waste in productions released through the summer period. Too many pictures without adequate drawing power have been crowded into the summer market.

The picture business has reached a stage of development and maturity where it must from now on take cognizance of the slackening of the theatrical market in the warmer months. We have some lessons to learn from the stage in this game, and one of them is that the public must not be overfed on production in the summer. Do you know that one big group of film producers and distributors recently took under consideration a plan to suspend all releases for six weeks, beginning July 1st? We are not that radical. There is a good business to be had right through the summer, but it appears that the best commercial course is to release fewer productions and work them harder. This is better policy both for us and for our customers, the exhibitors. Longer runs are coming in steadily, as evidenced by the reports coming from the Mutual's branches.

Business Growing

"We are enjoying a pleasant growth of business. The fact that the William Russell Productions, entitled "Hearts or Diamonds?" is making a decidedly sensational success in various quarters of the country. It has had the distinction of being the production presented at the opening of several of the biggest new theatres in the United States. We have others with their big box office possibilities to come.

"There is a decided healthy trend in business among the theatres. Better showmanship is making for the theatre prosperity and is having a most favorable reaction on the manufacturers and distributors of pictures."

Affiliated Distributors Adds $150,000 to Original Investment

Corporation Increases Capitalization to Meet Demands of Co-operative Plan

Although but a month old, the Affiliated Distributors Corporation, last week increased its capitalization from $100,000 to $250,000, it is announced.

This addition to the original investment was deemed desirable, according to Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Affiliated, to take care of the overwhelming response with which the cooperative plan back of the Affiliated has been received by exhibitors.

“We want to be in a position to meet every demand that will make for the furtherance of the ‘direct from producer to exhibitor plan,’” said Mr. Pettijohn. “While we thought our original capital was more than ample to take care of the development of this idea, three weeks of operation has shown us that this movement is going to grow much faster than our most sanguine expectations, and that additional capital is desirable to take care of this rapid expansion.”

Reason for Increase

“The founders of the Affiliated are determined that the desire on the part of exhibitors in sections not yet organized into booking association for participation in the benefits of this organization shall be instantly heeded. "It takes money to seed organizers into these sections and get these local bodies under way, and this added capital is to be devoted, in part, to seeing that such bodies are properly placed on their feet. Since the Affiliated is absolutely paying its own way, without calling on exhibitors for a penny for promotion expenses, this recent action of increasing the capitalization in so short a time shows how much confidence we have in the soundness of our plan. "Those responsible for the organization have been so encouraged by the way it has been received that they have expressed a willingness to put unlimited funds into the project, if necessary, to make its cooperative advantages operative immediately on a nation-wide scale.”

One-Half Fund Paid

Meetings for the purpose of perfecting arrangements for the association of exhibitors booking organizations with the Affiliated were held recently at Chicago and Indianapolis. The Chicago gathering, in Fraternity Hall, resulted in more than one-half the trust fund, necessary to complete such an affiliation, being paid in at the meeting, it is said.

Other territories well on their way toward the consummation of their trust funds are Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Minneapolis, Salt Lake City, Philadelphia, and New York. Meetings are also scheduled for St. Louis, Kansas City and Cedar Rapids.

Petrova Gives Red Cross Talk in Philadelphia

Madame Petrova made a special trip on May 16 to Philadelphia at the invitation of Harry Schwulde, secretary and treasurer of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and delivered an interesting talk at the Stanley Theatre on behalf of the Red Cross Fund. This was the first time that Olga Petrova has made a personal appearance at any picture house in Philadelphia, and the audience was so enthusiastic it is reported, that the Polish artiste was recalled again and again.

In addition to speaking for the Red Cross, Madame Petrova recited some of her original poems and sang one of her own songs. Philadelphia will be visited again, it was announced, when Petrova starts on her extensive trip from New York to the Coast in the interest of the United States thrift stamps.
Mandamus Sought In Chicago Court For Gerard Film

Funkhouser Charged With Unlawfully Eliminating Scenes From Pictures

Charging that eliminations made in the First National Exhibitors Circuit production "My Four Years in Germany" were ordered "arbitrarily, capriciously and unlawfully" by Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, censor of motion pictures in Chicago, a petition has been filed in the Superior court of Cook County, asking for a writ of mandamus against the censor restraining him from enforcing the cut-outs ordered and that a permit be issued for the picture in its entirety.

The petition was filed by Attorney Adolp Marks representing the First National Exhibitors Circuit and states that Major Funkhouser in ordering eliminations from the picture disregarded entirely the wishes of the committee on public information. The bill follows the sending of messages to George Creel, Frank O. Lowden, governor of Illinois, and other officials seeking the removal from office of Chicago's censor.

German Brutality Eliminated

According to information furnished the court several scenes depicting German brutality which were said to be based on actual facts, were cut from the film. It further recites that the film has been approved by the committee on public information and that it has been produced in other cities in its entirety. The elimination of the scenes as ordered by Funkhouser seriously impairs the success of the picture, the petition charges.

Among the scenes cut by the censor and which the bill seeks to have restored to the picture is one showing an American soldier drawing a sword from the body of a German soldier who had insulted women. Two scenes showing a young girl and an old woman killed by Germans also have been deleted. "Your petitioner represents that the scenes so ordered to be eliminated from said picture are important and show acts as they actually occurred and took place by officers in the German army," the petition states in part. "Your plaintiff is informed and believes that the said eliminations were ordered arbitrarily, capriciously and unlawfully by the said Major M. L. C. Funkhouser for the purpose of hindering the United States to some extent in its prosecution of the war against the German Empire."

Ulterior Motive Charged

The bill also charges that the eliminations were made for the purpose of preventing the true causes from becoming accurately and vividly known to the people of the city of Chicago and that not only the plaintiff is being unjustly deprived of its property but that the people of Chicago are unlawfully deprived from acquiring the information which would be at once a help in enduring what must be endured and a determination to continue until the just cause of our people shall have been indicated and established.

The petition has been assigned to Judge William Fenimore Cooper of the Superior court.

Plaintiffs Complete Testimony in Suit Against General Co.

Attorney for Defense Asks for Dismissal of Case—Justice Reserves Decision

After hearing testimony all week in the $2,000,000 suit of two of the preferred stockholders of the General Film Company against a number of prominent film men in New York, the plaintiffs rested their case on Friday. Immediately following Attorney Edward P. Grosvenor's announcement, Judge Samuel Seabury made a motion before Supreme Court Justice Mullan asking that the case against the defendants be dismissed.

Judge Seabury based his motion for the dismissal of the suit upon the following points:

"The first motion is based on the ground that no testimony has been introduced to show that the defendants committed any act which in any way impaired the rights of the preferred stockholders.

"Second, that it has not been shown that any dividends have been paid out of the General Film Company's capital, while it has been affirmatively established that any dividends paid to the common stockholders of the co-defendant company were paid solely out of surplus profits.

"Third, that it affirmatively appears that the sole purpose of this action is to enable the plaintiffs to receive a larger share of the funds created as the result of the government's anti-trust actions against many of the co-defendant corporations, and lastly on the ground that there has been no evidence introduced to show that the contracts of April 21, 1910, were unfair, inequitable or unjust to any parties interested in the General Film Company, as alleged in the complaint."

Justice Reserves Decision

Justice Mullan reserved his decision after listening to a number of other motions. Judge Seabury took an exception to the ruling and then announced that he would take up the defendant's case Monday. It is expected it will take a week to present the defendant's side of the case.

An expert certified accountant testified last week that an alleged profit and loss deficit of $153,320 existed and that $45,000,000 had been paid for motion picture films between the years 1910 and 1916 by the General Film Company, co-defendant in the suit.

Judge Seabury later made a motion to have the testimony of the expert accountant stricken from the court records. The attorney contended that the accountant had based his figures on an examination of the books of only two or three of the co-defendant corporations. The Justice refused the motion and thereupon the defendant's counsel offered the four additional motions above mentioned.

General Federation of Women's Clubs Discuss Censorship

Movement to Pass Resolution for State Control of Films Defeated

The subject of motion pictures and their regulation created considerable interest, it is said, at the biennial meeting of the General Federation of the Women's Clubs held at Hot Springs, Ark., the first week of May. A special conference was held Wednesday afternoon, May 6, under the auspices of the Department of Civics, of which Mrs. Bessie Leach Priddy of Michigan was chairman.

It was intimated that the conference should discuss the subjects of local regulation and the Better Film Movement. Emphasis, however, was laid on the subject of State Censorship by some of those at the head of the Department of Civics and this crept into the program.

Among those who spoke were Mrs. Elizabeth Richley Desseiz, of New York City, who discussed "Motion Pictures as a Constructive Factor in the Community"; Miss Sara Elizabeth Edwards, of St. Louis, spoke on the Better Film Movement through a request made to the National Board of Review for a speaker: "Local Regulation," by John M. Dean of the board of censors of Memphis, Tenn., "State Censorship," by Mrs. Guy Blanchard, of Chicago, who was a leader in that State seeking to have a State censorship bill passed at the last session of the Illinois legislation; and Mrs. Myra Kingman Miller, president of the National Federation of College Women.

The group in favor of State censorship endeavored to railroad through a resolution in favor of State censorship. There was a considerable wrangle at the conference over the subject, which resulted in the suppression of the resolution. The General Federation suggested by resolution that State federations make surveys of motion picture exhibitions in their respective States.

Dr. Ellis P. Oberholtzer, secretary of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, who was present working for support for a congress of State boards of censors and State censorship throughout the country, said: "The ideals toward which women engaged as you are in this field of work public service should strive is the enactment of adequate laws in the forty-four commonwealths which still have no film censorship, and then for a national congress of censors to formulate common rules and standards by which all of them can and will abide."

Fire Destroys Film At Navy Department

Rear Admiral Benson and other high navy officials experienced the sensations of a gas attack when a film, showing certain naval experiments, caught fire during its projection. The room in the State, War and Navy building devoted to experimental work, instantly filled with a dense, choking smoke.

The film was the only one in existence on the subject, and was totally destroyed. If the experiment is to be recorded, the work will have to be "shot" again.

ONE OF THE INTERESTING SCENES IN THE TIMELY WAR FEATURE, "THE LAST RAID OF ZEPPELIN L-21," THE INTERSTATE FILM COMPANY'S PRODUCTION BEEN DISTRIBUTED BY GENERAL FILM COMPANY.
HE week disclosed a number of excellent pictures and several of average worth, but none of the specially "big" caliber. One of the most satisfactory offerings is Madge Kennedy in "A Fair Pretender." This picture throughout is of very high order and proves an excellent entertainment. The work of Tom Moore is especially notable.

Paralta issues a Bessie Barriscale production, "Rose O' Paradise," which is well up to the splendid Paralta standard and offers Miss Barriscale in a congenial role which will prove satisfactory to the legion of Barriscale admirers. The production is well directed throughout by James Young.

A production worthy of especial attention is a screen classic novelty offering, "The Million Dollar Dollies," with the famous dancers Rosika and Yanel Dolly. The story is novel and the entire production has been lavishly staged. This is a high order novelty picture with players of considerable reputation among theatre-goers that gives evidence of attaining a big success.

An independent issue, "Mothers of Liberty," starring Barbara Castleton who is identified with several good successes, notable "Parentage" and "On Trial" is a patriotic picture that does not follow the beaten track and carries a forcible message. At the premier showing at the Ziegfeld Theatre, Chicago, it was exceptionally well-received.

A new Hayakawa picture, "The White Man's Law," is issued by Paramount. In this picture the Japanese star does his customary capable work and the story which has an Oriental flavor is interesting. The photography and settings are especially noteworthy. Another Paramount issue is "The Biggest Show on Earth" with Emil Bennett. This is a circus story with a novelty twist. Miss Bennett's work while not up to the standard shown in recent pictures is satisfactory. The picture is an average offering.

Vitagraph offers Alice Joyce in "The Triumph of the Weak," directed by Tom Terries. This is a good picture and the great popularity of Alice Joyce makes it a very desirable attraction. "Men," issued by the Foursquare exchanges is a strong picture, with a domestic tangle theme and is well handled. The attractive Anna Lehr is the featured player.

A Triangle drama, "Her Decision," is a powerful picture, well acted and well staged. It is one of the best pictures of the week. "The Man Hunt" with Ethel Clayton is a very entertaining comedy drama, a type of picture that is very much in demand.

Photography ................ Fine

With the exception of a number of incongruities which creep in apparently as the result of faulty cutting, "The Guilt of Silence" is a virile, masterful story of the Klondike gold fields. Monroe Salisbury, combating the forces of nature with the wilds of the north as a background, is at his best and gives a sterling performance in the role of "Silent" Matthew, robbed of speech through burial in a snow pocket.

There are many and varied snow scenes in the production of wondrous grandeur in which dog teams are shown plowing their way through drifts almost too formidable for them to negotiate. The cast is well balanced, including Alfred Allen, Betty Schade and Sam De Grasse.

The story: Matthew, a Klondike prospector, has made his strike, is robbed on the eve of his departure for the states by a man and woman with the aid of a treacherous half-breed. In his pursuit of the pair he falls into a snow pocket and is rescued by Harkness. With his return to consciousness, his power of speech is gone. Harkness, prior to leaving for the gold fields, marries a girl who Matthew recognizes as one of the pair which had robbed him. Harkness scorches his advice and idea on women and his power is gone. Harkness arrives seeking his father. Her love for Matthew is stifled when she apparently apprehends him in a compromising position with her step-mother. When Harkness returns he finds a baby in his home and his wife accuses Matthew, who falls a victim of a shot from Harkness' revolver. The shock restores his speech and when matters are explained, the woman and her child are rescued and Matthew is restored to Mary's good graces.

As a whole ............................................................ Entertaining
Story ................................................................. Good
Star .......................................................................... Charming
Support ..................................................................... Good
Settings ..................................................................... Ample
Photography .................................................................. Clear

Except for a considerable amount of padding, "The Man Hunt" is a very good picture. While not altogether new as to plot, the story is not of the hackneyed type. It revolves about a young woman who is determined to marry the man of her choice, but as it happens, the young man in question will not marry her until she assures him that she loves him. And finally she is forced to acknowledge her love for him and the wedding takes place.

Gold mining districts, Monte Carlo, luxurious American homes and a western lusher camp are the scenes in which the various phases of the story take place. The settings are all in keeping with the atmosphere of the story and the photography is excellent. Rockcliffe Fellowes plays the leading male role to advantage. Ethel Clayton is charming in the role of Betty Hammond, the determined girl.

The story: Left a large fortune and no one to help her take care of it, Betty Hammond starts out to find a man who will meet all her requirements. She finds him in Jim Ogden, her childhood sweetheart, but Jim refuses to marry her until she can tell him she loves him. But the thoughts of love had not entered Betty's mind during her plan of the campaign, and it had to come slowly, but it did and they were happily married, out in the hut where Betty held Jim captive.

Photography .................................................................. Good

Much hard riding, a spectacular gun fight, and highly efficient camera work are the outstanding features of "Wolves of the Border." As a whole it is not quite up to the standard of western plays starring Roy Stewart. This star has been much better treated in many of his former vehicles and the weakness of the story apparently is responsible for the lack of appeal in the present picture.

The camera work, however, is splendid. Triangle has a reputation for its western productions and in point of settings the present picture is the equal of any and the superior of many this company has produced. Josie Sedgwick has the leading feminine role. Others in the cast are Frank McQuarrie, Jack Curtis, Louis Durham and Curley Baldwin.

The story: George Merritt, a young ranch owner, through misrepresentation on the part of Pete Wright, foreman of an adjoining ranch, is put in the light of being a cattle rustler. Warner, his employer, believes his story and a bitter hatred springs up between him and Merritt. Ruth Warner, in love with Merritt, is forbidden his company. In the meantime Pete leads a gang of Mexican bandits in an attack upon the Warner ranch and abducts Ruth. Merritt with his rangers puts the outlaws to flight and returns Ruth to her father. Warner, realizing that he has been duped, buries the hatchet, and bids the young people continue their broken courtship.

"MEN"

Bacon-Backer drama; six parts; directed by Perry K. Vercroft; published Four-Square exchanges

As a whole: Excellent; Story: Well constructed; Star: Good; Support: Capable; Settings: Appropriate; Photography: Clear.

Guaranteeing to interest the majority of adult audiences, "MEN" represents a very well constructed offering, a production that is out of the ordinary and one that has been handled in an intelligent manner.

The story of how two sisters, separated in childhood, become the near victims of one man, affords a domestic tangle along new lines, and while the tangle is being unraveled provides interesting entertainment for its spectators.

Anna Lehr, Gertrude McCoy and Robert Cain have the leading roles, and their support appears Huntley Gordon, Bradley Barker, William H. Toker, Charlotte Walker, Ida Darling and Fred Radellife. The story has been adapted from the stage success by Harry S. Sheldon.

The story: Laura Burton retires the love of an honest artist to accept the flattering attentions of Hamilton, a society pet that has not, however, that she has been betrayed and returns to her mother. She reads of Hamilton's engagement to Alice Fairbanks and makes plans to save the young girl, who, in reality is her sister, adopted by Fairbanks in childhood. Laura and her mother arrive in time to prevent the completion of the ceremony. Hamilton is denounced, Alice free to marry the man she really loves and the young artist returns to claim Laura.

"TYRANT FEAR"

Paramount drama; five parts; directed by William Neill; published April 20

As a whole: Good; Story: Fair; Setting: Pleasing; Support: Strong; Photography: Superb.

Paramount has added another to the already long list of Klondike productions containing many beautiful snow scenes which will undoubtedly do much to add to the mental comfort of the sweltering public during the hot summer months. The usual high-class settings are much in evidence in "Tyrant Fear," which casts Miss Dalton in the role of the wife of a beast, a dance hall favorite and finally the loved one of a morally rejuvenated easterner.

The story: Allaine Grandet is sold in marriage to Jules Latour, a trapper, by her father, Paula Grandet. As a climax to his constant brutality, Latour turns her over to James Dermot, who offers to pay the husband well for his wife's appearance in the Northern Star dance hall. Once in the dance hall, she is put up as the slate in a card game between Dermot and a miner, the dance hall proprietor being the loser. She resists her new owner, and is aided by Dane, the piano player, who is shot down by Dermot. She, in turn, shoots the dance hall proprietor and escapes with Dane, whom she nurses back to health. He seeks to marry her, but she apprises him of the fact that she has a husband. The finding of Latour's body in the snow simplifies matters for the couple.

"THE WINNING OF BEATRICE"

Metro drama; five parts; directed by Harry L. Franklin; published May 20

As a whole: Fair; Story: Average; Support: Good; Settings: Appropriate; Photography: Excellent.

This is an average program feature with a few subtleties that draw laughs, a safe robbery, a charity bazaar, a deathbed confession and a few other things that have been in pictures very seldom, particularly first class.

While May Allison does her bit to help the story along the result is not equal to "Social Hypocrites," her former production on this program. It will probably interest, but it will not excite much unusual comment.

Supporting Miss Allison are Hale Hamilton, Frank Currier, Stephen Gratton, John Davidson, Frank Joyner and Ivy Ward. The story was written by May Tully.

J. Barney Sherry and Gloria Swanson in

"HER DECISION"

Triangle drama; five parts; directed by Jack Conway; published May 12

As a whole: Excellent; Story: Good; Stars: Strong; Support: Efficient; Settings: Appropriate; Photography: Good.

Dealing with the self-sacrifices of a girl who gave herself in marriage to her whole-hearted employer that she might smooth life's highway for her betrayed sister, "Her Decision" carries a keen heart interest theme which is bound to win approval. The stars, J. Barney Sherry and Gloria Swanson, commendably cast in parts seemingly made to order for them, are ably supported by a capable cast.

There are many strong scenes and the production moves just rapidly enough to keep the interest on edge. There is a strong climax when Gloria, convinced of the lack of character in a former admirer, declares her love for the man she has married in order to finance her sister though her trouble.

The story: Her sister, betrayed by a dissolute young millionaire, Phyllis Dunbar, seeks aid of her fiance, Bobbie Warner, but is refused. In desperation she turns to Martin Rankin, her employer, who has proposed to her and been refused, with an offer of marriage if he will see her sister through her trouble. Rankin finally agrees and the ceremony is performed. He assures his young bride that they will live as paupers for a year and if he does not win her love by that time he will make her free to marry Bobbie. A visit to a dance hall conducted by Bobbie dispels what love there has been between the two and she returns to her home and gives her love freely to Rankin.

World to Publish "Hitting the Trail"

Director Dell Henderson having completed "By Hook or Crook," starring Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greely, has commenced work on "Hitting the Trail," written by Roy Somerville, a well-known short story and scenario contributor. Mr. Blackwell and Miss Greely will play the principal roles and Muriel Ostirrhe and John Bowers will be members of the supporting company.

The locale of the story is the famous East Side of New York and the story tells of the redemption of a woman's soul.

The story of a conquest for the affections of a Sudanese maid between a native prince and an unprincipled English nobleman furnishes another powerful vehicle for Susse Hayakawa in "The White Man's Law." The Japanese star, as John A. Ghenghis, the Oxford graduate son of an Arabian sheik, has a role wonderfully sympathetic to his talents.

In point of settings the picture is a masterpiece. Delightful scenes abound, and excellent camera work contributes much to the success of the production as a whole. Jack Holt does some excellent work as Sir Harry Falkland and Florence Vidor as Maida Verne is charming.

"The Triumph of the Week" is as enjoyable an Alice Joyce feature as has been published in quite some time. The story, while not of a heavy nature, is dramatic, has been handled in an appealing fashion and is thoroughly wholesome.

Director Terris has given careful attention to little details—those little things which are true to life and which, at the present time, are so greatly in demand. The picture starts out with plenty of action and continues throughout without ever attaining any great tension, but is entertainingly told.

Miss Joyce gives a sympathetic interpretation of the young wife, who is forced to steal to feed her infant, is sent to prison later marries the young superintendent of a department store and through breaking her parole is forced to return to prison to finish her sentence. The role of the husband is well played by Walter McGrail. Edith Jensen's work as "Diamond Mabel" stands out very strongly and each of the members of the supporting cast handled their roles in a capable fashion.

"The Triumph of the Week" in point of interest production, is a first-class picture and it should make a direct appeal to all classes of audiences. The story is the work of Edith Mills.

The story: Edith Merrill, forced to steal for her baby, is sentenced to prison, but is released on parole. She is not allowed to return to her job. Her parole period then is the only thing she can do to make things pretty hard for Edith. Assured of her husband's love, she returns to the prison to finish her sentence and then comes home to love and happiness.

"The Biggest Show on Earth" presents an old theme with a new twist. It is a pretty production carrying with it an interest in the story of the failure of a pretty girl going to boarding school, her entry into a family which is very proud of its ancestors and her final triumph in love.

The production has been artistically done, the circus scenes are excellent, and while the story is a hackneyed one, there is perhaps sufficient appeal to make it interesting to the majority of picture theatre goers. Florence Vincent is the author.

Enid Bennett has an appealing role and while it in no way compares with her role in "Naughty, Naughty," she is pleasing to look upon. Supporting her are Melbourne MacDowell, Earl Rodney, Ethel Lynn, Carl Stockdale and Bliss Chevalier.

The story: Roxie learns that her father is to be sent to a penal colony in South America, she wants to help him, but he is too proud to accept her help. The circus is a new idea in the park. So she accepts the idea of joining the circus but later breaks down. The Police are very much interested in her and she breaks down, but she is later saved. As soon as Owen Trent sees Roxie, he thinks she has found the only girl. But her dream is quickly shattered when Mrs. Trent learns that Roxie is the daughter of a circus owner. However, when Owen Trent comes to her home and offers her a job, she is pleased and accepts. The circus, as usual, is a success and the young people are allowed to continue their courtship.

Story "Viviette" for Paramount Star

Vivian Martin, that charming little Paramount star, it is announced, is soon to appear in a film version of William J. Lock's sprightly tale, "Viviette," which in book form has been exceedingly popular and which, it is thought, should make a most entertaining picture.

Life, "one of the countless funny journals," now given over entirely to alluring jokes and pictures by the Walker family, won't admit that there are any good motion pictures. In a recent issue its dramatic critic takes pleasure in drawing comparison between the film version of "The Blue Bird" and the latest production of Maeterlinck's fairy tale. As a critic Metcalfe would make a good office boy for Klaw & Erlanger.

Audent recent censorship agitation in Virginia a Richmond paper had the following to say: "We take it that the moving picture people will welcome the proposed censorship. We take it censorship is about as welcome to producers as the rainy season in California or the dry movement to the saloonkeepers.

There are a number of different kinds of scandals to pull which will give you all the publicity you care for. We mentioned but a few of the popular brands. If you're a live-wire, you can probably think of others. Hire a prominent church-worker to buy wine for an actress and the leading lady and husband have wife walk in on the party. Get in touch with a veterinarian and tell him to start something. That will be enough, as they are said to be up on the latest methods of attracting attention. At the height of the trial, step in and announce your show.*

"The Winning of Beatrice"—For advertising this feature get a flock of goats and alter neatly labeling them, "Don't let this goat get your goat, but go to see Beatrice," turn them loose on Main Street. As an advertising stunt nothing surpasses a few wild goats, especially of the Billy persuasion. J. R. M.
Canadian War Tax Menace

By W. A. Bach

If legislation at present before the Canadian government passes, the film industry in Canada today would seem to be facing most certain extinction.

The report from the Canadian government that a specific duty of five cents per linear foot will be placed on moving picture films is the last straw that will "break the camel's back."

This new tax means just an increase of 250 per cent over and above what the exchanges are now paying to import their films from the United States.

In other words, on a five-reel production the tax will amount to $250 over and above the print cost and it can be readily seen that ignoring all other business taxes, income levies, etc., that the cost of product is raised so high that it is impossible to make the corresponding increase in the retail sales price to the exhibitor.

Increase Three Cents Per Foot

The increase in the tax per linear foot is to the amount of three cents, the original tax being two cents before the present pending legislation.

It is the consensus of opinion of film men in Canada today that the exhibitors are right now paying maximum retail for film if they wish to make any profit.

Admission prices have been generally raised to fifteen cents and the only possible way left to meet a raise in his film rental to accommodate this war tax would be another increase in his admission price to twenty cents or twenty-five cents.

This move, of course, would be suicidal to small exhibitors and there is a great deal of doubt expressed as to whether even the 800 and 1,000 seat houses would get by with it.

Situation Extremely Serious

Claire Hague who has been assisting the Government with much of their propaganda work through the medium of the motion picture has been reported as stating that the situation is extremely serious and that unless some amendment is made to the legislation the motion picture industry in Canada is face to face with elimination.

The Government is being interviewed and the entire situation explained to them by the various members of the Industry at the time of writing, but what the result will be is a matter yet to be decided.

French Aces Shown in News Reel

The current issue of Gaumont Graphic No. 6, it is announced, showing the fighting aeroplanes and some of the most prominent of the French "Aces," including Adjutant Garaud, a mere boy in appearance, who has twelve air victories to his credit, and Lieutenant Madon, who has brought down twenty-six German flyers.

Other French subjects show the arrival of Secretary of War Baker in Paris, and some French War dolls which have been created by wounded soldiers.

The usual news activities in the United States are also shown, including intensive work in trench warfare, the entertainment of the marines on their weekly half-holiday, and the training of college boys as reserve officers to be used in case of later emergency.

The reception tendered the famous "Blue Devils of France," at City Hall, in New York City, is part of this news reel as well as the reception in Washington by President Wilson of Viscount Ishii, the new Japanese Envoy; the dissolving by dynamite of 25,000 tons of steel for highway building and the inspection by Army officers of alligator hide which is to take the place of leather for many war purposes.

Vance’s Story “No Man’s Land”

“No Man’s Land” is the title of Bert Lytell’s next picture, his second as a star under the Metro banner. It is to be a picturization of the novel of the same name by Louis Joseph Vance, and was adapted for the screen by Mr. Lytell and Le Viss, head of the scenario department at Metro’s west coast studios.

Caprice, Mix, Brockwell, Lee Kiddies
And Walsh on Fox Schedule for June

Five productions from the Eastern and Western studios are to be published as special features next month by William Fox, according to the June schedule, which has just been announced.

This is the order in which the pictures will be issued: June Caprice, "Blue-Eyed Mary," June 2; Mix, "Ace High," June 9; Brockwell, "The Scarlet Road," June 16; Lee Kiddies, "The Kid Is Clever," June 23; Walsh, "Foot of the Aces," June 30; "Blue-Eyed Mary," says Daisy Janewski in what is said to be one of the most appealing parts she has yet had. The supporting company consists of Helen Tracy, Blanche Hines, Bernard Randall, Edward J. LeSaint from the story and scenario of Charles Kenyon; George Walsh in "The Kid Is Clever," June 30, a surprise photo play said to be built on an original dramatic structure.

June Caprice Has Appealing Role

The first of the announced films, "Blue-Eyed Mary," shows dainty June Caprice in what is said to be one of the most appealing parts she has yet had. The supporting company consists of Helen Tracy, Blanche Hines, Bernard Randall, Thomas Fallon, Jack McLean, Henry Hallam and Florence Ashbrook.

"Ace High" is said to be a perfect vehicle for the fast-riding Tom Mix. Kathleen Connors, Lawrence Peyton, James O’Neil, Jay Morley, Golda Madden, Pat Crigan, Lloyd Perl, Virginia Lee Corbin and Lewis Sargent appear in Mix’s support.

In "The Kid Is Clever," the last special feature for June, the athletic George Walsh is provided, it is said, with another of the action and "stunt" productions which have won him such high favor.

The first of the Sunshine Comedies for June will be "Wild Women and Tame Lions," in which several kings of the forest and a score of pretty girls combine to produce a record-making laughbringer, under Henry Lehrman’s direction.

Cast of “Honor’s Cross” Presents
Many Favorites of Silent Drama

Screen players of unusual merit, it is said, are in the cast of "Honor’s Cross," the Selexart production distributed by Goldwyn. Few motion picture productions can boast a company of players whose individual talents are so admirably fitted to portray types, the excellence of which makes "Honor’s Cross" one of the most interesting plays of its kind.

As Jane Cabot, Rhea Mitchell, the star, gives a performance destined to put her at the top of the ranks of motion picture favorites. In turn, she is a cabaret dancer, a waitress, a wife, Miss Mitchell, it is said, has enjoyed a successful cinema career since forsaking the vaudeville stage.

To Herschel Mayall is entrusted the important role of Hon. Thomas Dolan, a corrupt politician. It is a part said to be full of big opportunities. Edward Coxen is another prominent screen artist whose work in "Honor’s Cross" is certain to win commendation wherever the Selexart production is seen. He has the role of Lee Stevens, a sturdy mountaineer lured to the city by Dolan.

Roy Laidlaw plays the role of "Gentleman Jim" Cabot, a former lightweight pugilist, but later a fighting heavyweight boxer. Adele Farrington, as Marian Cabot, mother of Jane, does marked credit to a difficult role. As "Gentleman Jim’s" wife, Miss Farrington has many emotional moments. Joseph J. Dowling is the typical mountaineer, the role he has.

Two More Mutt and Jeff Cartoons

The next two Bud Fisher animated cartoons that William Fox will release will be "Superintendents" and "Torsional Artists" in both of which Mutt and Jeff pen-and-ink their way to triumph as janitors, and then as barbers.

World Pictures Buys West Story

"The Wraith" is the title of a story by Paul West which has just been purchased by World Pictures. It is considered one of the best stories from the pen of Mr. West, who has been a prolific contributor to magazines and to the screen.
Paralta Completes "Shackled"

The final scenes of Louise Glau's second Paralta Play, "Shackled," have been completed, and the picture is now in the laboratories of the Paralta studios, Los Angeles, where it is being assembled.

The play is taken from an original story by Lawrence Mccloskey, which deals with the life of Lola Dexter, a young girl alone in the world. Lola's life is apparently wrecked through her love for Walter Cosgrove.

On the eve of Cosgrove's wedding to Edith Danfield, he tells Lola that his funds are exhausted and that he is to marry this girl whose fate is a man of wealth. Griev-striicken Lola goes away from the little town and arrives in Palm Beach, Fl., where she becomes the companion of a man whose limbs are paralyzed and who is spending the winter months in that resort. Lola's sunny disposition awakens new interest in life for the man. He falls in love with her and she consents to marry him. They return to his estate, where she finds that he is the father of the girl Cosgrove married. The story gathers in force, it is said, until the final climactic

Two Dual Roles in This Triangle

A new feature picture of the South and West has been put into production at the Triangle Culer City studios, it is announced, under the working title of "The Heritage." The feature is being directed by Raymond Wells. Jack Richardson will play the part of the "heavy," while Irene Hunt will appear as his leading woman.

In "The Heritage," both Jack Richardson and Miss Hunt play dual roles. As two young people in the South, they experience a love romance which ends unhappily. Then the action jumps to the West, where they again meet as the son and daughter of the former sweethearts. The climax of the play is reached as they work out their own happiness in a unusual manner. Of the cast the last include Jack Livingston, Dot Hagar, Burwell Hamrick and Buster Irving.

Gaumont to Publish Serial

The Gaumont Company will soon have ready for state rights buyers, it is said, what may aptly be called an amazing serial in ten two-reel episodes. This is an up-to-date story of the Monte Cristo type, featuring a man who returns "from the dead" to avenge his wrongs, and aid others who have been oppressed. The serial will be called "The Man From the Dead."
Keeny Features Distributed by William L. Sherry

The first picture of the Frank A. Keeny Pictures Corporation, "A Romance of the Underworld," will be published in about two weeks, according to an announcement by William L. Sherry, through whom the Keeny pictures are to be distributed.

Mr. Sherry recently resigned from the vice-presidency of the Paramount Pictures Corporation to devote his time to other interests, including the distribution of the Keeny pictures. He is still one of the largest stockholders in the Paramount, it is said.

The second Keeny picture, "Marriage," by Guy Bolton, was run off last week for the first time in the projection room of the Keeny studio, 13th Street and Main, Hollywood. Those who saw it declare that it is sure to "go over big." They comment especially upon its superior quality as an artistic production and upon the dramatic force and intensely human appeal of the story. Both pictures star Catherine Calvert.

"A Romance of the Underworld" is superior to the average underwater picture," says Mr. Sherry, "because it is handled in such a manner as to show nothing offensive at the same time drives home forcibly a great moral lesson. I believe it is the kind of picture every one ought to see and will be glad to see the day when the drug and opium traffic in Greater New York and depicts conditions truthfully and vividly. It is not merely a 'crusading' picture. It's an appealing human story, with plenty of thrills and dramatic incident. Furthermore, it is highly instructive, as it shows Greater New York scenes and landmarks, such as Blackwell's Island, the Bowery, Chinatown, the East Side, Little Italy, the Tombs and Criminal Courts Building, with the familiar Bridge of Sighs, well known to all of us who have read about it. The scenes are really there.

A reviewer has characterized the picture as 'the best of its kind,' and I am inclined to agree. Mr. Sherry has spared to make the Keeny picture what pictures really ought to be, and I know the results will show as soon as they get to the public."

Universal Co. Drops Hall, Farnum and Johnson From List

The contracts of three Universal stars—Ella Hall, Franklyn Farnum and Emory Johnson—expired last week and were not renewed, it is announced.

The names of several well-known screen actresses are under consideration to fill the places left by the failure to renew the Hall contract, and it is said Universal will have an important announcement along these lines in the near future.

As a result of the departure of Miss Hall, another star combination is broken up. Ralph Gravett, who was signed by Universal recently and is said to be the youngest leading man of the screen, instead of playing opposite Miss Hall, will be seen with Priscilla Dean. After being signed by Universal, Graves was loaned to Maurice Tourneur, who is producing "Romance of Life" and desired the services of Graves for the picture. Graves' work in "Sporting Life" will be completed in about two weeks, when he will proceed to Los Angeles to fulfill the terms of his contract.

Essanay Rounds Up Gang Film Thieves in the Forest City

The Essanay Film Corporation has begun a vigorous campaign against film pirates and has succeeded in obtaining the first conviction under the criminal statutes for film thefts in Ohio.

Action was taken in Cleveland, where Joe Morrow was arrested and found guilty in the county court of receiving stolen property and of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. The punishment sentence is one year in prison and $500 fine.

Lee Friedman was also convicted of larceny. Sentence has not been pronounced, the court reserving decision until the completion of the trial of another man who is charged with receiving stolen property.

This is but the first of a series of prosecutions which Essanay is conducting. It is said, Action will be taken on criminal grounds in several cities as soon as the evidence is completed.

In Cleveland it was shown that the films which were received were from an organized band which made a business of pirating films. Essanay discovered that several Broncho Billy and Chaplin films were missing in that city. Andrew J. Callaghan investigated and discovered that films were being shown that did not come from the authorized exchanges. There were three pictures, all of which were found that business was conducted from a shack in the outskirts of the city. The place was raided and the two arrests followed. Twenty-five 16mm films, some of them belonging to Essanay and several to other companies, were found.

The detectives also took Lee Friedman into custody. The boy confessed to the theft, it is said. Friedman admitted taking several films from the exchange for which he worked.

The former method of prosecuting film pirates was to bring civil suit. It has now been shown that criminal action can be taken and it is believed that this will go a long way toward breaking up the practice of falsifying films.

Lincoln Stars in His Own Picture

E. K. Lincoln, who has been engaged in the making of a feature picture in California for the past three months, is expected to arrive in New York this week, his representative, T. E. Letendre, announces.

Mr. Lincoln will bring with him from the coast, it is said, a stirring picture of the north and west, which he made under the direction of W. Christy Cabanne. His plans of distribution will be announced upon his arrival.
James R. Grainger to Exploit “Cleopatra”

During Chicago Run

Following a ten days’ campaign of intensive exploitation under the direction of James R. “Jimmie” Grainger, the Fox production “Cleopatra” with Theda Bara will start an indefinite run at the Colonial Theatre, Monday, May 27. This is the first appearance in Chicago of this film, long held up in the courts due to a legal battle with the censor over eliminations demanded.

Mr. Grainger was selected by General Manager W. R. Sheehan of the Fox Film Corp., because of his long experience in exploiting big features. An extensive newspaper campaign has already begun and the billboards of the city bear evidence of Mr. Grainger’s faith in the possibilities of advertising.

An orchestra of twenty-five pieces has been engaged to furnish the music during the Colonial run of the picture and the theatre will be decorated in Oriental settings to blend with the atmosphere of the production.

“Mothers of Liberty”

Greiver & Herz Film

Opens at Ziegfeld

“Mothers of Liberty,” the latest state right purchase for Illinois and Indiana by Greiver and Herz, opened at the Ziegfeld Theatre last Sunday night for a week’s run, at the conclusion of which it will be shown at the Rose Theatre for another seven days. Following this, many of the larger neighborhood houses will play the production.

The production, which was made by the Monopol Picture Company of New York, is in six reels, and while it deals with the war and peace problem, it is not a war picture. It has been termed a patriotic spectacle, and has been endorsed by leading government and army executives because of the good it is destined to do the allied cause.

The picture clearly demonstrates, it is said, that German Kultur is not a new phase of propaganda in the Central empire, but was in vogue during the Franco-Prussian war in 1870.

Greiver and Herz are now completing arrangements for the showing of the picture throughout the territory controlled by them. Attractive lobby displays are to be had for exploiting the picture, which include twenty-four sheets, three styles of photographs and two styles of 22 x 24 photographs. Despite the fact that eight prints of the picture are available, Mr. Greiver asserts, this amount has proved insufficient.

Move to New Studio

The Camel Film Company announces that the Camel studios, Chicago, have moved into their new building at 950-954 Edgecombe Place.

W. R. Heaney Heads

Illinois Unit of

Affiliated Corp.

William R. Heaney was elected president of the Exhibitors’ Booking Corporation of Illinois at a meeting of the directors of that corporation held Monday of this week in the offices of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners’ Association.

Through his election Mr. Heaney becomes chief executive of the local unit of the Affiliated Distributors Corporation.

W. D. Burford, of the Aurora Theatres Company, was elected vice-president. H. A. Gundling, secretary; Maurice A. Choyinski, treasurer, and Sam Gold, auditor. Joseph Hopp and Louis Frank were chosen national directors. The appointment of two directors signifies that the unit is incorporated under the two-hundred booking days plan.

The seven directors of the corporation are M. A. Choyinski, H. A. Gundling, Joseph Hopp, William Heaney, Abe Ostrovsky, J. Cooper, W. D. Burford, Sam Gold, Clyde Bates, George Hopkinson and Louis Frank.

The directors were chosen at a meeting held a week ago at which time Dee Robinson of Peoria and William Seiger signed up for $100 worth of stock each. Another meeting of the stockholders will be held this week at which time, it is believed, plans will be made for securing the additional members necessary for the venture and also for putting the booking plan into operation.

PERSONALS

“By George”

The weather being always a good topic of conversation, we might as well start in on that. We are able to state, after careful observation, that it is warmer than it was when the temperature was lower. But that’s to be expected. So much for the weather.

S’far as we know, although we haven’t seen them all, Mr. Frank B. Rogers of the local Pathé exchange, is the first exchange manager to don a straw helmet for the summer season. We was just waiting for Frank to start things off and $1.50 or $2.00, or what should one pay for a hat, in order to bedeck our dome.

Quite a number of Universal celebrities were active in our town the past week, including Harry I. Burman, general manager; Marie J. Jeppson, who included Chicago in his itinerary of a country-wide visit to exchanges. Harry Levy, manager of Universal’s industrial department, was with us, and Mrs. Carlisle Ellis, chief scenario writer, also spent a few days in our midst. Levy is considering opening a Chicago office. We’ll gladly find room for him.

Arthur McMillan of the American Projector Company, has gained sufficient strength after his recent serious illness to be able to leave St. Luke’s hospital. He promises to buck up and doin’ in the near future, and his many friends are waiting to shake his hand and congratulate him on his recovery.

He was standing by the curbing in State street last Saturday, was Bill Weaver, associate editor of Screen Opinions, when, becoming conscious of a nibbling at his left shoulder, he turned to find a horse munching his coat.

Now, Bill’s been in the city six months, having left Boone, Iowa, at that time, and to our way of thinking he is city broke. Bill don’t know whether the brute was trying to make him a good companion out of him or whether it’s part of an initiation a trained reviewer has got to go through.

Frank Flaherty, of the local Four-square office, is in New York on business and is expected back soon with a lot of good film and considerable deposits. If we can get the news out of him, we’ll spring it next week. Anybody can dicker with him for the films.

H. E. McDorman, formerly owner of the Frances Theatre, Twelfth street and Western avenue, has assumed the management of the Dearborn Theatre, at Dearborn and Division. Roger Sullivan has moved to the north side, too. Something wrong with the west side?

“Jack” Meredith made his debut last Wednesday night as manager of the Kedzie Theatre, at Twelfth and Kedzie, and if opening night is any criterion Jack will never rejoin the ranks of film salesmen.

Bayley and Banford, the busy “B’s” of the Goldwyn exchange, were both out of the city last week, one in Iowa and the other in Illinois. Both report successful trips and as they had no chance to communicate with each other before we saw them, we’re inclined to believe them.
Leo A. Ochs has returned to New York after spending a week with C. W. Bunn, local manager for United Pictures, Inc. He appeared contented with the way things were going and announced that Harry Miller, of the Rose, has signed up for first runs on the United program.

H. A. Brink, one of the powers that be with the Affiliated Distributors, arrived in town last Friday at 11:30 a.m., pulled up Lou Frank and Joe Hopp by the roots, and took them to Milwaukee on the 12 o'clock train in the interests of his new project. We think he got Hopp's consent to accompany him about forty miles outside of our city.

Rex Weber, at one time director for the Titan Pictures Corporation, and more recently supervising the "Birth of a Race" production, is back in Chicago again. Rex isn't ready to make public his new connection, so we didn't press him.

Two more of our local theatre managers have joined the colors. Manager Mrs. Altland, of the Star Theatre, Thirty-fifth street, has joined the navy, and Louis Breakea, owner of the Broadway Theatre, will join the National Army on May 25.

On the Firin' Line

La-Veen, first name George, heard of him? Yes, he's with Universal and darn near a headliner. The company offered $40 in prizes for the salesman who would get the most contracts for Bluebirds and Alice Howell comedies. Friend George, he copped the whole forty bucks. We're beginning to think that maybe that bird's got a right to page himself.

This being the season for week-end auto trips, Bert's, Sedell, Morrie Salinger and H. McMillan, accompanied by their better halves, motored to Hobart, Ind., last Sunday. Sedell brought the Bevo and McMillan provided ham sandwiches, handiwork of the Mrs., and a good time was had by all. During the excitement brought on by the fishing and country air, the Salkins are said to have partaken of the ham sandwiches, but this is confidential.

Speaking of Salkin. Some low-browed hound has been stealing the lacteal fluids from his doorstep, and the other morning about 5 o'clock Morrie put on his rubber-heeled shoes, picked out a point of vantage and waited for the thief. He was still waiting when it came time to go to work. Ain't thieves the obstinate critters. We'll bet Morrie will either catch him or quit taking milk.

Louis Noto has left the Mutual Film Corporation and has accepted a position as special sales representative for the Universal, working out of the Chicago office.

James P. Reilly, formerly of the Triangle sales staff, has joined the Metro ranks. He will cover Illinois territory.

There's a smile on the face of Walter Altland, of Foursquare. They've added to his north side territory. He's on commission. More territory, more commission, hence the smile. Simple? What?

Walter Hickey, who has been managing the Grand Theatre in Green Bay, Wis., has resigned his position and returned to Chicago, where he will probably resume selling films. Hickey has just been apprised through the casualty lists of the death of his brother, a member of the Rainbow division, in France.

Merrill Nelvin is now in charge of the Foursquare shipping room. He was formerly connected with the local Universal branch.

Spencer, of United Picture Theatres, spent the last week in Milwaukee, and reports that ten exhibitors in "Fable" city have signed up for his proposition.

Aaron Saperstein, of the Mutual sales force, is booking for the Irving Theatre, South Halsted street, in addition to his other duties.

I. Van Gelder, of the Pathe sales force, has answered the call of Uncle Sam, and last week of this week for Jefferson Barracks, Mo. Those Pathe salesmen must have a reputation for fighting with the government, we thinks.

Benny Edelman, whose three years of service on the road for Universal is said to be almost a record for continuous service, the company, has ceased his gadding and joined the local sales force. 'Ware the pitfalls of the big city, Benny. May your record continue unbroken.

Bert Monroe, operator de luxue of Pathe, ain't a salesman, but we don't devote a column to operators and we got to get them somewhere, so when Bert comes along with his neuraglia bad and what's the use of having anything like that if nobody knows about it?

Orchestra Hall Opens With Motion Pictures

For Summer Season

When Maerlinck's "The Bluebird," a Paramount production, was presented at the Orchestra Hall, Monday, May 6, it marked the opening of motion picture entertainment in "the home of the symphony orchestra" for the summer season.

The premiere proved a success, as was evidenced by the large crowds who turned out despite the unsettled weather conditions. And the audience's appreciation of the artistry of the production found expression in enthusiastic applauses.

In addition to "The Blue Bird," a Burton Holmes travelogue and a Bray cartoon were shown. A fifteen piece orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Dunham, was augmented by organ selections and a chorus of voices.

The stage setting consisted of an attractive arrangement of flower boxes and greens.

Ebon's New Star

In "Millionaire Piker"

Luther J. Pollard, president and general manager of the Ebon Film Corporation, Chicago, producers of the Ebon comedies being distributed through the General Film Company, announces "A Millionaire Piker," as the latest laugh-maker from their studio. Sam Robinson, who is fast making a name for himself as a real comedian, is the leading light in this subject. Mr. Robinson has a part, it is declared, which offers him great scope for the display of his wonderful versatility as a comedian. The genuine negro humor is forcefully brought out in this fifteen minutes of laughs, it is said.

The usual supporting cast, Yvonne Junior and Samuel Jacks, assist in getting over the many funny situations. The production was written for the screen by Bob Horner, from a story by Ralph R. Weddell. It was directed by Charles N. David.

A story, as yet unnamed, written by production manager A. B. Heath and director Ralph G. Phillips, directed by the latter, is rapidly rounding into shape.

Mattie Edwards, a former leading comedienne with Lubin, is featured in this vehicle.

Mary Anderson Plans Big W. S. S. Tour

Mary Anderson, petite star of the Hayakawa Company and former Vitagraph actress, has been urged by a patriotic citizen of Missouri to make an automobile trip across the continent in a campaign he has inaugurated in behalf of the war saving's stamps.

Miss Anderson's correspondent, who does not wish to have his name mentioned, offers to furnish the automobile and to pay all the expenses of the trip. Hayakawa, who has campaigned enthusiastically for the Liberty Loan bonds, approves of the idea, and Miss Anderson in all probability will arrange to proceed on the tour upon the completion of the next Hayakawa production.

"King in Khaki" Next

Lockwood Metro Film

Having completed "Lend Me Your Name," a farce comedy adapted by Fred J. Balshofer and John B. Clymer from Francis Perry Elliott's novel of that name, to be issued by Metro on May 27, Harold Lockwood is preparing for his appearance in his starring vehicle to follow.

As the subject for this newest Lockwood production, Henry Kitchell Webster's novel, "A King in Khaki," has been selected, instead of "Pals First," which was previously announced. Though its title savors of the military, "A King in Khaki" is in no sense a war story, it is said.

Rex Beach's Drama
Booked Heavily in New York and Boston

What is said to be the biggest booking of the spring season in New York was given this week by Marcus Loew to the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation for Rex Beach's southwestern romantic drama, "Heart of the Sunset." This feature will usher in the summer season at every Loew theatre in the metropolitan and suburban zones, covering a period of seventy odd days.

The Loew booking was obtained by Alfred Weiss, one of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation's vice-presidents, and covered the following Loew houses: Fulton, Greeley Square, Hoboken, Lincoln Square, National, Newark, New Rochelle, New York Theatre and Roof, 116th Street, Orpheum, Palace of Brooklyn, Victoria, American, Avenue B, Bijou, Boulevard, Broadway, Circle, DeKalb, Debevec Street, 6th Street, 4th Street, Warwick, West End.

During the past few days Mr. Weiss also closed a first-run contract for Boston with the Metropole Theatre, in the hub of the Washington street downtown district of the Hub.

Miss Kennedy Renews Her Goldwyn Contract

Madge Kennedy is the latest Goldwyn star to sign a new and still longer term contract with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, under whose name and auspices she made her successful debut in motion pictures. Miss Kennedy's original contract with Goldwyn still had a long time to run, but so great has been her success and so enthusiastic is Goldwyn about her, that the company wished to get the wonderful little comedienne to cast her lot with it for years ahead.

This announcement definitely puts an end to the rumor about Miss Kennedy's return to the stage as a star under David Belasco's management.

Since her debut pictures last spring, Miss Kennedy has scored heavily in "Baby Mine," from Margaret Mayo's stage success; in "Nearly Married," from Edgar Selwyn's stage play; in "Our Little Wife," an Avery Hopwood hit; and in "The Danger Game," a melodramatic comedy, written for her by Roy Somerville.

Tom North Appointed Division Manager of Pathe Eastern Field

Tom North, one of the best known and most popular men in the big Pathe organization, and editor of the company's official house organ, the Pathe Sun, has been appointed division manager with jurisdiction extending over the entire eastern district.

North's appointment follows closely on those of Ralph O. Proctor, for the middle western and W. S. Wesseling for the southern districts to work under the direction of Sales Manager F. C. Quimby.

For more than twenty years Mr. North has been associated with successful ventures in the field of amusements. His first connection was with Price's floating operas, showing on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. Then he was with Julianthea melodramas. He was with Gentry Brothers' show, with Charles Whitaker, and with Lincoln J. Carter. He also conducted drama, was a booker for Vitaphone prints, and was the director of the Leffley-Bratton Company. He was press man for the Ringling Brothers Circus for several years and booked and directed road attractions for Harry Aiskin for three years. In San Francisco, Mr. North organized and directed sixteen road companies. He is known as "Kick." Later he was in charge of the V-L-S-E Seattle office. The movement for adequate advertising of motion pictures in the Little Dippers received its first impetus through him. Seattle still ranks foremost in the opinion of many as a result of the pioneer work done by Mr. North.

Tom North joined Pathe as Manager of the Super Feature Department, handling special engagements of such features as "Les Misérables," and "The German Curse in Russia." When Tarleton Winchester took charge of all publicity, Mr. North became editor of the Sun and has built the photographic division of Pathe's exploitation work with marked ability and success. His appointment as division manager is in every way a reward of merit. Pathe announces.

Mutual's News Reel Shows Ky. Derby Day After Event

Orchestra Hall, Chicago, showed the running of the Kentucky Derby, May 13, forty-eight hours after the turf event at Churchill Downs. This is one of the features of Screen Telegram No. 23 for May 15.

The event shows the spectacular race at every stage; the monster crowd of 40,000 people; Governor Stanley of Kentucky; Major-General Hale, Commandant of Camp Zachary Taylor, at the head of the famous Signal Corps of the English Army, and many other notables in army, political and social life.

Manager W. F. Clements, of Orchestra Hall, has booked the Screen Telegram for seventeen weeks, and has a special pre-release arrangement with Mutual to get special service as fast as it is released off the drying drums.

Barrymore to Do Series of Pictures For Paramount

Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in charge of productions, announces the addition of John Barrymore to the list of Paramount stars. Mr. Barrymore's work on the stage and screen has placed him in the front rank of leading actors of to-day. He has signed, it is said, for a series of pictures, work on the first of which will shortly begin at one of the famous studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

This engagement marks Mr. Barrymore's return to the screen as a Paramount star. Several years ago he made his motion picture début under this banner, among his initial film hits being "The Man from Mexico," and "Are You a Mason?" His work before the camera immediately proved his adaptability to motion picture acting and he rapidly became a popular among followers of the photoplay. After a triumphant season in the silent drama for Famous Players, Mr. Barrymore returned to the stage to take up engagements which resulted in several other big successes on Broadway.

Mr. Barrymore's initial picture will be an adaptation by Charles E. White, from Willie Collier's famous play, "On the Quiet," in which Mr. Collier toured America twice and presented for a long run in London productions by Thomas and was acclaimed everywhere as a splendidly conceived and genuinely humorous farce.

Tom Geraghty Writes Play for Miss Glaum

With his adaptation of "Toby" in production, Tom J. Geraghty has started work on an original story for Louise Glaum, which has been assigned to Division of Wallace Worsley of the Paralta studio.

Geraghty's story deals with an interesting phase of life that is typical of the east side of New York, it is said, introducing a character that is extremely human and unlike the accepted theatrical type evident in many present-day photodramas.

Robert Brunton, manager of Paralta productions, is planning on reproducing an entire east side street, modeled from a street of the same name, especially in New York for this purpose.

Mr. Geraghty's stories have met with unusual success, he having the adaptations of "A Man's Man," "Turn of a Card" and "With Hoops of Steel," starring Henry Walthal, to his credit.

President's Life in Films

With the sale of the territorial rights to "The Last Raid of Zeppelin Z-12" well underway, the Interstate Film Company, its producers, announce that they have commenced work on a production, the title of which will be announced at a later date, and which will, it is said, be an historical chronology of the life of our president, Woodrow Wilson.
London Opera House Has Been Remodeled For Summer Season

A wonderful transformation has been made in the Grand Opera House, London, Ont., in order to obtain a summer garden effect for the coming season. The interior has been made into a bower of flowers, with entirely new lighting arrangements, while the ventilating system has been overhauled and remodeled. To make this change a carload of floral decorations were imported from the States, while seven hundred yards of new draperies were bought in Toronto. The theatre’s electrician was sent on a tour of American theatres to get ideas, and the suggestions of theatre decorators of several cities were obtained.

The whole theatre was repainted and redecorated by a staff of twenty men in less than forty-eight hours, and during this time the changes effected included the installation of a new stage setting, remodeling of the ladies’ room, installation of many lighting fixtures, special decoration of the orchestra pit, overhaul of the ventilating system, hanging of new box and lobby draperies and the renovation of the entrance. New carpets were laid, new furniture and flower baskets were placed in various parts of the theatre.

A. J. Small, owner, and J. R. Minhinick, manager, have also closed contracts for a new film service. The policy of the theatre will be to present first runs of Goldwyn and Metro features, and the contracts will include the film of Charlie Chaplin and Lonesome Luke subjects. Programmes will be changed twice each week, with matinees each alternate Saturday and Sunday.

One of the features of the Y. M. C. A. War Fund Campaign in Montreal, Que., was the erection of a Y. M. C. A. portable moving picture theatre in Dominion Square. Many of the latest releases were presented in the hut during the campaign.

The Montreal Screen Club is now officially on the map. The new quarters at 319 University Street were ready for occupation on May 13 and the first event was a house-warming affair and billiards in which he is included in the equipment and arrangements have been made for the opening of a restaurant.

The first president is J. J. O’Brien, of Royal Flower Building, and the secretary-treasurer is John Smythe. The club is the first of its kind in Canada. Membership in the organization has been thrown open to all men associated with the moving picture business in the city.
Leading Showmen Endorse “Tarzan”
As Drawing Card

In recent communications to the headquarters of the First National Exhibitors’ Circuit, three of the leading motion picture showmen of the United States have expressed themselves in interesting terms regarding the manner in which “Tarzan of the Apes” has gone over under their auspices.

“All of the recent highly gratifying experience with ‘My Four Years in Germany,’ ” writes S. Barret McCormick, managing director of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, “I thought that our house attendance record would stand for some time to come. But such was not the case. Two weeks later, when we came to reckon up the box office receipts for ‘Tarzan’ we were pleasantly startled to find that the big spectacle of jungle life had the edge on Ambassador Gerard’s revelations by the price of two Liberty Bonds, to use a patriotic simile. I never saw a straight romantic picture go over in such smashing style.”

Aaron Jones, of the firm of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, who are now showing “Tarzan” at the Colonial Theatre, Chicago, seems equally enthusiastic about the film’s reception.

Chicago Likes Film

“According to past history,” says Mr. Jones, “Chicago is a difficult city in which to exploit a film of pretentious calibre to the fullest degree, but ‘Tarzan’ gives every evidence of being a marked exception to this rule. Box-office figures tell the story in the briefest and most eloquent form, and the figures already at hand from the Colonial are the best we have scanned in a long, long time. The cool weather we have had for the past two weeks has drawn the crowds back to indoor entertainment, and ‘Tarzan’ has reaped the benefit. We have played to packed audiences since the opening day, and the end is not yet in sight. We feel that the universal appeal of ‘Tarzan’ and the moving picture business will flourish, war or no war.”

As secretary of the Exhibitors’ Film Exchange, Inc., of the northwest, no one is in a better position to gauge the power of production to pay dividends to itself and the business associates than Mr. Frederick V. Fisher.

“We have just closed a record-breaking run with ‘Tarzan of the Apes’ in the Coliseum at Seattle,” writes Mr. Fisher, “and you may quote me to the effect that we have never played a more profitable or better liked picture in any of our theatres throughout this part of the country.”

United States distribution is conducted by the George Kleine System throughout Canada and the Kleine System is routing the picture through the General Film exchanges as a result of the recent service cooperation entered into between the two companies in that territory.

Elizabeth Sears
P. A. for American Leaves for France

Mrs. Elizabeth Sears, for the past eight months, publicity director of the American Film Company, Inc., left Chicago on May 6 on her way to France. Mrs. Sears will remain in New York for several weeks to announce, when she will sail for three months in the war zone. She will go abroad as a representative of Today’s Housewife, and will gather material for a series of articles for this magazine as well as for several others.

Mrs. Sears has for years been one of the best-known newspaper women in the middle west. She was connected with the Omaha World Herald, the Memphis News-Scimitar, and the Kansas City Star before going to New York. Three years ago she undertook the organization and the editorship of the first motion picture comic magazine, Film Fun, for the Leading Film Company. She severed her connection with this magazine to become publicity director for the American Film Company last August. Mrs. Sears has been a regular contributor to Harper’s, the Ladies’ Home Journal, Woman’s Home Companion and other magazines. For several months past Mrs. Sears has been conducting a War Time Journal for Today’s Housewife, written especially as a means of helping women readjust their lives to the exigencies of war.

Tsuru Aoki Will Be Seen in Hayakawa Play

Tsuru Aoki, according to announcement from the Hawworth Picture Corp., has one of the important roles in Susse Hayakawa’s initial picture, upon the production of which he is at present engaged with his own independent company.

This dainty daughter of Japan, although bearing the screen name of Tsuru, is not a prototypical Japanese star, and is no stranger to the camera, having appeared in a number of photograph dramas during the past four years and frequently in striking roles in the pictures in which her husband has been starred.

Tsuru Aoki, although raised in this country from early childhood by relatives, who brought her to Southern California from Japan, retains, it is said, all the alluring characteristics of the little brown maids of the “land of the rising sun,” and her charming personality, reflected on the screen, together with her natural portrayal of the roles in which she has been so successful, has not only won her the affection of the hosts of admirers throughout the land.

William Worthington, who is directing the Hayakawa productions, says Miss Aoki, as the present production fits her splendidly and is certain to win her new laurels.

Foursquare Gets France Film

“The Natural Law,” which was produced by the France Films, Inc., is to be distributed in all parts of the United States, through the Foursquare Pictures. Contracts to this end were signed this week by George Backer and Jacob Wildberg, president and treasurer of Foursquare, and the subject will be issued immediately, it is said.

South Lifts Ban On Sunday Films
Clergy Coinciding

Orrin G. Cocks, advisory secretary of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, who has been making a survey of recreation conditions in a number of cities of the South for the Playground and Recreation Association of America, has just returned to New York, and reports he sees a liberalizing tendency in the business regarding the opening of motion picture theatres on Sunday afternoons, due to the pressure of military needs. He visited Wilmington, Greenville, and Charlotte, N. C., Columbia, Charleston, and Spartanburg, S. C., Augusta, Atlanta, and Macon, Ga., and Jacksonville, Fla.

“All of these cities,” Mr. Cocks says, “have a strong feeling about preserving the sanctity of Sunday, and the closing of commercial entertainments on that day. In view of our present attitude by the church has not made good in solving the problem of Sunday activities of the soldiers in neighboring cantonments, there is naturally the recognition of the need of some form of commercial entertainment on Sunday afternoons.

In Chattanooga, where the ministers have not objected to the use of pictures on Sunday and the citizens feel that the community atmosphere has been improved by the religious, have not interfered with the church services. The influence on the non-church group has been found to be decisive. The clergymen have agreed not to oppose motion pictures in the city auditorium on Sunday afternoons if no admission charge is required. Some fine motion pictures are being shown now in Charleston.

“In all the towns mentioned,” Mr. Cocks adds, “the exhibitors have been peculiarly alert to the needs of their cities and have exercised discernment in the selection of pictures. In this way they have won the respect of their com- munities. This has formed a marked relationship upon the further use of pictures for the soldiers on Sunday afternoons. A characteristic of the motion picture exhibition in the southern cities is that one man usually controls practically all the shows in a given community.”

Increased Demand
For Big Features

With the completion of preparations for the distribution with the two new U. S. Exhibitors’ Booking Corporation productions, “Men” and “The Crucible of Life,” Frank Hall is keeping his committee of selection busy, it is said, with a view to finding, at the earliest possible moment another picture that measures up to his special production standards.

Starting with Tom Ince’s “The Zep- pelin’s Last Raid,” Mr. Hall’s first choice for the U. S. Corporation, and taking into account ‘Wild Bill James, How Pay,” “The Belgian” and “Just a Woman,” the demand for pictures with special advertising involves, is, according to Mr. Hall, much greater than the supply.
Minneapolis Exhibitor Asks Court
To Expel Northwest Corp. Officers

Edward F. Hinz in Bill Charges Election of Directors on May 8 Illegal Because of Provisions in By-Laws

Dispelling the apparent harmony which followed the rather stormy session of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation, Edward F. Hinz, prominent Minneapolis theatre owner and one of the leaders of the insurgents who unsuccessfully sought to break the organization slate at the annual election, has filed complaint in equity in the district court of Hennepin county, asking that the election of directors and officers of the corporation be declared illegal.

While the complaint, which was filed through Attorney John G. Priebe, bears only the signature of Mr. Hinz, it is the general belief that he is backed by action by practically all the exhibitors who fostered and sought the election of those elected "by-mail" tickets.

Specifically, the complaint charges that the election was illegal because of a section in the by-laws which provides that a majority of the stockholders must be present at any meeting where the election of officers is taken up.

Dan Chamberlin, Ralph Parker, Clyde Hitchcock, Fred Upam, Joseph Friedman, William H. Deeth, Dan Eselin, William Watson, Ellsworth Cameron and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest are named in the complaint, which requires that an answer be made within twenty days of the serving of the summons.

Treasurer Resigns

Dan Eselin, one of those named, and who was elected treasurer by the executive board, has already resigned without taking up the duties of his office. No reason was set forth in his communication to the M. P. E. C. of N. W., which simply requested that his resignation be accepted at once.

The petition sets forth that at the election on May 8 there were present eighty-seven stockholders, representing eighty-seven shares of stock. The stockholders, the bill relates, were allowed to vote at the election but did not constitute a quorum according to the provisions of the by-laws of the corporation.

It was the ruling of President James G. Gilosky that the election was illegal which roused the storm of criticism and disclosed the fact that the election the previous year was also illegal. It was then with the approval of the majority of exhibitors present that the famous "sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander" demand was made and the election allowed to stand.

The bill asks in conclusion that the court declare that election null and void, and that the corporation be allowed to enter into possession of the theatre, the corporation to conduct business for the purpose of holding an election of directors according to the provisions of the by-laws and such further relief as the court might deem just and proper and for costs and disbursements.

Steffes Opposes Action

William A. Steffes, who headed the insurgent ticket upon which Mr. Hinz also had a place, expressed himself as being opposed to the action taken by the latter in asking the courts to unseat the newly elected officers.

"Perhaps Mr. Hinz is technically right; perhaps he is not," said Mr. Steffes, "that is for the courts to decide. You can say for me, however, that I am unalterably opposed to the action of Mr. Hinz and cannot see how any good can be accomplished through the course he has taken."

We have elected new officers for the ensuing year by a vote of a majority of the members present at the convention and there seems but one thing to do—abide by their decision and work with all the enthusiasm we would have shown had the other candidates been chosen to lead the destinies of the M. P. E. Corp. of the N. W."

Drastic Theatre Law
Declared Illegal by Little Rock Court

Little Rock, Ark.—The picture show ordinance of the city of North Little Rock, which requires that all moving picture shows must be conducted in fireproof buildings, constructed according to specifications provided by the city, was declared invalid by Chancellor Martineau in a decision handed down in the case brought by George B. Rose, Little Rock attorney.

The suit was brought by Mr. Rose, on the ground that the ordinance was unjust and arbitrary, soon after the second passage of the measure in April, 1917. Mr. Rose, in an amendment to the complaint, afterwards filed, claimed that the ordinance was passed in order to give the proprietor of the only picture show in town a monopoly on the business.

The complaint alleged that Mr. and Mrs. Rose owned a brick building at 221 Main street, formerly occupied by the Aptco Theatre, which was suitable for a motion picture theatre, and that the operation of the ordinance prevented their deriving revenue from the building. The ordinance once passed and then repealed was an attempt to prevent the operation of the building, so that Mayor Pixley urged and obtained the passage of soon after he came into office.

It is probable the case will be tested in the Supreme Court.

Indianapolis Exhibitors
Form Booking Unit

Indianapolis, Ind.—A record for time in the formation of a unit was established in this city when in one day this week directors and officers were elected and application for a charter made by the Exhibitors Booking Corporation of Indianapolis, one of the financial backers of the new project met with twenty-five Indiana exhibitors in the Claypool hotel, and the total amount of stock, $4,800, was subscribed in the morning. At the afternoon session F. J. Rembusch, Shelbyville; C. R. Andrews, Muncie; Hugh O'Donnell, Washington; R. C. Barton, Indianapolis, and A. C. Zearing, Indianapolis, were elected directors. In the evening the directors met and elected officers as follows:

Hugh O'Donnell, Washington, Ind., president.
A. C. Zearing, Indianapolis, Ind., vice-president.

Machine Operators
Ask Wage Increase
To Meet H. C. of L.

Washington, D. C.—A considerable increase in wages for projection machine operators will go into effect here May 20, under a new schedule now being submitted to exhibitors by the operators' union. The schedule new effective became operative in April of last year. The increase is asked on account of the increased cost of living in Washington. A minimum wage of $20 a week for an evening run of five hours or less, Sunday matinees included, is provided in the schedule, with sixty cents an hour for all extra matinees. One hour of relief is demanded at Sunday or other matinees, to be paid for by the management, and if an operator is required to work without supper relief, he is to be paid for one hour extra at the rate of sixty cents an hour.

Theatres with a seating capacity of 500 or more, running eight hours or more a day, are required to employ three journeyman operators. Eight hours is to comprise a full day's work, and no operator will be allowed to work overtime except in cases of extreme emergency. Minimum pay for overtime hours is to be at the rate of 60 cents an hour, with time and a half, or 90 cents an hour, for overtime. A number of exhibitors, it is said have signed the new schedule.
Cleveland Film Man

At Liberty on Bond

Starts Habeas Corpus

Cleveland, Ohio—Clarence A. Thompson, Cleveland manager of the World Film Corporation, who has been under arrest here for an alleged violation of the “blue sky” law, has obtained his liberty on bond of $1,000, pending a hearing on habeas corpus proceedings begun by his attorneys.

Judge Morgan, who admitted Thompson to liberty on bail, was told by the local police authorities that the film exchange manager has been arrested at the request of Detroit authorities, who wired that there was a charge against him in the Michigan city for selling stocks without license.

Mr. Thompson’s attorneys have announced that when hearing came up they would show that the arrest of their client was the result of a near blackmail scheme on the part of the men who bought stocks from him.

Bankruptcy Petition Filed Against Oneonta Exhibitor

Oneonta, N. Y.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed in Federal Court against Granville J. Ackley of Oneonta, who conducts the Happy Hour Theatre. The petitioning creditors are Keenan & Wells of Oneonta, creditors for over $1,000. It is charged that Mr. Ackley gave a chattel mortgage to Morris Ackley for $600 on equipment of the theatre in order to defraud the creditors. A mad rush began for the exits.

Louisville, Ky., is fast becoming a market for the distribution of big production pictures. The activities of the Big Feature Rights Corporation, of which Col. Fred Levy and Lee L. Goldberg, are the president and secretary, respectively, for example, give one an idea of the foot hold the film business has secured there. The local company is known as a state rights’ concern, and deals only in product that represent the ultimate in manufacture. The concern by reason of its franchise in the First National Exhibitors Circuit, operates in Kentucky and Tennessee only.

President Levy is always on the alert for big features and scarcely a month passes, it is said, in which new screen plays are not3

James Gerard’s book, “My Four Years in Germany,” has just been acquired, while “Tarzan of the Apes,” “The Fall of the Romanovs,” “The Staple,” “Empire Pockets,” and the Petrova pictures, as well as the new Chaplin comedies represent only a partial list of the fifty odd pictures distributed by Levy.

The offices of the company are in the Rex Theatre building, where the entire third floor is utilized for the general offices, film inspection and shipping department.

Society Drama and Detective Play
On Triangle’s May 26 Program

A drama of society, "Old Loves for New," featuring Margery Wilson, is given in feature at Triangle May 26 program. The story is by Adela Rogers St. John. Opening amid scenes of luxurious New York society, the plot relates how a shallow and thoughtless debutante is married to the worldly secon husband, who promptly abandones her. Later in the environment of the rugged but picturesque West, after many trials and thrilling experiences, their loveless marriage develops into a real romance.

"High Stakes," the second picture of the week, features J. Barney Sherry in the part of a modern Raffles, said to be a distinctly-different character from that portrayed by him in "Her Decision." Jane Miller, a new leading woman, will make her debut in this adventure with Triangle, playing opposite Sherry. Dick Rosson is also a member of the supporting cast, which is large and adequate.

The environment is that which surrounds the aristocratic side of life in London. "High Stakes" relates the story of a gentleman burglar, who having once come into contact with the brighter side of life, realizes the happiness that comes from a clean conscience. Accordingly, he makes restitution for his misdeeds and through the love for his little son his ambling is stimulated to the development of a life of honor and happiness.

Arthur Soutar wrote "High Stakes," which was sceneitized from the story published in the Red Book Magazine by Cinema Exchange. Arthur Hoyt directed the production.

Mae Marsh Starring in "All Woman"
Announced by Goldwyn for June 2

Three new productions are in immediate prospect at the Goldwyn studios, it is announced. The Mae Marsh feature for June 2 is a dramatic photoplay from the original story of F. L. Lloyd Sheldon called "All Woman." This is to be issued in place of the same star’s "The Glorious Adventure," which became one of the leading Marck film, and due, probably, about the middle of July.

"All Woman" is being directed by Hobart Henley and the new production is said to give the star a stronger dramatic role than any she has had. "All Woman" tells the story of Susan Sweeney, "the good girl who tamed a bad town.

Mabel Normand is at work on "The Venus Model," written by H. R. Durant, of the Goldwyn scenario staff. It is a story of a stig beyond and ambition, and a star, and a man, and a bathroom which he has bathed and dubbed the Venus Model. It recalls, Goldwyn announces, Mabel Normand’s happiest adventures on the screen and provides many moments of laughter, suspense and genuine charm.

Budge Kennedy is busy at Fort Lee, N. J., on "The Service Star," written for her by Charles A. Logue. Despite the title, this is not a war story, it is said. The only part the great world conflict plays in the drama is to serve as a background for a thrilling, intensely modern story. Charles Miller, who directed Miss Kennedy in "The Fair Pretender," is supervising the new production.

More Snakeville Comedies Coming

Snakeville comedies have proved so popular with the public that exhibitors all over the country have been asking for more. The company announced, therefore, they will issue a second block of ten comedies as soon as all of the first ten are distributed.

The last film of the first set will be issued May 25, and the second set will, it is announced, be released June 1. The remainder following through June and July, one week apart. The General Film Company is handling these productions.

Baby Osborne in "Daughter of West" Heads Pathe Program for Week May 26

Another of the Baby Marie Osborne series, "A Daughter of the West," heads the program to be published by Pathe for the week of May 26th.

This reel production affords a view of the little girl star in a new role. There are western thrills aplenty in "A Daughter of the West," it is said, and there are scenes in which Baby Marie, in appropriate cow-girl garb, rides her own pony which has been induced to "buck" a bit. Baby Marie rides like a veteran of the range, and there is an exciting denouement in which she captures and holds prisoner the villain of the piece, a six-footer, till aid comes. Other amusing scenes are those in which she appears with her little colored boy playmate, a youngster, who is developing real skill as a screen player.

The 12th episode of "The House of Hate," Pearl White’s serial, is also published on this program. Pearl is trapped in a gangster’s den and employs wireless to send an S. O. S. to Antonio Moreno.

The Harold Lloyd comedy is called "Fireman. Save My Child." It is in one reel and the action crowded into this number would support a three-reeler, according to Pathe.

Part III of "Britain’s Bulwark," one reel, shows the hardships endured by the British army in the campaign in Mesopotamia. There is renewed interest in the Mesopotamian situation just now, following the British victories, in which Archie Roosevelt, son of T. R. of Oyster Bay, played no inconsiderable part.

"In Southernmost Mexico" is a one-reel Pathe scenic film, which shows the southern part of the Crimea, principally Sebastopol.

Hearst-Pathe News No. 44 will be published Wednesday, May 29th and No. 45 on Saturday, June 1st.

Emily Stevens to Do "A Man’s World"

Emily Stevens, the Metro star, has begun work in a screen version of Rachel Crothers’ powerful problem play, "A Man’s World." June Mathis pictured the drama and Herbert Blaché, assisted by Leander de Cordova, is directing the production, which pleads for an equalization of unjust standards and social laws.

"A Man’s World" offers Miss Stevens exceptional acting opportunities, it is said. She plays Frank Ware, a novelist, who is an ardent advocate of the double standard of morality and bitterly denounces the existence of "A Man’s World," where the single standard applies to woman.

Billie Rhodes a "Flapper" Role

Saucy Billie Rhodes gives the simple rustic maid some pointers on flirting in "Her Rustic Romeo," the latest Strand Comedy, it is said.

The little flapper vamp is a pastmaster in the art of ensnaring the gilded youth, so when she takes a hand in a bucolic romance and instructs the unsophisticated country maid in the wiles, what chance has the poor dube philosopher? It’s marry the girl or come across with the heart-balm coin, and the rustic swain decides on orange-blossoms. This comedy is to be published by Mutual May 25.

Belle Bennett in "Iron and Lavender"

Belle Bennett, whose last appearance was in an April Triangle production, "The Lonely Woman," will shortly be featured in "Iron and Lavender," a new play under the direction of Gilbert P. Hamilton. Joe King will appear as her leading man.

This drama, according to Triangle, is a pretty tale of life in the South and is said to be filled with touches of chivalry and charm. Miss Bennett is exceptionally well cast, it is stated, as the daughter of the South, shielded and protected from the sordidness of the world.

Mildred Considine Declares People Should Content Themselves With Screen Conduct of Players

Mildred Considine, a scenario writer of note, has risen to the defense of motion picture actresses and actors in general, and in a communication to the Herald makes reply to a letter from L. M. Rubens, manager of the Princess Theater, Joliet, Ill., which was printed in these columns under the caption "Box Office Angle of a Star's Indiscretion."

Mildred Considine contends that the private affairs in the lives of the player people are strictly their own business, and that it is a breach of good taste to pry into them. Her letter in full follows:

[To the Exhibitors Herald]: May I say a few words in defense of the moving picture actresses and actors from a standpoint of business association and personal acquaintance? This is in answer to a broad attack by an exhibitor in your magazine against the stars and their friends.

First of all, I firmly believe that the private affairs in the lives of the player people are strictly their own business, and that the public should not pry into them. There is no need for any one to pry into them, for, who of us all, public and even exhibitors, would care to have all of the incidents of our innermost existence bared to the public for discussion and judgment. As far as morals are concerned, I know from experience that the morals of the picture actresses and actors compare favorably with the morals of participants in any other walk of life, and if the public would content itself with what the actresses or actors give of themselves on the screen, which, after all, is as much as they are entitled to, there would be less gossip and more enjoyment. As a rule, the player people are regarded in an attitude of intolerance, and the smallest and most unimportant incident pounced upon and enlarged until it has assumed a significance all out of proportion with the truth.

There isn't a harder-working lot of people in the world than the common players. As to loyalty, I don't think that they have sufficient time to indulge in it. I know from constant association with them that they would put up the biggest howl if they regarded their actions with a little less intolerance and a little more humanity, vicious gossip would make no impression.

I ask you, Mr. Exhibitor, isn't it unfair to express such mid-Victorian opinions when there are greater problems to be kept on this serious war time? Are our brave soldiers any the less valuable because of some trifling incident in their private existence? No! General Frohman, Lord Woodstock, the former having the best for us! Well, this is a parallel case-why should our actresses and actors be less valuable as entertainers because of anything which may occur in the private lives, for on the screen we get the best that is in them! Think this over, and believe that I am sincere when I say that I'm for them all on the screen and off!

Sincerely yours,
MILDRED CONSIDINE.

The writer of the above has scored several successes as a scenario writer, among them being the adaptations of "Ghosts of Yesterday," "Romance of the Underworld," and "Common Clay." W. L. Robinson, the British aviator, whose introduction of Zeppelin brought it down ablaze to fall among the ruins its bombs had caused. This enemy disaster is already current history from the newspaper accounts. The Zeppelin L-21's fate, and the filmed account will undoubtedly be a great drawing card at theatres where it is shown.

Educational Corp. Issues "Mexico Today"

The Educational Film Corporation of America announces that, beginning next month, it will publish a series of twelve single-reel films entitled "Mexico Today." This is the work of George D. Wright, a young American who has been settled in Mexico City for several years, and in partnership with a native Mexican, has received, it is said, extraordinary local interest in the series. The educational aspect is the dominating one, and the Mexican life and the Mexican people are the subjects of the one-reel films.

Tourneur Selects An Excellent Cast For "Sporting Life"

Unusual interest centers in Maurice Tourneur's first independent production, "Sporting Life," now being made at the Tourneur studios at Fort Lee, N. J. This is due, it is said, to Mr. Tourneur's phenomenal success with the production of the same title. Tourneur has produced a wide variety of photodramatic offerings for Paramount and the World Film, including "The Box Bird," "Prunella," the Elise Ferguson vehicles, etc., but his production of "The Whip," as a box-office attraction, is looked upon as one of his greatest efforts.

There are many interesting things attached to the history of "Sporting Life," which was written by Cecil Raleigh and Seymour Hicks and which enjoyed a phenomenal run at the Drury Lane in 1897. It duplicated its London hit in New York in September and had one of the longest runs in the history of the metropolitan stage, and as a touring attraction it created box-office records wherever it went.

Briefly, the story of "Sporting Life" deals with the efforts of Malet de Carteret and his wife, Olive, to get possessions of a large farm in the town of Lord Woodstock's horse, Lady Love, the Derby favorite. The vein of romance involves the young nonentity and his love for his pretty daughter, Norah. There are a number of thrilling scenes, it is said, including one never before presented on the screen.

Maurice Tourneur has selected, it is announced, an excellent cast to interpret the roles in the screen adaptation of "Sporting Life," and Willette Kershaw will play Olive de Carteret. Miss Kershaw was a leading member of the famous Princess Theatre stock company of which Holbrook Blinn was the director. She was also in "The Country Boy," played the star part in "The Unchaste Woman" and was seen in Sir Herbert Tree's revival of "Henry VIII."

World Pictures Signs New Screen Star

Miss Theresa Maxwell Conover, said to be one of the foremost actresses on the American stage, has cast her lot with World Pictures and in the future will appear in important supporting roles.

Miss Conover has the distinction of having appeared in more Broadway successes than any other star. Even the late Clyde Fitch had such a high opinion of her services that he always had her in his productions whenever the opportunity presented itself. Miss Conover received her training under Augustin Daly and had played in many of the early plays of Charles Frohman. Simultaneously World Pictures purchases what is said to be a remarkable story by H. J. Smith and available from Carl Mitchell, dramatic editor for many years of the Kansas City Post. The story bears the title of the " Moral Dead Line" and the contract for the rights has been signed.

The story will be cast and placed in work within a short time. It is the first story that Mr. Mitchell has ever written for pictures. Formerly Mr. Mitchell was general press representative for Winthrop Ames.

General Films to Distribute Feature "Raid of Zeppelin L-21"

After all preparations had been made to distribute "The Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21" on a state right basis, the plans of the Interstate Film Company were changed to secure a wider distribution, it is said, through General Film Company. The latter company announces that it has undertaken to handle the "Zeppelin L-21" feature through its thirty exchanges in the United States and Canada. Special one-sheet and three-sheet posters are now being prepared by General Film Company, and slides and other advertising material will be immediately available for this exceptional "punch" film, it is said. "The Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21" is said to be a condensed, exciting and connected war adventure, the climax of which is the victory of Great Britain's anti-aircraft defenses against the colossal Hun dirigibles which had bombarded England and the environs of London. Presented in two-reel form, the picture necessarily is one of action clear through. Its heroes are anonymous, except for Lieut.
OFFICIAL CALL

Eighth Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America

and

Exposition of the Motion Picture Industry

Boston, Mass., July 13-20, 1918

To All State and Local Organizations of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America:

BECAUSE the motion picture industry has been singled out by the President of the United States and publicly commended for the service it has rendered in aid of the government in carrying on the war, and because it has rendered the greatest service of any single industry in the country, it is of the utmost importance not only to the industry as a whole, but to the country at large that the annual convention and exposition to be held this summer be the biggest and largest of any convention and exposition in the history of the business.

Shortly after the declaration of war the President called upon the motion picture industry for aid and the aid was promptly given. That aid has been great, but the opportunity exists to make it greater. At the last convention a split occurred in the ranks of the exhibitors which for a time looked as though it might have disastrous effects, but the convention held in Washington last winter partially healed that breach. The time has come when it should be entirely healed in order that the exhibitors of the United States may give the greatest possible measure of service to the government.

Because of the vastly important work that is ahead of the exhibitors of the United States during the coming year, and because of the great importance of this convention, I call upon all state and local organizations to pay their per capita tax in order that they may be able to elect a full quota of delegates and alternates to this convention.

The exposition this year will be held jointly by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and the National Association of the Motion Picture industry. During the week of the exposition I earnestly invite all organizations connected with and affiliated with the motion picture industry to hold their annual meetings and conventions simultaneously with the exposition. The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers have already scheduled their conventions for this time.

Because of the facts outlined above, I, Lee A. Ochs, by virtue of the power invested in me, as president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, do hereby call the annual convention of said Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America to be held at the Mechanics' building in the City of Boston in the State of Massachusetts from July 13-20, inclusive, and do hereby designate the Copley Plaza Hotel as the official convention headquarters.

Issued this 2nd day of May, 1918.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

"A mighty good attraction for all first-class theatres."
THE suspension of Major Funkhouser from his position as second deputy superintendent of police may mean his eventual retirement from any further contact with the censoring of motion pictures in Chicago. An interesting fact in connection with the temporary removal of Funkhouser is that notwithstanding the criticism that has been heaped upon him because of his unreasonable censorship methods, his suspension apparently has been brought about because of other reasons entirely. While the charges against him have not been announced it is understood that they are chiefly concerned with insubordination and a disregard of the authority of his superiors—just about what might be expected from a colossal "bull-head," whose verdicts on films continually flew in the face of reason, equity and common sense.

With the opening of the projected three thousand-seat theatre in the downtown district of Chicago, Nathan Ascher will assume his rightful position among that select band of distinguished motion picture theatre impresarios headed by Rothapfel and Edel, of New York.

LITTLE alarm need be felt over the so-called movement to restrict theatre attendance by the encouraging of children to forego this amusement and invest their nickels and dimes in war-saving stamps. In the government's program for the encouragement of national thrift the motion picture theatre is not marked for attack. In fact the reverse is true, for motion pictures are being regarded by governmental agencies as an all-important element in maintaining the proper morale of the people.

UNIVERSAL's "The Kaiser" is thoroughly entitled to the extraordinary success that is meeting it everywhere—it anticipated the mental attitude of a vast number of people in the United States by several months and gave them the sort of picture about the Kaiser that they now want. Undoubtedly a deluge of similar pictures will follow, but the alertness of Universal in being the first in the field will make certain a big reward.

DECREASED production has received a severe jolt in the announcement of Goldwyn and Select that these companies will shortly commence a one-week schedule.

STJT instituted in the Chicago courts last week indicated that promoters of "The Birth of a Race" only promised about three thousand per cent profit. The kindest conclusion to come to concerning the promoter is that he should have his head examined.

THAT dynamic duo, Lubin and Sawyer, having added the capable Ralph Ince to their forces may be expected to put over something of first-water importance.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM FOX, of the Allied Theatrical and Motion Picture Team wound up his campaign for Red Cross contributions in a blaze of glory on Monday night. During the time Mr. Fox has been in charge of the collection of funds for this noble work he has given evidence of an ability for leadership and a determined aggressiveness which leaves no doubt that he was a very fortunate choice for the position and that he has thoroughly succeeded in making the theatrical and motion picture interests "put their best foot forward."

THE future of the news weekly is one of tremendous possibilities. That this is fully appreciated by the government is indicated in their plans to supply the companies producing these subjects with certain footage at a nominal price. The government film, of course, will be of a propaganda nature, but this fact in a great number of cases will rather increase than decrease the interest. Exhibitors, looking to the big future of the Weekly, will make no mistake in now starting to give this subject a presentation which it is entitled to as a feature and cease handling it as if it was a "filler."
GENERALLY speaking, what kind of pictures the public wants is indicated in the uniform success that has attended and is attending the productions of Mary Pickford. In the face of keenest competition, vastly changed production and story standards, the Pickford type of picture goes on triumphantly, yielding place only to the biggest specials.

MUCH educational work is necessary before the trade may hope to see the elimination of official censorship and no small part of this educational work must be done upon a certain class of producers. With the elimination of less than five per cent of the pictures published there would be no reason for censorship and with the elimination of two per cent of the pictures published during the past year there would be absolutely no argument to support the costly and un-American proposition of official censorship. The fight of the trade against censorship is an uphill and difficult one, being burdened down with the crimes of the two per cent.

HOWEVER, a number of alleged actors—actors rather by profession than by employment—will probably face the “Work or Fight” situation with genuine alarm.

Martin J. Quigley.

Funkhouser Ousted; Must Face Trial Board

Chicago Censor Suspended by Acting
Chief of Police Alcock—Gross Irregularities in Conduct of Office Intimidated

Major M. L. C. Funkhouser has been supended as second deputy superintendent of police of Chicago and consequently relinquishes the position as censor of motion picture films, at least until the outcome of his trial.

This may mark the first step toward the permanent retirement of Major Funkhouser as censor of motion picture films to which end the EXHIBITORS HERALD has labored unceasingly, both through its editorials and news columns, on the ground that he was totally unfit for the position which he held.

This action was taken last Saturday morning by Acting Chief of Police Alcock.
His order also removed two attachments of Major Funkhouser’s office. The only explanation the chief would give was that he “did’t like the way Funkhouser was conducting the affairs of his office.”

Charges Kept Secret

Pending the filing of charges before the police trial board, Alcock has thirty days in which to do this—the nature of the testimony to be used against Chicago’s ousted censor will not be known. The chief, however, did say that he had intended making an investigation of the second deputy’s office for some time, but had not been able to get around to it.

William H. Luthardt, recently reinstated as secretary to the chief of police, was named as acting second deputy in the order which removed the censor from office.

Frank H. Schoefield, department inspector, a sixty day appointee in the film censor’s office, was dropped from the rolls. The terms of his employment did not require the filing of charges against him. Joseph A.
Thoney, inspector of morals conditions, was the other man dropped by the order of Saturday. Charges against him will be filed before the police trial board within the next thirty days.

Chief Alcock Aroused

Chief Alcock called Deputy Funkhouser in person to his office in order to impose the conditions of his order. The chief was considerably aroused, due to the fact that despite his suspension of Hugh Borland, manager of public properties, the latter remained at his desk in the second deputy’s office.

“I called in the second deputy and notified him of the suspension.” Acting Chief Alcock said, after issuing the order. “He turned around and walked out without saying a word. I didn’t like the way in which he was conducting his office; that is the reason I suspended him.”

Friction between the second deputy and the acting head of the police department has been evident for some time and only recently Chief Alcock dropped a remark which showed he did not believe his subordinate was giving him the full support in the management of the censor’s office.

Funkhouser Acted Independently

“Funkhouser confers with me only when he feels like it,” was the remark of the acting chief when he was asked about certain actions taken by the second deputy.

The deposed second deputy followed his usual course of having nothing to say. He said that he would not again visit his office except at the request of Acting Second Deputy Luthardt in order to put him in touch with the work.

“Not a word, not a word,” was his reply to all questions. “I was called to the acting chief’s office and handed the order of suspension. There was nothing to say, so I simply walked out.”

Refraims From Comment

“I will visit my office only long enough to show Mr. Luthardt where everything is and answer any questions regarding the work he may want to ask and then I will leave. I have nothing to say and will have nothing to say until the trial comes up.”

Chief Alcock refused allegedly to make any statement concerning the nature of the charges back of Major Funkhouser’s removal:

“Major Funkhouser, according to the evidence I found in his office at the time of Borland’s suspension, has done things which left me but one course to pursue—suspend him,” the chief said. “I have intended making an investigation of his office for some time, but have never gotten to it. I have received numerous complaints in the last few months.”

Film Companies’ Attitude

While Major Funkhouser has always intimated and has been uniformly successful in establishing the belief that the efforts of the motion picture men to obtain a more equitable system of picture censorship has been a personal fight on him, those back of the movement deny any animosity toward the deposed censor and declare the fight is simply upon the system.

What control Chief Alcock’s action will put upon the consideration of the May-pole ordinance when it comes up before the city council for action remains to be seen.
The proposed amendment to the city ordinance governing censorship will take the power of passing on films from the hands of the second deputy and turn it over to a censorship board, which will be governed by majority rule.

Maypole Amendment Pending

Alderman Maypole’s amendment has been given the approval of the judiciary committee of the city council by a vote of 11 to 5 and follows the usual course of procedure will be read at one council meeting and then voted upon at the next session of the body.

That a determined fight in behalf of Major Funkhouser both before the police trial board and in the city council when the amendment to the censorship comes up for passage is apparent. In addition to the ban of reelers who have been present at every meeting of the council sub-committee considering the change in the censorship ordinance and who have usually usurped the speaking privilege, Samuel P. Thresher, supernumerary of the Committee of Fifteen, another reform body, has intimated his intention of backing the deposed censor in his forthcoming trial.

awaiting a further ruling from the government authorities concerning Provost Marshall General Crowder’s famous “work or fight” order, which has cast a cloak of uncertainty over the motion picture industry akin to that following the entrance of the United States into the war and Fuel Administrator Garfield’s “fuel-less” day order.

While every branch of the industry appreciates the great obstacles which will have to be overcome if the new order is rigidly enforced, they are united in the declaration that if the government feels that men engaged in the business will be of more use to the nation in other capacities they will willingly make every sacrifice necessary to the achievement of this end.

Friendliness toward the industry, which has been exhibited constantly by the government, is relied upon to again come to the front in this present crisis.

It is not believed that Washington authorities would willingly be the means of closing one motion theatre now operating in the country. It is pointed out, however, that strict adherence to the regulation would put more than sixty per cent of the motion picture operators in the industry in the class of “useless” employees.

Substitution Tidious Process

Substitution, of course, could be resorted to, but it would lack a less tedious process. Men beyond the present draft age and possibly women could be trained to operate the motion picture mabines, but the growing scarcity of men has also made itself felt in this industry.

F. F. McClure Out
As Film Censor
In Kansas City

New Appointee Declares Independence in Passing
On Pictures

Kansas City, Mo.—Fred F. McClure, film censor whose rulings on motion picture productions has incurred for him the enmity of practically every branch of the industry in this city, has been dismissed.

Sidney J. Baker, said to have had much experience in the motion picture business, has been appointed his successor by Mayor Cowgill, recently elected. Mr. McClure's activities furnished one of the foremost issues in the recent campaign held in April.

Already the friends of the former film censor have begun to cry "politics" and have charged that Mr. McClure's removal is simply the first step in an effort to make Kansas City an "open town." They claim that during the campaign in April promises were given that if Cowgill was elected McClure would be removed.

Mayor Defends Appointee
Mayor Cowgill rose to the defense of the new censor and declared his right to put men about him in whom he had confidence. He said that McClure had been dismissed because he wanted a man in the place of his own choosing.

"So long as I am mayor I am going to surround myself with capable men recommended by the mayor. Moreover, I am responsible for the success or failure of this administration, so, therefore, I feel that I should be permitted to name the people I want about me."

"Mr. Baker's position is secure as long as he is on the square, but if he should show discrimination or favoritism political influence will not keep him in office."

Dismissed Censor III

Mr. McClure was ill at the home of his brother when the notification of his dismissal reached him. He suffered a dislocated hip a week ago when attempting to crank a motor car.

Mr. Baker has made known his intention of acting independently in the matter of censoring films. He has already notified the committee of women representing the Parent-Teachers association that suggestions on cutting films would not be welcome.

"I have told them they are welcome to see all the films shown but that they are not to make any suggestions to me as to what I shall cut and what I shall not," said Mr. Baker. "I have been in the film business for five years and I guess I know something about the work."

Bronx Exhibitor Drowned

New York—The body found floating off St. George, Staten Island, Thursday, has been identified as Fortunato Vezzoli, forty-two years old. He was a moving picture manager of No. 963 Fox street, The Bronx.

M. P. E. L. Locals
To Be Represented
Must Be Paid Up

President Ochs Urges Full Attendance of Delegates

In a supplementary call to the members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, President Lee A. Ochs calls the attention of all state and local organizations to the fact that they have representation in the by-laws of that body and that such organizations shall have representation in or be allowed to participate in the deliberations of the annual convention to be held this year in Boston from July 13-20, unless the per capita tax of the organization shall have been paid to the national treasurer.

Mr. Ochs also called a meeting of the national executive committee of the league to be held at the Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston three days prior to the opening of the convention, in accordance with the by-laws of the league.

Reports from the various committees in charge of the preparations for the Exhibition of the Motion Picture Industry industry indicate that they are receiving universal support in their efforts to make the Exposition bigger and greater than any that has been held hitherto.

As it has been erroneously stated that the Society of Motion Picture Engineers would hold its annual meeting simultaneously with the league convention and the exposition, and as the currency of this report might create embarrassment and expense to many in the industry, special attention is called to the fact that the society will not hold its meeting at that date.

Largest Bond-Holder

It is reported that the largest Liberty Bond-holder in theatricals and pictures is S. A. Lynch, of Triangle.

According to the report Mr. Lynch has purchased a total of $650,000 in the bonds of the three Liberty Loans.

No announcement of any individual purchase made by show people approaches this amount.

Candidates Appear
On the Horizon for League President

Ochs Will Not Run Again—
St. Louis Wants Next Convention

With the approach of the date set for the annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and the enthusiastic refusal of Lee A. Ochs to be its president, to accept a nomination for a third term in office, booms in favor of "favorite sons" are being reported from local associations of exhibitors all over the country.

At the dinner in Boston at which local film folk combined to lend a hand to the committee in charge of the position which is to be held coincidentally with the gathering of exhibitors at Boston, July 13 to 20, a boom for Ernest H. Hassman was set in motion.

Similarly, from Philadelphia comes the news of another dinner held to proclaim the candidacy of John O'Donnell, also a member of the executive committee of the League. Without a dinner or an organized boom, persistent calls for Thomas Furniss of Duluth were heard during the recent convention of the exhibitors of the Northwest and from Frank Eager of Nebraska, as well as Sidney Cohen of New York are also frequently spoken of for president.

St. Louis After Convention

Besides organizing for the purpose of supporting the booms of local candidates for the national presidency of the league, the exhibitors in various sections of the country are uniting their strength in the hope of bringing back from Boston the award of the location of the 1919 Convention.

Chicago, however, believes itself due for a return engagement on the part of the biggest event in the film world. As usual, nothing is being heard from New York, but the chances are that the representatives from there will have had their say before the convention agrees upon the location to be selected.

All planning to attend the convention are expositors are warned to anticipate the lack of suitable hotel accommodations, and are urged to make reservations as far in advance as possible. There is only one exhibitor, it is reported, who feels absolutely safe in the matter of sleeping quarters and he is coming on a cat-boat and plans to sleep on the River Charles.

Ince, Sawyer and Lubin Form
Ralph Ince Film Attractions

Will Produce Series of Stage Successes Upon
The Screen—Ince to Direct

An important combination of prominent interests in the fields of motion picture production and distribution was consummated last week when contracts were entered into between Ralph Ince, Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, whereby a series of big special feature attractions, Twelve block produced, marketed and exploited, bears the banner name of "Ralph Ince Film Attractions."

In addition to the three men mentioned above it is said the name of one of the leading figures of the motion picture industry, which is withheld for the present moment, will be linked prominently in all of the activities of the newly formed combination.

The plans of the new combination are said to be most comprehensive in scope. They embrace the production of a series of picturized versions of celebrated stage successes and the works of famous authors. When the details attendant upon the first offering are made public it is said a genuine surprise is in store for exhibitors of the nation as they will present a startling innovation in the matter of the type of attraction and the method of staging same. All-star casts of players will be used, it is announced.

Ince's Many Successes

The men responsible for the new organization have been quietly perfecting their plans for several months. The name of Ralph Ince is familiar to the public by reason of the innumerable successful screen productions to which it has been attached as director. During his long connection with the Vitagraph Company he achieved fame as actor and director. He has to his credit as director such successes as "The Lighthouse," "A Million Bid," "The Wreck," "413," etc. More recently he produced "The Eleventh Commandment" and "The Nineteenth," both presenting Lu- cille Lee Stewart in the stellar roles, "To Day," starring Florence Reed; "The Woman Eternal," starring Elaine Ham- merstein; "Fields of Honor," starring Mae Marsh, and a series of specially supervised pictures featuring Madame Olga Petrova.

An acknowledged leader in the field of distribution and familiar with the motion picture industry in its many ramifications, Herbert Lubin bears an enviable reputation as exchange man, state right specialist and organizer of big financial projects. The former holder of the Metro franchise for the Dominion of Canada for several years Mr. Lubin possesses an intimate knowledge of the exhibitor's problems and requirements. He is expected to bring many innovations in the field of state right distribution during the past twelve months.

A member of the firm of General Enterprises, Inc., which scored a notable success in its handling of "The Warrior" and "Mother," he is known to practically every showman in the United States and Canada. In addition to his activities in the fields mentioned herein, Mr. Lubin also negotiated and consummated the contract whereby Madame Olga Petrova, the noted Polish actress, became the head of her personal production organization.

Sawyer a Pioneer

Arthur H. Sawyer is one of the pioneers of the picture business, having been prominently identified for the past fifteen years with every branch of the industry. Originally an exhibitor, and afterwards owner of one of the first chains of picture theatres in the United States, Mr. Sawyer became interested in the matter of production about ten years ago. After making an intensive study of this field, he was responsible for the organization of the Kinemacolor Company which produced the initial films in natural color in this country. He sponsored many of the first feature films to appear in Broadway theatres and was one of the pioneers in the matter of engaging stars of the legitimate stage and vaudeville to play in films.

Mr. Sawyer is regarded as an expert in studio management and production matters. He possesses a thorough knowledge of laboratory details and the innumerable other angles which enter into the making of pictures. He is a member of the firm of General Enterprises, Inc., and more recently has been responsible for the erection in Washington, D. C., of the Mather Building, devoted exclusively to the uses of film exchanges.

A special department of publicity and exploitation has been created, to be under the direction of Bert Ennis. He has had a varied career in the theatrical and motion picture business, having been the first press agent to be connected with Messrs. Kessel and Baumann during the days of the New York Motion Picture Company exploiting such present day celebrities as Thomas H.

Government Will Not Take Over Screen Weeklies

Department Public Information Denies Persistent Rumors

Persistent rumor that the department of public information contemplated taking over the news weeklies and also would set the rental price of these films was set at rest by a statement from the government body this week which is an emphatic denial of any such intent.

Information obtained from the official news censoring organization of the country is to the effect that the government will make some subjects for the weeklies which will be offered to the producers. The government has fixed no price. This feature of the arrangement will be up to the producers themselves. They will be asked to pay out of the proceeds.

Marked appreciation of what the screen weeklies have done for the government is also contained in the statement. They are at present being run to the complete satisfaction of the department of public information and at no time, it is stated, has any idea of interfering with them been considered.

Four Companies Mentioned

Weeklies issued by the Mutual, Gaumont, Hearst-Pathé and Universal companies were the ones most prominently mentioned as those which would soon come under government control. From a number of sources it was stated that the price to be set on first runs of these features would be $10 a day.

"We have never considered taking over the news weeklies," reads the statement from the department of public information. "The United States government appreciates that news weeklies have been the first to give the service and the government in general.

"What we contemplate doing is to make some subjects for the weeklies and let the weeklies buy them from the government at a price which they feel they can pay. They are to make the price themselves."

A Cooperative Move

"The government is only trying to help them. We never had any idea of interfering with the news weeklies. They are being run to our entire satisfaction."

Representatives of the film companies concerned with the production of the news weeklies had nothing to say regarding the rumors, all of which they said were unfounded.
Police Censors Back on Beat: Movement Dies

St. Louis Now Has No Officer Film Censors

With the issuing of orders by Chief of Police Young to police captains of St. Louis to see that the city's guardians of law and order are kept out of the motion picture theatres, a movement begun five years ago by a self-constituted body of reformers to censor motion pictures has passed on to the scrap heap.

One of the first successes of the movement was the decision of the board of aldermen, which was assigned to visit motion picture theatres and pass upon the productions being shown.

Reformers Quash Charges

Within a short time a number of motion picture men were arraigned in court charged with exhibiting "obscene" pictures. Most of these charges were quashed, however, and a number are said to still adorn the docket having never come up for trial.

The reform body was defeated in practically every effort it made to obtain legislation in St. Louis and finally went to the state legislature with a bill governing the censorship proposition. The bill was of such a rambling nature and so indefinite as to purpose that it, too, was overwhelmingly defeated.

Reformers Lose Interest

From that time on the reformers lost interest rapidly. The final jolt came with the defeat of a measure introduced before the board of aldermen and designed to give them broad powers in the matter of censorship. Numerous reports of robberies, holdups and pick-pocketing in the vicinity of motion picture houses while the police were inside censoring the films, led to the issuance of the order by Chief Young calling them back to their old jobs of traveling beat.

The local exhibitors' body, led by William Sievers, manager of the New Grand Central Theatre, has instituted a voluntary censorship over the showings to be exhibited in the theatres controlled by its members, which has met with considerable popular approval.

Petrova Completes Plans for Big Tour To Boost W. S. S.

Madame Olga Petrova, who recently completed her fifth special starring vehicle, "Patient Sparhawk," by Gertrude Atherton, under the direction of Ralph Ince, is now winding up the affairs at her studio it is said prior to her departure on a country-wide tour in behalf of the Thrift Stamp movement.

Complete advance arrangements for Madame Petrova’s trip were made by Herbert Lubin and Bert Ennis several weeks ago during the period that the noted Polish artiste was filming "Patient Sparhawk." Madam will commence her tour in the interests of the War Savings Stamps on Saturday, June 1.

Many requests have been received at the Petrova studios it is said from the heads of the various War Saving Stamps Commissions throughout the country for Madame Petrova to work in conjunction with their efforts.

The tour will be exploited and handled exactly as would be a traveling theatrical production, with a complete staff of advance agents, twenty-four sheet billing, newspaper stories, etc. It is also planned that a special Tattoo, leading to the" War Savings," will be exhibited.

FRANK KEENey DENIES COMPANY IS THROUGH

Relative to a rumor that the Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation was about to suspend, Director of Publicity Arthur Oliver has issued the following statement:

"An article recently printed in a daily publication conveys the erroneous impression that the Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation has gone out of the producing business. The article may or may not have been intended to mislead. The facts are that a three months' lease was taken on the Pathé studio at Park avenue and 34th street, New York, by the Frank A. Keeney Picture Corporation, for the purpose of producing two pictures, 'Marriage' and a picture tentatively entitled 'Out of the Night.'

"Both pictures have been completed, except for the film-cutting and the titling, and Mr. Keeney has given up the studio, in accordance with his original intention.

"Mr. Keeney previously used the Censor Graph studios under a short-term lease for the production of 'A Romance of the Under World.' All three pictures star Catherine Calvert, who is under a long-term contract with the corporation. The work of production is to be resumed, it is said, after the first of the Keeney pictures is placed on the market.

Kester and Howard On Advisory Board

President J. A. Berst last week added H. B. Kester of Pittsburgh and Frank J. Howard of Boston to the Advisory Board of the United Motion Pictures of America, Inc. This board, consisting of representatives exhibitors from all sections of the country, now numbers twenty-eight members, and will soon be completed.

Mr. Kester is the manager of the Camera Phone in East Liberty, and Mr. Howard, one of the best known showmen in the business, will be universally remembered through his long association with the historic Howard's Athenaeum of Boston.

Two World Employes Receive Call to Arms

The World advertising and publicity departments this week gave two men in the draft call. James MacDonald, who for the past two years has been the commercial artist making advertisement layouts and doing other art work for the advertising department, received his call and left for Spartanburg, S. C., and Stanley W. Bayer, the last year out of the writers connected with the publicity department received his call and, as fortune would have it, left on the same train for the same camp with Mr. MacDonald. As the two men are great friends they were delighted with this coincidence.

United's Co-operative Plan Means
One of Exhibitor's Control—Berst
President of Organization Characterizes Move
As "Revolutionary"—Second Booklet Published

In a supplementary statement issued by President J. A. Berst to the exhibitor-members of United Picture Theatres of America, Inc. that the enrollment of exhibbitors to date has exceeded the miniimum schedule by so wide a margin that the success of the United co-operative project was assured, attention was called to the current rumors of a gigantic combination and merger in the film field recorded last week in certain trade journals.

"Many such reorganizations and merg-gers have been attempted and actually accomplished in the past," Mr. Berst states, "without visibly improving adverse conditions in the industry. They have been mere shifting of the cards in the deck. But if reports are to be credited, the present proposed organization is revolutionary in character, designed to elim-nate the terrific expense and waste involved in competitive distribution—in short, a tremendous compliment to the United plan. It would have been a thing to be welcomed with open arms by the exhibitor did not the United offer him the same benefits and more. The main question at issue between the United plan and one as that which is now proposed is one of control. Under the innovation those who have waxed fat at the exhibitors' expense, and who have begun to realize that they have outlived their usefulness, are making an effort to secure a strangle-hold on the industry and to declare themselves in on the new and better game."

"Under the United plan, the exhibitor is top-dog. And he will profit by his supremacy in the matter of prices, service and in the quality of the goods to be exploited."

Second Booklet Out

Simultaneously with the issuance of this statement, the second edition of the booklet containing the details of the United plan was published. The booklet shows the modification and improvements in the method of operation that have been determined upon since Mr. Berst assumed the direction of the corporation.

Of general interest are the paragraphs explaining the manner in which the highest possible standard of quality in releases will be upheld. The maintenance of such a standard is not merely assured by the fact that the pictures co-operative-lly purchased will have been selected, primarily for their box-office values, by exhibitor-appointed officials fully informed as to the exhibitors' wants and needs. It is also pointed out that many a program picture now released could have been greatly improved in quality by the additional expenditure of a few thousand dollars.

Under the United plan, should it be decided to purchase a picture susceptible of improvement, it is said the improvement will be made at the expense of United. When the two or three thousand thus expended is apportioned among the exhibitor-members, the rentals in a class A house will be increased thereby from twenty to thirty cents, while those of a class E house will be raised two or three cents, surely, the booklet contends, an insignificant sum to pay for better quality.

The new booklet also contains a list of the branch offices of the United, and the names of the representative exhibitors that have been appointed to the advisory board to date.

Film Thieves Get Prison Sentences

Essanay has succeeded in breaking up the band of organized film pirates which was operating in Cleveland, Ohio. Joe Morrow, said to be a member of the band, was convicted on the charge of receiving stolen property and contributing to the delinquency of a minor last week and was sentenced to one year in prison and fined $300. A man named Orinesky also caught by the police pleaded guilty.
Sentence has not yet been imposed. A youth named Lee Friedman was convicted of larceny and sentenced to an indeterminate period in the reformatory.

The method of the band, it was testiied, was to engage youths in film exchanges to steal film, for which they were paid a small amount. When their shack was raided twenty-six films were found, the property of various film companies.

Select Pictures to Increase Output; Fifty-two Pictures Yearly Planned

Lewis J. Selznick Announces That New Schedule Will Go Into Effect in Fall

Select Pictures Corporation will increase its production early in the fall from thirty-two pictures to fifty-two a year. This announcement was made by Lewis J. Selznick while on a visit in Chicago last week where the company is establishing its local exchange. Mr. Selznick declared that the same high standard now governing the Select output would not be lowered in view of the increased production and intimated that if anything the energies of the corporation would be concentrated on improving its efforts.

The Select official did not go into detail concerning his statement. He said that all the particulars of the move had not been completed and could not be made public at this time. New stars will be added to the company’s roster and increased studio facilities obtained.

Has Optimistic View

Mr. Selznick appeared highly optimistic over the condition of the film industry in general. He spoke chiefly, of course, concerning his own company and stated that business was taking a turn for the better as Select is concerned.

Co-operation with the exhibitor proved to be a subject extremely interesting to Mr. Selznick and he spoke at length upon the policy adopted by the Select company in dealing with the motion picture theatre owners. The attitude of his company, he said, was one of “all cards on the table.”

“Select has always aimed to co-operate with exhibitors to the fullest extent,” said Mr. Selznick, “the producer who ‘gypsy’ the exhibitor is defeating his own ends. The exhibitor knows better than anyone else what he can afford to pay for a picture and when he honestly puts the facts before the producer the latter should act accordingly.

Extends Full Co-Operation

“The time has not come yet nor will it ever come when I will be unwilling to discuss fully with exhibitors the fairness of prices asked for our productions. In every case where a manifest hardship has been worked upon an exhibitor and it has been called to my attention adjustments have been made.

“To me the fact that an old customer who, through some misunderstanding or grievance, has dropped our service, has again resumed his patronage through an intelligent adjustment of his claim, is a greater source of satisfaction than new business. And the exchange managers who can accomplish things of this kind are the ones who are the most valuable to the Select company.

“All I ask is that the exhibitor put all his cards on the table and show me where I am wrong and he need have no fear that anything but an equitable arrangement will be the outcome.”

Mr. Selznick remained in Chicago for three days at the end of which time he returned to New York.

Corporal S. Rankin Drew Believed Hun Prisoner

S. Rankin Drew, former Vitaphone and Metro star, is believed to be a prisoner of war in a German detention camp. Cable advice from the western front carries a report that Corporal Sidney R. Drew has been shot down in aerial combat fought well inside the German lines and that his machine fell in territory held by the Huns.

Corporal S. Rankin Drew enlisted in the French aviation corps in 1917 after he had seen considerable service as an ambulance driver. He was but recently transferred to the American aviation division. He is the only son of Sidney Drew and a nephew of John Drew.

Crowder Order Menaces Industry

During the training period there could be no alternate other than closing down many of the theatres.

The effect of such a move would be far-reaching. The government and the producing companies would instantly feel the results, the former in a loss of revenue derived from its theatre tickets and the latter would be put to the necessity of curtailing production activities. Probably just as serious would be the condition to the non-theatrical companies. The greater majority of men employed in the operation of the film exchanges come within the draft law and are subject to its provisions. Many of them because of dependents have been granted deferred classification by the draft boards, but under the Crowder ruling would be compelled to seek other employment or enter the army.

Causes Grave Situation

Theatre managers and operators of Chicago were united in the opinion that practically all of the four hundred motion picture theatres in that city would have to close their doors unless the order is modified. Clarence R. Savage, secretary-treasurer of the Chicago Theatrical Protective Union, declared that if the order stands it will affect the majority of operators and will mean the immediate closing of 60 per cent of the motion picture theatres in the city.

“At the very lowest estimate I should say that 90 per cent of the operators of the city are within the draft age,” said Mr. Savage. “If that applies to operators and stage hands as well as to box-office men and ushers, it will wreck the theatrical business for the duration of the war.”

Operators Necessary Adjunct

“However, we are taking the stand that stage hands and operators are necessary to performances and that the government intends that theatres should remain open to keep up the morale of the country it must exclude theatre mechanics from the order. We are waiting advice from our national office. In the meantime we will sit tight. It would be impossible to train women to operate motion picture machines or set scenery.

A meeting of Chicago exhibitors has been called to consider the problem. Steps will be taken to notify the war department of the effect on the theatres of the order.

Joseph Hopp, national vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League, expressed the opinion that the order applied to operators and that if the government thought such a step necessary the theatre owners would willingly comply.

Davis Estate Loses Suit Against Triangle

A suit brought by the executors of the estate of Richard Harding Davis for an injunction against the exhibition of ‘The Americano,” has terminated favorably to Triangle.

The suit was based on the claim that the novel, “The White Mice,” was copyrighted and that the Triangle Film Corporation and the Triangle Distributing Corporation and others, were infringing on the copyright by the exhibition of this picture.
Six New States Are Organized and Join Affiliated

Byron Park, Salt Lake, Completes Intermountain Unit

To the fact that it is being presented solely by exhibitors is attributed the almost instant success of the Affiliated Distributors Corporation's plan according to Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the corporation, who announced that six more states had been closed for the project.

The new states, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Nevada and Wyoming, according to the announcement, have all subscribed their quotas.

Another factor in the success of the plan is said to be due to the fact that no stock salesmen have been employed to foster the proposition. All of the organization work of the various units has been done by exhibitors.

Exhibitors Only Project

"The Affiliated is a case of exhibitors only, even to the organization of the booking units comprising it," said Mr. Pettijohn.

"There are no stock salesmen on the pay-roll of the organization. Our feeling is that groups of exhibitors prefer having an exhibitors' proposition presented to them by exhibitors."

"The exhibitors doing this organization work are giving their time and energy to the movement, because they believe in it. Outside of the fairness such organization methods insure, they represent an enormous saving to the exhibiting branch of the industry. A large staff of high salaried stock salesmen runs into several thousand dollars a week. As usual, the exhibitors pay the freight, either in out and out assessment on their stock for promotion expenses, or through a cut in on the profits that stock should earn."

For Better Pictures

"Under the Affiliated plan, every dollar invested by the exhibitor goes for the single purpose of obtaining better pictures, at lower prices. Not a penny of it can be touched for organization or promotion expenses."

The intermountain states which have just completed their quota, were organized by Byron Park of Salt Lake City, the secretary of the exhibitors' committee, which drafted the Affiliated plan of operation.

Following the election of officers of the booking association in these states, Mr. Park will go to Nebraska and Iowa and organize the association in those states. In the meantime, Fred Herrington, having put the Pittsburgh territory under way, is devoting his efforts to the organization of the Kansas City and St. Louis territories. Early in June he will go to Oklahoma.

Rembusch in Ohio

Frank Rembusch has the Indiana interests so well lined up that this week he is helping Ohio exhibitors in the organization of a Cincinnati unit. Messrs. Hopp and Frank of Chicago, in addition to completing the subscription of the association for Illinois, are lending their efforts to the organization of the Wisconsin exhibitors.

In the east, John Manheimer, president of the Manhattan local of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, is assisting in the organization of the New York State Association, spending most of his time in Buffalo, while Sydney S. Cohen, president of the State League, is working with the Philadelphia exhibitors.

Mr. Pettijohn left New York Thursday for a swing around the circle of the association already organized, or in process of completion. He stated that 36 states were lined up to the extent of all or more than three-quarters of their quota of booking days. In some cases, as in Chicago, this quota had been voluntarily increased by the exhibitors, he said.

Sherry Establishes New York Offices of Distributing Agency

Following the announcement of the organization by William L. Sherry of a big distributing agency to be known as the William L. Sherry Service, comes the information that the new concern will have exchanges at all the principal distributing points in the United States and Canada.

Mr. Sherry has rented half of the twelfth floor of the Godfrey building, Forty-ninth street and Seventh avenue, New York city, where he will establish his general executive headquarters and his New York state exchange.

As announced in the Herald last week the new organization will distribute the Frank A. Keeney pictures.

Mr. Sherry will have with him in his new enterprise a number of men whose abilities have materially contributed to the success of his other enterprises. His general manager will be N. J. Sennott, who was associated with him in Paramount and also in the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company. Daniel J. Savage will manage the Buffalo exchange, covering the western part of New York state. Howard Brink will be general salesman for that territory.

BERST TO HANDLE PROPAGANDA FILMS FOR GOVERNMENT

J. A. Berst, president of United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., has been appointed to the post of manager of distribution, Division of Films, by the Committee on Public Information. In this capacity Mr. Berst will have the supervision of the distribution of all war and propaganda pictures to be issued by the United States government. The Division of Films has opened offices on the top floor of the Times building, New York City.

* Mr. Berst announces that the government films would be released in two ways, first by the continued issue of war films to the established news-weeklies, and then in addition the publication of a weekly war review picture to be distributed through the recognized channels in the picture trade. Because of the great importance of these official films in carrying on government propaganda and in letting the public know just what is going on, Mr. Berst urges every exhibitor to serve his country by using every government picture issued.

Demand for Short Subjects Growing,
Owing to War, Says Maurice Tourneur

Maurice Tourneur, the director now at work on his initial independent picture, "Sporting Life," which is to be a companion picture to "The Whip," which he directed, believes that the world war is creating a trend towards shorter picture dramas.

"The movement, as I see it, is distinctly away from the full evening playlet," declares Mr. Tourneur. "This is psychological in its cause. The world war, with its attendant excitement, sacrifice and worry, is playing upon the nervous system of the world. Whether we know or realize it, the war has keyed up our nerves to a high pitch. We are keenly restless, high strung, unable to concentrate for any length of time upon anything but the world's tragedy.

"This nervous reaction is reflecting itself in every walk of life. Short stories, requiring but fifteen minutes or so to be read, were never so popular as now. Poetry, which is, after all, but the drama of life condensed into more or less beautiful particles, is tremendously popular, too. So it is coming to pictures as well."

Notes Audience Unrest

"I am a steady patron of the film houses. It is part of my business to watch the progress of my fellow workers. I have come to note a marked unrest among audiences when a drama runs longer than six reels, or six thousand feet. Six reels requires about an hour and a half for adequate presentation.

"I had a curious example of this nervous reaction presented to me the other night when I once again witnessed 'The Birth of a Nation.' This beautiful drama was a classic of the screen—did not seem to have been changed greatly when first presented, but the audience of today reflects the wartime reaction. A man who sat just ahead of me remarked to a friend, 'It is beautiful—but just a little too long.'"

"For my part, I do not intend to run my productions over six reels, or seven, at the very most, for the duration of the war. We must meet conditions as they are."

Avoid the Morbid

"It is part of our duty, as purveyors of entertainment to the great majority, to see to it that the public gets wholesome, optimistic and, if possible, amusing entertainment. It is up to the screen to sustain the spirits of the nation. Let us keep away from the morbid and gruesome and throw the tremendous power of the photoplay into the civilized world's war for democracy."

"Another interesting reaction I have noted in various wartime audiences, continues Mr. Tourneur, 'is the steady growth of a demand that we are all learning more and more to religious support in these grim days. You can observe this in the way audiences respond to the spiritual element in pictures. People are coming to think profoundly of the problem of life.'"

D. M. Henderson Leaves McClure Publication

Daniel M. Henderson, advertising manager, has resigned from the staff of McClure's Magazine to become a member of the Ruthrauff and Ryan Advertising Agency of New York City.

Mr. Henderson, in addition to his duties as promotion manager for McClure publications, was also advertising director for McClure Pictures and Petrowa Pictures, conducting the national-wide exploitation campaigns, and "Deadly Sins" and Petrowa Pictures; the latter campaign was specially commented upon by the trade for its artistic and attention-attracting qualities.

In his new position, Mr. Henderson will devote himself to mail-order advertising; a field in which he specialized before his connection with McClure publications.

Eleven Camermen Get Aeroplane Flight

Jack Cohn, manager of the Universal Airplane Service, recently obtained some splendid pictures of the opening of the aeroplane mail service between Washington and New York on May 16. Eleven motion picture photographers were used by Universal to cover the event, representatives being stationed at Belmont Park, L. I., and Potomac Park, Washington, as well as at Bostleton, Nashua, Philadelphia, and at numerous places along the route between Washington and New York.

Boost All Propaganda Films—Laemmle

GOING one better on the "Don't knock your competition" slogan, Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, through Joe Brandt, assistant treasurer, has ordered the sales force of his organization to boost all propaganda films whose mission is to aid the allies in winning the war.

Mr. Laemmle has expressed the feeling that the first duty of every employe of Universal is to do everything in his power to help the allies win this war. To accomplish this, patriotism must be placed before business and personal ends. The remarkable stand of the Universal executive as delivered by Mr. Brandt is as follows:

"President Laemmle feels that the first duty of every employe of Universal is to do everything in his power to help the allies win this war. To accomplish this, patriotism must be placed before business and personal ends. This fact naturally upset many selling precedents, especially in the film business. There are many good war propaganda pictures on the market. One of the best, 'The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin,' is being rented by Universal exchanges.

"But there are several other splendid war propaganda pictures being released by other companies. The American public should see them.

"One thing the members of our sales organization must do is to promote the rentals of all of these war propaganda pictures. It doesn't make any difference to Universal if it is 'The Kaiser' or some picture published by another distributor, if the picture will bring home to the American people the necessity of standing squarely behind our armies at the front, the picture must be promoted. "We are taking the position that every picture that will cause increased patriotism or hatred of the Kaiser should be presented in every motion picture theatre in America."

"Every salesman of every selling organization in the motion picture industry must be a promoter for every convincing war propaganda picture. If we had our way, if it was financially possible to make the number of prints, we would have 'The Kaiser' presented in every motion picture theatre in America on the same day. And we would do the same thing with 'Over the Top' and 'My Four Years in Germany.'"

"This is the time every salesman must be a booster for every picture that shows the barbarity of the Kaiser and his advisers."
Pap Parsons of the Pathé advertising sanctum is very fond of the piscatorial art, and on May 29 will leave for a week’s vacation in the Green Mountains, where he expects to work his rod and reel to the best advantage. If there are any trout in the waters thereabouts they will have some job avoiding Pap’s casts, as he comes from a company that makes a business of casting, and anyway if Pap misses the trout he will get hook’d by killing all the German carp he comes across.

Frank Tichnor of the General Film Company doesn’t keep track of the telephone calls he has to answer in a day, but during a conversation of thirty minutes I had with him he was called just eight times, which, if the average kept up for ten hours, would amount to 160 calls. How he gets so much accomplished in a day I dunno, but he certainly is a wonder for work, and a little thing like 160 phone calls doesn’t seem to worry him a whit.

The big snow storm scene in the De Luxe picture "The Street of Seven Stars" is said to be the biggest laugh of the week where Doris Kenyon rushes into a cabin and is almost smothered by confetti. Universal Pays U. S. Government $45,000 for Ten Weeks’ Film Tax

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company, on May 22, sent a check for $45,000 to the United States Government as its initial remittance for film footage tax made mandatory in the war revenue bill enacted last fall.

The $45,000 is the amount of tax due for the fifteen cents a reel tax assessed on companies for every reel of film prepared during the period ending December 31, and, insofar as has been reported, is the first remittance to the Government to cover the war tax made by another producing company.

When the tax law was passed the distributing companies were practically deputized by the United States Government to collect the footage tax from the exhibitors who in turn were told that they might collect it from the motion picture theaters patronizing them.

After an investigation by Price, Waterhouse & Company, expert accountants, they reported that the equitable figure to collect from the exhibitors in order to take care of the footage tax would be fifteen cents a reel. This figure was arrived at after the accountants had made an investigation of the records of all the larger companies in the production fields.

Real Tax Insufficient

As a result of the report by Price, Waterhouse & Company, the exhibitors were notified that they would be expected to pay fifteen cents a reel tax. However, the records of the Universal Company, it is said, show that this fifteen cents a reel required from the exhibitors does not take care of the footage tax demanded by the Government. Notwithstanding this the Universal Company announces that it purports to stand on the original figure and will not request exhibitors to pay more unless the difference between the payment by exhibitors and the sum demanded by the Government is so great an increase as to become absolutely necessary.

One result of the payment of the first tax check by the Universal Company will be a period of ten weeks upon the Government officials to show that the motion picture industry not only is essential for its entertainment value, but is equally essential as a revenue producer for the Government.

It has been consistently rumored that Government officials are prepared to admit that for its entertainment value the motion picture industry is very essential, but that an investigation now is under way to ascertain if the producing end of the business is of equal importance.

Could Cease Producing

In questioning the immediate importance of the producing end of the industry, it is quoted as declaring that all production could be stopped for a period of at least a year without special harm to the exhibiting end.

As a justification of the stand taken by them on the production end the Government officials are quoted as having called attention to the fact that the average feature photoplay plays to less than twenty per cent of its possibilities. Figures in their possession, they say, prove that the great majority of feature pictures are presented in less than 2,500 theatres in the United States.

While their figures on presentation may be corrected, men acquainted with the industry declare the deductions of the Government officials are not without justification. They are basing their deductions on the gross number of motion picture theatres, whereas they should base them on the gross number of theatre districts.

U. S. Deductions Incorrect

It is admitted that there are approximately 14,000 motion picture theatres in the United States. But it is not a possibility, as the Government officials would seek to show, that a picture could play every one of those houses. Too many of them are competing houses.

The possibilities of presentation of a feature in the United States is about 8,200 houses. There are approximately 8,200 non-competing houses in the country in which a picture might be presented to 8,200 audiences who had not seen the picture before.

These facts will be presented to the Government together with the financial statement based upon the Universal payment. It is expected that the Government will lose in actual cash should production be curtailed. All of the companies will have to release old pictures upon which there could be no negative tax and very little positive tax as the rehabilitating departments would tinker with the old prints until they were presentable.

“Uncle Sam” Trailer

On “Eagle’s Eye”

Aids Loan Campaign

One of the devices found effective in the recent Liberty Loan drive was the “Uncle Sam” trailers used on each episode of “The Eagle’s Eye,” the twenty episode serial story of the Imperial German Government’s spies and plots in America by William J. Flynn, recently retired chief of the United States Secret Service.

“The worth of the picture and the trailers,” says a report from the manager of the Hippodrome, Newport, Ky., “is visible in the showing made by this city and Campbell County in the Third Liberty Loan drive. Campbell County led all districts in the Fourth Federal Reserve district on the card report basis, showing 282 per cent, its quota being $465,000 and its total subscriptions running to $1,690,125.

“The city of Newport was assigned $190,000 and quadrupled this amount. This good showing can be attributed in part to the fact that ‘The Eagle’s Eye’ was shown at the Hip during the drive. Until the film was shown the citizens of Newport had little idea of the spy menace so far as it applied to this country. It aroused talk, enthusiasm and bitterness toward Germany. It put the people in the proper mood to heed the trailer which warned them that what the Liberty Bonds, and everyone in the theatre became a booster for the bonds. They signed up for bonds and made their final sign to the war by giving it as ‘Eagle’s Eye’ deserves its share of credit for Newport going over the top in the Third Liberty Loan.”

Jewel Productions

Scouts Rumor of Pending Gerard Suit

If former Ambassador James W. Gerard, as reported, contemplates filing suit against the Jewel Productions, Inc., because of his impersonation in “The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin” this past spring, it has been officially advised to this effect according to an announcement.

Jewel executives claim that the only knowledge they have of the supposed suit is that gained from trade paper stories announcing that the ground for the suit will be the impersonation of Mr. Gerard in the production and the fact that he is “characterized in the Jewel pictures as Joseph W. Gerard.”

“We do not believe that Mr. Gerard authorized the publication of any story to the effect that he anticipates bringing suit on the ground that he was impersonated in ‘The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin’ without his knowledge or consent,” reads the statement sent out by the Jewel Productions.

“Men” for Fox Theatres

“Men,” the new Bacon-Backer six-part special feature, which is being distributed by Foursquare Pictures, is to be used in some of the leading Fox theatres it is announced. Contracts were closed a few days ago for the presentation of this picture in the Terminal Theatre, the Academy of Music and other first-run Fox houses.
DIGEST OF PICTURES OF THE WEEK

The World picture "The Cabaret" directed by Harley Knoles presents an all-star cast of players headed by June Elvidge, which offers unusual opportunities for advertising. The Universal drama "The Model's Confession" tells a story of average interest with an auto plugging over a cliff for the big thrill. The Marion Davies Film Company's first feature, "Cecilia of the Pink Roses," is a simple, wholesome tale with an abundance of appeal and heart interest.

Harry Morey, the Vitagraph star, is presented in a play devoid of novelty and only saved from mediocrity by his virile acting. The Drews five-part comedy-drama, "Pay Day," is unique in that it is the first time this noted couple have attempted a long feature. It is a farce and while not as humorous as their former two-reel comedies of home life, still demands recognition.

Mutual presents Margarita Fisher, the American Film star, in "A Square Deal," a story by Albert Payson Terhune, which though slight in structure contains a maximum amount of interest by reason of its careful presentation. The technical details of the production are credit to the American studios.

A story of Russian life, "The Firebrand" brings Virginia Pearson, the Fox star, to the screen. It pictures the hardships endured in that turbulent country and has been produced with the usual Fox care as to details. Doris Kenyon's initial picture as an independent star is a screen version of Mary Roberts Rinehart's novel, "The Street of Seven Stars." The material contained in the Saturday Evening Post story makes an excellent screen entertainment and the little star is ably assisted by a fine cast.

"A Square Deal" offers Margarita Fisher in a pleasing combination of harum scarum girl and a young woman facing a tragedy in her married life. It has been well handled, this story of a young girl who leaves the small town life she has been accustomed to, to go to the city and become a member of the "serious thinkers," an organization of Bohemians who believe in the square deal.

The production should make an acceptable offering for any audience demanding light entertainment and should prove especially enjoyable to audiences who are admirers of the imitable little star. The usual high standard of technical details prevail. There are many interesting scenes, showing attic studios, artists' teas and spaghetti parties.

Albert Payson Terhune is the author of the original story and Elizabeth Mahoney, in the picturized version of the story, has maintained the author's spirit throughout. Supporting Miss Fisher are Jack Mover, Val Paul, Constance Johnson, Louis M. Eills and Nanny Westall.

The story: Inspired by a lecture on the higher ideals of life, Alice Gordon leaves her parents and her home to go to the city. She changes her name to Alyx and becomes the center of attraction of an animated crowd of "Serious thinkers." She meets Thurston and he is not of the serious thinking organization, and they are finally married. But Alyx and Thurston do not agree on the subject of serious thinking and gradually they drift apart until finally Thurston tells Alyx that he is going to get a divorce. Not knowing what to do, Alyx returns to her parents, where she finds that Thurston has preceded her, and that it was all a plot to awaken her to her better senses.

There is nothing unusual about "The Firebrand." It is a story dealing with Russia's ambition to free itself of tyranny and unjustice—to become a free and independent republic. To patrons interested in stories woven around unsettled Russia's fate "The Firebrand" should prove an attractive offering.

Virginia Pearson plays her role in her usual forceful manner. She is well supported by Victor Sutherland, Carleton Macy, Herbert Evans, Jane Courtney, Willard Cooley and Nicholas Dunanesc. Settings and scenes have been chosen with care and the photography is good all the way through.

The story: Princess Natalya Rostoff meets Julian Nordkiss, a revolutionary leader, and Nordkiss, believing the princess a servant in the Rostoff household, tells her of his love. The princess loses her brother, who is at war, and shortly afterward her uncle and cousin are mysteriously killed in their home. Natalya gains admittance into a revolutionist meeting through Nordkiss and learns that he is responsible for the murder. She turns him over to the police. The de-throning of the Czar frees Julian and his companions. They take possession of the Rostoff castle and to insure their safety Natalya is forced to marry Julian. To avenge her honor Natalya arranges a duel with Nordkiss and he is shot. She discovers a paper in his pocket proving that her uncle was a traitor. The truth of the situation being revealed, she begs Julian's forgiveness and all ends happily.

Though seven reels in length, "De Luxe Annie" is such an excellent production, and the interest is so well sustained, one becomes oblivious of the picture's length. For the exhibitor who is desirous of presenting his patrons with high class screen entertainment, a capable star, well-chosen cast and an interesting as well as exciting story here is a good opportunity to do so. Edward Clark's stage play loses none of its value in Select's screening of it.

Always dependable, the work of Norma Talmadge be-speaks capability and charm. Frank Mills and Eugene O'Brien in the leading male roles have given a perfect interpretation to handle to excellent advantage. In addition to this trio of popular players there is the success of the play on the speaking stage to aid in advertising, the result of which should be full houses.

The interior sets are luxurious or threadbare as the various phases of the story may demand. There are some excellent snow scenes and realistic country store sets. The photography throughout is excellent and the excellence of Roland West's direction is evident everywhere.

The story: In an endeavor to rescue her husband from an attack by gentleman crooks, Julie Kendall is struck on the head and her mind becomes a blank. Conscious but forgetful of the past, Julie takes up her abode in a cheap boarding house in Chicago and becomes the accomplice of Jimmy, responsible for her mind's condition. Under these conditions she returns to New York and is again wooed by her anxious husband, who tries many ways to have her mind restored. As a last resort an operation is performed and after she becomes normal, she is only mindful of the present and forgets the criminal life she had led for almost a year.

"Cecilia of the Pink Roses" must depend almost solely on the charm of the youthful and exquisitely beautiful star for its success. The progress of the story is so slow that only her beauty keeps the time from dragging hopelessly. Burton King, the associate director, injected many of the easily recognized touches of his masterly understanding of film punch. The story carries a devout Catholic atmosphere and is a tender exposition of home life.

Marion Davies has in her support Willette Kershaw, who gives a fine performance of the dying mother. Charles Jackson as the youthful brother did a fine piece of work. As George Le Guere as the older boy was intelligent and convincing. The rest of the cast was adequate.

The story: Cecilia's parents live very humbly in a tenement. The father is an inventor but can scarcely pay the expenses incident to the illness of the dying mother. After her death all the cares fall on "Cecile," who tries to mother the brother and care for the father. The priest of the parish is interested in the family and helps the father sell his invention to good advantage. Then "Cecile" is sent to a fashionable school where her coarse manners make her most unpopular. She meets Harry Twombly, who becomes interested in her. Her conduct is misrepresented at school and at the same time a man goes abroad and develops into a woman with fine ideals and a beautiful understanding of life. She sees in her father the man he wants to be, but is considerably worried about her brother, who must not marry but is a capable and enterprising spirit. She meets Twombly again and he wishes to marry her, but she insists that he visit her in her home and meet her people. There she is greatly embarrassed at her brother's behavior and decides to refuse Twombly, but a miserable escapade of her brother's throws him into the hands of blackmailers and Twombly saves him. She is persuaded that happiness is only to be found in their marriage and at last consents.

Concerning the adventures of a girl model who purchased her way into society in order to make her father recognize her as his daughter, "The Model's Confession" gives the audience a good entertainment. A remarkable thrill is obtained when a touring car is shown going over a cliff to be totally wrecked at the bottom and the rescue of the occupants of the car. Mary MacLaren gave a well cast and well directed film, and it is afforded excellent support by Kenneth Harlan and others. The story is somewhat similar in plot to "Society for Sale," published by Triangle a few weeks ago. In the Triangle picture the story was given an English setting and in the present production it is Americanized.

The story: Billy Ravensworth, relieved of his small fortune through his attentions to Rita Challoner, accepts the proposition of Iva Seldon to go into social circles for a monetary consideration. While she poses as his fiancée, Billy, despite himself, learns to love her. Her keen interest in Bertrand Seldon, a reputed libertine, arouses Billy's resentment and he declares to all that he is better, but however, if he meets Seldon with the girl she establishes her identity and the car in which they are riding dashes over a cliff Seldon acknowledges her claim prior to his death. After Iva explains her deception and who she really is, Billy declares his love and is accepted.

If June Elvidge, Montagu Love, Carlyle Blackwell, John Bowers or George MacQuarrie are special favorites with your patrons, the combination of these five stars in one production affords an unexcelled opportunity for advertising purposes.

There is a story of average interest woven around the fortunes of four artists and a cabaret performer. For a good many motion picture theatres this will provide good entertainment. But however, if six stars do not appeal to your patrons, "The Cabaret" will probably not come up to expectations.

Studio settings and Greenwich village atmosphere provide the background for most of the action and their settings are in good taste. The picture proved a good offering at Chicago's Pastime Theatre last week.
The story: Helene finds happiness in posing and taking care of the studios for Jaffrey Darrel, Ned Lorrimer, Dick Turner and Stanley Sargent, four artists who have come to look upon Helene as their inspiration and a guiding angel, but one night the boys quarrel over her and she leaves them. She becomes the star of a Broadway revue and makes a "hit." The boys have entered a contest to have their works hung in the museum. All are successful but Darrel. When Helene hears of his misfortune she refuses the invitation of the other three to celebrate their good luck and, going to Darrel, confesses that she loves him. And since Darrel has loved her all the time, the romance ends as all romances should.

A powerful sermon of the possible misery and unhappiness the unwarranted interference of mothers in the domestic lives of their daughters may have is preached in "Who is to Blame." An exceptionally strong cast, headed by Jack Livingston, portrays the story of the unselfish devotion of a Japanese lad to his American friend which culminates in the sacrifice of all his ambitions that right may triumph.

Worthy of the highest praise is the work of Jack Abbe whose winning smile and inimitable mannerisms make a lasting impression. Some extremely good photography is embraced in the picture more particularly in the first part where the scenes are laid in the "Flowery Kingdom."

Harry McRae Webster in producing and directing "Reclaimed" has offered for world rights a melodrama heavy laden with events. It holds the interest throughout and is clean in purport. Although the long arm of coincidence stretches to its full length several times, one is tempted to forgive the author, Mr. Carroll, for the story is at all times intense, exciting and thrilling. Mr. Webster has paid strict attention to settings, every detail being carefully considered, and his direction is invariably true to nature.

Mabel Juliene Scott gave an excellent portrayal of the wild half breed girl. She has great beauty and charm, well balanced by a fine intelligence. Niles Welsh played the mate role. Mabel Wright as an invalid brought a piece of delightful playing to the picture and Anders Randolf added another magnificently well acted villain to his repertoire. The rest of the cast is particularly good.

The story: Amorita Ramon and her bandit husband in Mexico fall into the hand of Mark Sinister, who covets the wife. She repulses him many times, but he waits the opportunity to kill the husband and then tries to take her by force. She reigns death and he breaks apart the locket she wears, keeping the half containing her picture. After he leaves she gives the half with the father's picture to their little child, making her swear by the cross that she will avenge the death of her parents. The child grows up, untaught and unhappy and Sinister is opposed by the young woman. Some extremely good photography is embraced in the picture and Anders Randolf added another magnificently well acted villain to his repertoire. The rest of the cast is particularly good.

Like so many other William S. Hart productions, Mr. Hart gives us a hardened, brutal, selfish man who towards the latter part of the picture realizes his wrong method of living when the large eyes of an unsophisticated maiden look up into his in a beseeching manner, pleading with him to change his tactics.

Ernest Butterworth and Thelma Salter are two good reasons for seeing the picture. They add a touch of humanness that does much to take the stereotyped appearance from the play and give it a true-to-life warmth. Jane Novak gives a somewhat inane interpretation of her role. Harry Dunkinson and B. Sprotte are the other members of the cast.

The wonderful western scenery, familiar to Hart followers, is prominent in "Selfish Yates" and the usual excellent photography pervails. For those audiences who admire Mr. Hart this play should prove as pleasing as any of his previous offerings.

The story: Mary Adams, her sister Betty and her dying father, arrive in the town of Thirsty Center, ruled by the one Yates, known as "Selfish Yates." After the death of her father, Mary searches the floor of the dance hall and cooks for Yates. Soon, however, her finer qualities awaken a spark of manhood in Yates and he sets her to work teaching his protege, Hotfoot. While rescuing Mary from her unscrupulous manager the manhood within Yates is awakened, he disposes of his dance hall and plans to devote the rest of his life to righteous living and making Mary happy.

"PAY DAY"

Metro comedy-drama; five parts; directed by Sidney Drew; published May 27

Photography: Satisfying

To offer the famous Drews in a five-reel picture is quite a novelty and undoubtedly their names will be sufficient to draw good audiences, but the merits of the picture fall far below anything they have attempted on the screen.

It would seem that five reels has given them too much scope and when it has been cleverly worked out and done along farcical lines, there is so much lacking that this picture can not be classed as a truly meritorious offering.

The opening of the picture shows Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew looking over some manuscripts, one of which is a flyer and a special request from Mr. Rowland that they produce it. Mr. Drew appreciates that they cannot do five reels, but Mrs. Drew's pleadings and Mr. Rowland's hint as to the salary Mary Pickford is getting, finally persuades Mr. Drew, and against his better judgment he tells Mr. Rowland work will be begun immediately.

The audience is let in on the story while Mr. Drew is reading it and the pictures do not come.

Kirke's pay day has come and he is sent into exile.

Doris Kenyon, at the head of her own company, in "The Street of Seven Stars," is assured of an initial success, for the story is fresh and wholesome, and the entire production is clean and sweet. Miss Kenyon exhibited great charm in the role of the gifted young American violinist. She thoroughly understands her art and commands both respect and admiration from the start. It is a story that is marked by the power of the performances of Miss Kenyon and Robertine Rinchart. John B. O'Brien directed the production. The settings are particularly attractive and the photography admirable.

A support of Miss Kenyon, Hugh Thompson deserves praise for a fine, manly portrayal of the sympathetic doctor.

Carey Hastings and Stephen Carr added much to the value of the cast. Iva Shepard gave a dignified performance and John Hopkins scored heavily in the photography.

The story: Harmony Wells, a young American girl goes to Paris to study music. She has only the meagre savings of her widowed mother on which to live and shares quarters with two girls. They are penniless and discouraged.

Harmony, in the nick of time, gets the money, and returns home. Harmony then moves to the Pension. At a coffee house where she is eating dinner she is insulted by an Apache and defended by Dr. Bryne, who afterward falls in love with her. Dr. Bryne, alone in Paris, is a social worker and he tries to persuade Harmony to move to Paris to study with him. She tries to persuade her mother to return to America with her, but is met by her father, who has left her mother.

In the end, they are reunited and Harmony and her mother return home.

An excellent story as the basis upon which Donald Crisp could work and with a star of the capability of Wallace Reid, it was an easy matter to turn out so meritorious a production as "Believe Me, Xantippe."

No doubt many persons are familiar with Frederick Ballard's stage success of the same name and this together with the drawing powers of Wallace Reid, should offer exhibitors an excellent box office attraction.

After having seen this play there is little doubt but what patrons will agree it is one of the best of its kind in some time. It would seem "Believe Me, Xantippe" is worth a two-day run in most parts of the country.

The production is in every respect high class. The technical details are perfect. The western exteriors and the well-chosen interiors play an important part in heightening the production's excellence. Ann Little, Ernest Joy, Henry Woodward and James Cruz give good interpretations of their respective roles and afford Mr. Reid well-balanced support.

The story: George MacFarland, makes a bet with two of his friends that having committed a forgery, he can elude the officers of the law for one year, but his friends being too thorough, George does not find it an easy matter getting away. He finally goes to a small town out west where he lives unmolested for eleven months. On a hunting expedition he meets the daughter of the county judge, Miss Kate Lenore, who takes him to her father, but Dolly has fallen in love with George's photograph and he becomes a somewhat privileged prisoner. The day the bet is off George learns that his friends have been discovered and he is going to be sent to Sing-Sing.

The arrival of the boys, however, changes things and in addition to being free George wins Dolly.

Triangle's happy faculty of selecting small town types scores again in "Old Hartwell's Cub," one of whose wholesome stories of rural community life depicting the narrowness and intolerance of the villagers along with the big-heartedness and kindness. William Desmond and Mary Warren are the featured players in the cast of the village blacksmith and the daughter of the local minister, carry to conclusion a pretty romance.

The story: Bill Hartwell, the village blacksmith, has enrag ed the villagers through the defense of his father, an habitual drunkard, that he and his parent are only saved from a coat of tar and feathers through the intervention of Rev. Lane. Mary Lane, the daughter, is instrumental in cementing a strong friendship between her father and the blacksmith. The girl falls under the influence of an unprincipled bible salesman and he induces her to help him with the money and Misses to marry his stepfather. The minister reveals the truth and the girl falls in love with Bill. In the end, Bill helps Mary and her bigamist husband return to their true love and they are married. The story is a morality play and is saved from hanging when Mary arrives with a bill of sale which proves him innocent. She then goes back east with Bill.

Harry Morey, Florence Deshom and Jean Paige afford a trio of names that have become popular through association with good screen entertainment and their characteristics in this production equal anything they have ever done.

While the story starts out in a somewhat unusual manner, it developed along familiar lines, bringing with it a sufficient amount of interest to make it a fairly good offering for many motion picture theatres.

His role gives the virile Harry Morey a number of opportunities, of which he takes advantage in his usual capable manner and presents a finished performance. The story by Lawrence S. McCloskey deals with a young seafaring man, who, having fallen a victim to the charms of a daughter of the idle rich, plans to make a sufficient amount of money to claim her. Binded by his ambition he stoops to bribery, only to be brought to his senses by the love of an earnest and sincere daughter of the working class.

The story: Harry Morey and the Mysterious Client

The story: Ever seeking adventure Beatrice Walton leads John Doran, a poor seafaring man, to believe she loves him. The knowledge that she does not love him makes John anxious to make sufficient money that he might win her. He becomes the tool of Beatrice’s father and stages a strike in the shipyard in which he is employed. Laura Brooks, a stenographer for the same firm, tries to show him the error of his way, but he refuses to listen. Almost too late, he realizes the duplicity of Beatrice, who matters aught and proves himself worthy of the love of Laura.

Combining a well-sustained mystery story with clever comedy “The Mysterious Client” is offered as the best that Irene Castle has yet done for the Pathé company. So cleverly does the plot unfold that the outcome is concealed until the last few feet of film turns into a farce a series of events which, at first, are bordering on the shipyard in which he is employed. Laura Brooks, a stenographer for the same firm, tries to show him the error of his way, but he refuses to listen. Almost too late, he realizes the duplicity of Beatrice, who matters aught and proves himself worthy of the love of Laura.

The story: Having failed to establish a clientele and about to be ejected from his office for non-payment of rent, Harry Nelson, a young attorney, accepts a proposition from Jeanne Gravina to protect her until she can deposit an envelope in a safety deposit box. From then on things begin to happen for Nelson. He is attacked and the envelope taken from him. He then accompanies the girl to the home of Boris Norymov, where while the two are attempting to force open a wall safe they are apprehended by the owner. After being imprisoned in a room of the house he escapes with the girl only to be told he is never to see her again. Later, however, she sends for him and he arrives in time to overhear Boris tell her she must kill an heiress held captive or be exposed. With the entrance of detectives to the building Jeanne confesses to Nelson that Boris is her father, that the whole thing was planned to protect her chivalry was not dead and that Nelson is the most favored suitor.

Mme. Nazimova scores an individual triumph in “Toys of Fate.” It is a worthy successor to “Revelation,” her first Screen Classics production. Audiences at the Playhouse, Chicago, where it had its premiere last Sunday, received it with enthusiasm.

The Russian actress is particularly well cast in the role of the gypsy princess. She plays the part of the sly, unrestrained maiden with an impetuosity that must have taxed her strength and endurance, as well as that of her director and cameraman. In “Toys of Fate,” Nazimova is given many acting opportunities, and she gets the most out of each scene.

The story: Hagar, the wife of a leader of a gypsy tribe, is deceived into believing happiness is to be found with a wealthy landowner, and she deserts her baby and takes up life with Bruce Griswold. Two years later Azah returns from school, and upon her wedding day learns of her father’s desire to avenge the death of her mother. She prepares a poison for herself, but Griswold takes it and dies. Azah is tried for the murder, but is defended by Livingston, and when tried she is wounded by her discarded lover, Greggo. She finally finds solace in the arms of the man who has befriended her.

Recent reports received from the General Film Company have satisfied us," said General Manager Pollard of the Ebony Company, "that the exhibitor, like the vaudeville manager, is beginning to learn the value of a colored act. Ebony comedies have met with popular approval and it should not be long before exhibitors will find them indispensable features.
Ten Essanay Features Announced
With Marionettes as Chief Actors

Essanay has announced that it has nearly completed a series of ten pictures, the chief characters of which are Mugsy, Mose and Mike, movie marionettes or dolls, although in some of the pictures human characters take minor parts. These dolls are fourteen inches high and act before the camera, it is said, very much as human beings act. They run the gamut of facial expressions, depicting fright, grief, joy, anger, terror, jealousy, hate, love, or any other emotion as well as walk and run, and each film carries a distinct plot just as any picture in which real players enact their roles.

The making of these pictures has entailed months of work on the part of Director Howard S. Moss and Charles B. Benees. Frequently it is necessary for the men manipulating the dolls to hold one position for hours at a time. It is said, to time the action perfectly so that there be no jerkiness in the movements of the marionettes.

The making of the many dolls to get the various facial expressions also entails long, tedious work. This is the first time in doll pictures in which the dolls were able to show a change of countenance, Essanay states.

THREE OF ESSANAY'S MOTION PICTURE MARIONETTES, MUGSY, MOSE AND MIKE, SOON TO APPEAR IN TEN NEW FILMS.

Among the first will be "Cracked Ice," "Ups and Downs," "All Balled Up," "Drafted," "Angel's Food" and "Their Jonah Day." The pictures run five hundred feet each. The dates of issue will be announced shortly.

Constance Talmadge as Farceuse

Constance Talmadge has achieved the zenith of her art in the characterization she has created as the heroine of "Good Night, Paul." It is said the play will follow "The Lesson" in her series of Select Pictures, in which she is presented by Lewis J. Selznick.

In "Good Night, Paul," Miss Talmadge has her first real farce. The photoplay is adapted from the successful stage play of the same name, in which Ralph Herz and Elizabeth Murray recently toured the country, and was directed by Walter Edwards, whose forte is along these very lines. "Miss Talmadge," said her director, "because of her unusual vivacity, appears in this play to best advantage. It is entertainment of a very high order and exceptionally enjoyable, having a light, frothy touch and built primarily for amusement."

Triangle Announces Features With Stewart, Desmond and Rubens as Stars

Adhering to the stiff production schedule of two feature pictures and one comedy a week, Triangle continues to direct the companies at the Culver City studios "Over the Top." Quality as well as quantity is receiving consideration and in addition to "The Heritage," "Station Content," "The Last Rebel" and "The Poor Fish," a Keystone comedy heretofore announced, the June schedule of the Triangle Distributing Corporation includes several unusual productions which are now in production it is announced.

In response to the demand for the finer motion picture plot and for diversity in film material, Triangle will offer Roy Stewart in a series of cowboy plays adapted from the famous "Red Saunders" stories by Henry Wallace Phillips. "The Fly God" is the working title for the second of this series of western plays to be issued June 30. Stewart will be seen. Claire Anderson will be Stewart's leading woman.

Six Sadie Sedgwick in a Comedy

A new two-reel Triangle-Keystone comedy to be put into production with William Beaudine handling the megaphone, has been temporarily titled, "Flapjacks." This is scheduled for June 9. It was written by the well-known magazine writer Frank Condon and has a western locale, it is said "Flapjacks" shows most of which is planned for the new series. Director J. W. McLaughlin, the title of whose offering "The Mobsack" has been changed to "The Man Who Woke Up," has started work on a new project that will serve as a vehicle for William Desmond. As yet no title has been given to this story.

"Madam Sphinx," the first Triangle feature for June 9, is a romance of French life directed by Thomas N. Heffron. The leading roles are played by Alma Rubens and Wallace MacDonald.

Exhibitors Add Day to Run of Wharton Serial

Some exhibitors in the United States have found "The Eagle's Eye," the twenty episode serial story of the Imperial German Government's spies and plots in America, by William J. Flynn, recently retired chief of the United States Secret Service, such a popular attraction that they are increasing the run of each episode. Nixon and Nerdlinger recently forwarded the eighteen episodes, and Poli's Bijou at New Haven changed the original booking to open on Sunday night instead of Monday, and the Strand Theatre, at Youngstown, Ohio, increased their original booking from three to four days' run on each episode.

The Nixon-Nerdlinger house found that the persons wishing to follow the serial could not be accommodated in two nights. The Youngstown Theatre had the same reason for increasing the length of the run. S. X. Poli, proprietor of Poli's Theatrical Enterprises, wrote the following to the Wharton Releasing Corporation in regard to the change at the Bijou:

"I am pleased to inform you that, through the aid of my local manager at the Bijou Theatre in New Haven and through the assistance of your Boston exchange we have been very successful in presenting 'The Eagle's Eye' the past few weeks by opening it on Sundays rather than on Mondays as formerly.

"The Sunday opening gives a greater scope for advertising in the Sunday papers and to my way of thinking, based on personal observation, 'The Eagle's Eye' properly exploited by the man who exhibits it is unquestionably one of the biggest draws on the screen, especially for a Sunday night concert. It is timely, and surely authentic, which adds greatly to its drawing powers."

Brooklyn to Have Big Amphitheatre Devoted to Pictures

To bridge over the summer months, when the ice skating craze is at its lowest ebb, the management of the Brooklyn Ice Skating Palace, Bedford and Atlantic avenues, announces that the policy of the amphitheatre will be changed to that of high-class motion picture presentation for the period of the hot weather months. Whether this policy will continue next season or not has as yet been undecided, but it is said that very likely pictures would be the future policy of the house.

The plans call for a seating capacity of 2,500 and the rebuilding of the entire interior. Architecturally the management is ambitious to make the Ice Palace one of the finest theatre properties in Brooklyn, and particular attention will be directed to the seating, lighting and several convenience and comfort of the patrons. Work on the remodeling has been under way for some time and it will open on June 1st, it is said.

Universal to Make Vital Announcement on Laemmle's Return

One of the most important production announcements issued in some months from the headquarters of a motion picture corporation comes from the Universal Company sometime during the week of May 26, upon the return from Universal City of President Carl Laemmle.

Just exactly the nature of the announcement is being carefully guarded by the New York office executives until the return of Mr. Laemmle. It is rumored, however, that not only are six other large production concerns directly interested, but that United States Government officials are anxiously awaiting the result of the experiment that will follow the announcement.

President Laemmle left Universal City several days ago and is making the return trip to New York by easy stages. On his return trip he has been visiting several of the company's exchanges. in the northwest, where he met General Manager Joe Brandt and Assistant General Manager Claude H. MacGowan.

“Cleopatra” Opens
In Chicago House;
Fox Co. Jubilant

Shown Under White Permit
After Long Fight

“Cleopatra,” the Fox production, began an indefinite engagement at the Colonial Theatre in Chicago last Monday night. The run follows the victory that the Fox forces scored over Major Funkhouser, the Chicago censor, after a bitter fight for the right to present the picture in the form in which it has been shown practically throughout the United States.

The picture is now in the second week of its run at the Victoria Theatre, in Philadelphia, where it is scoring an unprecedented success, according to a statement from the Fox Film Corporation.

Marked Success Elsewhere

“Cleopatra,”” says the statement, “is one of the very few productions that the Victoria has played for more than a week. One of the most notable features of the reports we have received from the twenty road companies of ‘Cleopatra’ is the extraordinarily large number of theatres that have broken traditional house policies by showing the film at extended engagements.”

Mr. Fox’s opening of the photodrama in Chicago, the statement continues, is more than a personal triumph.

“It signals an important decision in which the entire trade and industry will rejoice,” the announcement reads. “Because every gain of this kind by a producer is slowly undermining the autocratic power that is being exercised in Chicago.

Fox Protests Censorship

“After Major Funkhouser had had the picture screened for him he ordered excessive eliminations, to which, of course, we were not willing to agree. We would not acquiesce, without protest and contest, in letting one man’s views be the determining and almost the sole factor in the decision as to what a million other persons would or should not see.

“We objected so strenuously and to such good effect that the office of the city’s corporation counsel ordered Mr. Funkhouser to issue a white or general permit for ‘Cleopatra.’

The newspaper advertising campaign conducted by J. R. Grainger, special representative of the Fox Film Corporation, who is in charge of the engagement, was one of the best that has been seen in Chicago for some time. Attractive advertisements changed daily kept up the interest of the public in the production.

Every detail looking to the proper presentation of the picture was attended to. The orchestra, undoubtedly, had been rehearsed many times with the picture, as the “cues” were followed closely and added to the effectiveness of the picture. One of the novels introduced, was a large oil painting of Theda Bara, hanging in the lobby, backed by a beautiful oriental rug, with an amber spot-light directed on the painting. The lobby of the theatre was tastefully decorated and all lights were colored a deep magenta shade.

The presentation of “Cleopatra” demonstrated clearly, that the exploitation of any large super-production should be placed in the hands of capable men and the Fox Film Corporation are to be congratulated on the manner in which ‘Cleopatra’ was presented to the Chicago public.

PERSONALS

"By George"

As we sit here, tiny rivulets of perspiration almost blinding us, our collar clammy adhering to the band of our shirt, a pathetically of its former self, we have come to one conclusion and that is that it takes a hot day to make one stick to his work.

M. H. Hoffman, of the Hoffman-Foursquare, Inc., passed through Chicago this week on his way to New York. Mr. Hoffman was taken suddenly ill while on the western coast but was considerably improved when he reached here. He will, it is said, have some important announcements to make upon his arrival in the east.

With the passing of Funkhouser grief knew no bounds in the film exchanges of our fair city. No man in the censoring game has ever received more attention than the major. He has succeeded in maintaining a spirit of uncertainty about the film business in Chicago that was fascinating. No one knew whether a picture could be shown here or not or if it could how it would look when he got through with it.

Probably the unhappiest man in Chicago over this sad affair is William Jenner of the Pathe company. He and Funkhouser have gone through many trials together and the finish of each has always found them as closely associated as ever.

F. C. Quimby, sales manager of the Pathe company was in Chicago this week. We went over to see him and after repeated efforts we got friend Rogers out of the sanctuary. He told us that F. C. was busy dictating and would we come back in an hour. We would and did. Then they had all gone out to lunch. Well, we didn't see Quimby and Quimby didn't see us. Suppose we're the losers but it's all in a day's work.

We run across another good argument why policemen should not censor pictures. A Red Cross worker in the company of the Law, a man with a trained monkey stopped at a State street corner and with the aid of a megaphone began his solicitation for funds. The monkey had a sense of humor: he preferred playing with a Carnival, Fox box, and Chrysler baby more than a flat-footed copper got busy instructing the crowd to "move on."

Griever and Herz have got 900 feet of film on the courtroom scenes of the Roberts-Lush murder trial at Waukesha. One day this week the Gold, Crawford and Madison Square theatres all run it. This was accomplished with the aid of a Ford, some proficiency and considerable sweating. If the jury sentences her to thirty days in the hoosegow for her actions, we got a scoop on the darn thing.

James Sheldon, president, and Terry Ramsay, manager of publicity of the Mutual Film Corporation, returned to Chicago this week from New York where they have been on business.

One of those soft shoe detectives has been trying for a week to serve summons on Betty Hildreth, Chicago representative of the Exhibitors Trade Review in connection with the Major's suit for $200,000. Betty don't get Betty.

S. T. Stephens, southern supervisor of the Mutual, is in Chicago this week in conference with President Sheldon.

H. A. Brink, president of the Affiliated Distributors Corporation, wrote that things are coming along swimmingly. If they were selling anything we might say something about watered stock. But they ain't and we can't.

Carl Laemmle, Joe Brandt, Harry Burman and I. Lesserman held a conference over in the Universal offices this week. We didn't catch a word that was said, but we thought maybe you'd like to know there was a conference on. C. H. MacGowan and a staff of six auditors were also in the Chicago office installing a new system of accounting. Trying days these for Irving Mack.

Paul Gerard Smith, esteemed editor of Screen Opinions, has joined the Marine Corp of Palm Springs. He raises as much hell with the Huns as he did with a number of screen productions, and we think the war ain't going to last so long.

On the Firin' Line

The one chief topic of conversation among salesmen in this city is where and how to get to the news. Of course, this is for the fellows between 21 and 31. The others don't count in this conversation.

Probably there is no salesman living who has not at one time or another been declared useless by some one—the exchange manager. But now to have the government step in and make it a national proposition lends a word of truth to what had heretofore been utter in a spirit of jest.

However, Morrie Salkin had an idea at once. He proposes to take "Chub" Florine in on it. He suggested that the two of them get a job with the government as billetters. When "Chub" asked him what duties we would have to perform, Morrie replied that they would go on ahead of the American forces with twenty-four sheets announcing the day and date the Yankees would occupy German territory.

Harry B. Charness, formerly with the sales force of the Central Film Company, covering Iowa and Indiana, has chosen the fight end of the "work or fight" mandate and will report for training at Camp Chicago, Michigan, this week.

S. J. Rollo, who sold Mutual films, went around to the nine-hole Jackson Park golf course in 42 the other day. Rollo must have been a bit off his game. Bogey is 41 for the course. Probably a defensive driver with his thinking was not working just exactly right.

Phil Solomon of the George Kleine system has just returned from a successful Indiana trip in the interests of "The Unbeliever." Phil says he met Hildreth of the Billionaire and they're trying to create a hury. We can't see why anybody should hurry across the Wabash when it's the only wet spot in that part of the country.

Joe Roderick, who has been connected with the Universal Film Co., for the past five years doing this, that and the other thing, has been made manager of the Milwaukee office. Fred Myers, former manager of the Pabst City Branch, was forced to resign through ill health. Robert H. Wells will continue east from Universal City to fill the vacancy occasioned by Mr. Roderick's promotion.

R. B. Shonaway, formerly of the motion picture department of the Chicago Herald, is now selling films in Illinois and Wisconsin for the Foursquare.

Engleman has resigned from the Doll-Van Film Corp. and has announced that, following a few weeks of rest, he will seek connections with another exchange in the city.

According to MacMillan of Foursquare, who is congratulating himself over the fact that a helpful occupant of a week each, every time a film salesman makes a sale now he shouts "Three cheers for Chief Alfcock." Yes, Funkhouser had a host of friends among the film purveyors.

"THE MILLION DOLLAR DOLLIES."
Kerrigan Recovers From Accident and Begins Work on "Toby"

J. Warren Kerrigan has fully recovered from the broken leg which he sustained last week while he was working at the Paralta studios in Los Angeles, Cal., it is announced. Just after finishing the turn of "Tumble Card," his second Paralta Play, Mr. Kerrigan was riding a horseback near Santa Barbara, when his horse stepped into a gopher hole and fell, throwing Mr. Kerrigan under him. He was taken to the Cottage Hospital in Santa Barbara, where it was discovered that the tibia bone was broken half way between the knee and ankle. At that time it was thought that the star would be able to return to work within a few weeks, but it was later found that the bone had not been properly set which resulted in his being compelled to limp. Rather than have this hamper him in his future work, Mr. Kerrigan decided to have the bone re-broken. This was done about three months ago and his leg is again in perfect condition.

Settings for his new Paralta Play, "Toby," which will be a visualization of the book of the same name by Credo Harris, were completed about two weeks ago, and Mr. Kerrigan started the filming of the initial scenes last week under the direction of Raymond B. West. The story of the new vehicle is laid in the Kentucky hills. Lois Wilson, who has appeared in a number of Paralta films, will play the lead in Kerrigan's former Paralta Plays, will again be seen as his leading lady in a role which is said to be especially suited to her histrionic talents.

Myrtle Lind Is Latest Ingenue for Billy West

The King-Bee Comedy Company, at their Hollywood studio, are working at top speed. During the month of May they have turned out two more comedies, namely, "In the Dark and Early," "Straight and Narrow," and "Playmates.

In the last two comedies a new leading ingenue is prominently casted. Her name is Myrtle Lind, and she is said to be the handomest of all the beauties that have played opposite Billy West in the King-Bee comedies.

Book Dealers Promote Film Version of "K"

Exhibitors throughout the country are to have the active assistance of numerous book dealers in the promotion of "The Doctor and the Woman" the picturization of Mary Roberts Rinehart's popular novel "K," according to an announcement made by the publishers.

The co-operation between exhibitor and bookseller is being arranged by Grosset & Dunlap, the New York publishers, who have issued a popular-priced edition of "K" to be printed. Every large bookdealer in the United States has been circularized. The advantage of this is an in-store display of the novel "K" just prior to the presentation of the picture is urged as the very best kind of a selling campaign not only for the book, but for the picture.

"Ordeal of Rosetta," Alice Brady's Select Picture for May, which follows "K," is said to contain some unique trick photography devised by Director Emile Chau- tard and his camera man, Jacques Bizuel, and an excellent instance of double exposure is said to occur in the scene where Professor Gelardi, played by Henri Leone, puts his arms around both of his twin daughters Rosetta and Lola, both of whom are portrayed by Alice Brady. The star appears on both sides of her father at the same time, but there is no break in the center of the film, it is said.

Throughout the entire story, which was written by Edmund Goulding, the well-known scenarist, now doing his bit with the directed from a story by E. F. Comstock has the female lead. The rest of the cast includes Maid Turner Gordon, Ed Burns, Hazel Washburn and George Henry.

Ebony Activities Include Many New Films Under Way

Luther J. Pollard, president and general manager of the Ebony Film Corporation, Chicago, announces a new subject completed for General Film Company distribution, featuring Billy Ledman and Mattie Edwards, a story of matrimo- nial mix-ups. The title has not yet been selected. It was written and directed by Ralph G. Phillips.

According to Mr. Pollard, A. B. Heath, production manager, claims Mr. Ledman to be one of the big "finds" of the year—a natural born comedian who imitates no one at all, and prefers aloneness. A new Ebony comedy offers him unlimited scope for the display of his humorous antics and indomitability physical courage which will soon make him one of the most popular comedians in filmmad, it is said.

Director Charles David is putting the finishing touches to "A Millionaire Flier," which he directs from a script by E. F. Comstock, the screen by Bob Horner. This feature is to be released by the American Cities, and is known as a new "black" feature and is considered by exhibitors to be exactly suited to the requirements of the Negro masses.

Geth Sundays Permit

A unique tribute has been paid to the patriotic value of "My Four Years in the Army" by the City of New Bedford, Mass.

For some time the law against Sunday showings has been strictly enforced in the New England town, but after the mayor and the members of the city council had witnessed a screening of the Gerard picture they issued a special permit for its exhibition at Gordon's Olympic on any and all forthcoming Sundays that the management of the theatre might desire to show it.
Exhibitors Forced to Retrench To Meet Heavy Tax Imposition

Cut Operating Expenses Following Meeting at Winnipeg—Censorship Brought

Exhibitors of Winnipeg, Manitoba, and other cities of western Canada have decided to retrench in various ways in order to meet new conditions brought about by the imposition of the new rate of fifteen cents per day and the increase in the duty on imported film from two to three cents per linear foot.

A big exhibitor of Winnipeg recently has stated that they could not possibly raise their admission prices above ten or fifteen cents on account of provincial tax, and the only thing that some of them could do, without closing their doors, would be to "back water" in the matter of operating expenses.

Exchange managers declare that the new Federal impositions mean an added cost of $300,000 per year to the moving picture business in Canada, and there are only 1,000 theatres in the country to cover the new expense. This means an average expenditure of $300 per year for each exhibitor.

Censorship Increases Cost

An interesting phase of the situation was brought out in the general discussion. This was in reference to the regulation of censorship by and operating and tax costs. Should censorship boards in three of the provinces condemn a picture, exhibitors of five other provinces have to bear the burden of the whole tax on the film.

It was stated that successive censorship boards in each province manage to cut each five reel subject down to four reels on an average. Thus the last exhibitor to show it will have to pay as much as half of A picture as the first pays for nearly the whole picture, insofar as the reel tax goes, it was declared.

The duty on the whole of the uncensored picture, however, when imported, must first be paid and there is no rebate when large portions are cut out by any censors board. It is pointed out by Manitoba men that frequently by the time a picture arrives in Winnipeg from the eastern provinces it is a celluloid wreck.

The suggestion has been raised once more that the exhibitor should have his own censorship. He knows what his patrons like and if a picture did not meet with his approval he would not have to run it under such a system.

Sadie Weston Sues Defunct Film Co.

For $401 Back Salary

An echo of the failure of the Canadian National Features Limited, Trenton, Ontario, the last Canadian concern to attempt to make dramatic pictures on a substantial scale, is the suit of Mrs. Sadie Weston Ryan, of Trenton, known as Sadie Weston in moving picture circles, against the directors of the defunct company to recover $401 alleged to be due her under a judgment obtained on June 21, 1917.

Plaintiff alleges that she was engaged on December 19, 1916, by George Brownridge, the general manager of the company, at a salary of $75 per week for one year to form one of a cast of players to produce pictures at the studio in Trenton. The defendants deny that they entered into any agreement and the company is in process of liquidation. The defendants named are George Brownridge, Jeremiah Shea, Alice Roberts, Louis Peagan, N. J. Wills and William Cranston of Trenton, Dr. Farley, George White and Rev. Father Connolly of Trenton.

S. G. Gibson, one of the leading luminaries of film circles in Montreal, Quebec, has left for Boston, where he has joined the staff of the General Film Company’s branch.

"Over the Top," the Vitagraph special, had its premier showing in Canada at the Grand Opera House, London, Ontario, during the four days starting Monday, May 20, Colonel H. D. Smith and officers of the headquarters staff at Wolseley Barracks, the local compartment, attended the first performance in a body.

An interesting feature is that Sergeant Guy Empey enlisted with the 16th Battalion of the 1st Canadian Contingent at London.

Program Changes Saturday

A very unusual policy has been adopted for the Allen Theatre, Toronto. It has been decided to run program weekly as usual, but the change in the bill will come on Saturdays in future instead of on Mondays. This decision was reached because it was desired to get away from the general practice of starting a new tea on Monday. The Allen is a first run theatre in the downtown section and the pictures which it shows are controlled by the managers who also run the theatre along with others.

The name of the Grand Theatre, Kitchener, Ontario, which was recently purchased by the Allen interests of Toronto, has been changed to the Allen Theatre.

To advertise a coming feature, "$5,000 Reward," Manager Harry Pomeroy, of the Holman Theatre, Montreal, offered a reward of $10 for the capture of "The Mysterious Dick Arlington," a character of the picture, who appeared in various places around the city during the week of May 20. The current attraction at the theatre was "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," which was being shown in Montreal for the first time.

Clergy Contemplate A Crusade Against Sunday Film Shows

Almost on the same day that Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal complained to the local Administrative Committee that the law providing for a Sunday school show was not being enforced, Reverend Dr. Symonds of Christ Church, representing children under fifteen years of age unless accompanied was not being enforced, Reverend Dr. Symonds of Christ Church, representing children under fifteen years of age unless accompanied, declared that a possible crusade against local exhibitors with the object of compelling local theatres to close on Sundays. The Lord’s Day Alliance is preparing to take action in Montreal, it is declared, but it has not yet made any move in the open. This is not unusual, as the alliance seldom does come out in the open for a fair fight, it is said.

Both Montreal exhibitors and exchange managers are arming for the coming battle. The Exchange Managers’ Association has been duly organized and meetings are being held every Wednesday. J. P. O’Loughlin, general manager of the Metro Picture Service, Limited, Montreal, has been elected president of the organization. It is interesting to note that a prominent local lawyer has been made secretary of the association. He is Mr. Lafontaine, of the firm of Bercovitch, Lafontaine and Gordon. One member of this firm, Mr. Bercovitch, is a member of the Quebec legislature and as such is in a position to speak for the motion picture industry in the house. Mr. Lafontaine is also associated with the Montreal Moving Picture Exhibitors’ Association.

Following the closing of the theatres at Sherbrooke, Quebec, on Sundays, announcement has been made that civil suit has been started against the managers of the Premier Theatre, for keeping his theatre open on a Sunday contrary to law.

Select Establishes Canadian Offices

Announcement has been made at Toronto that the Select Pictures Corporation of New York will hereafter control the distribution of its product throughout the dominion through direct channels. Phil Kaufman, formerly sales manager of Regal Films, Limited, has been appointed general manager for the Canadian interests of the Select Pictures Corporation. He has opened an office in the Herald Building, 15 Dundas street, East, Toronto, and announced the opening of branch offices in five other Canadian cities. The Select releases were formerly handled by the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, which still distributes Paramount and Artcraft features as well as other pictures.
Grand Changes Policy

There has been a persistent rumor that the Grand Opera House, Toronto, one of the oldest dramatic houses in Canada, had been purchased and leased to J. J. Allen, who controls many theatres in both eastern and western Canada. Manager James Cowan of the Grand denies the report, however. Indeed, the Grand closed its dramatic season on Saturday, May 25, and opened as a picture theatre on Monday, May 27, with "Within the Law," which will be a special attraction during the whole week.

Regent's New Manager

Books "Tarzan" Feature

Manager Roland Roberts, of the St. Denis Theatre, Montreal, assumed the management of the Regent Theatre, one of Toronto's finest picture theatres, on Monday, May 19. Manager Roberts announced that the Regent would be thoroughly renovated at once. He also announced that one of the special attractions for the Regent would be "Tarzan of the Apes," which is scheduled for presentation during the week of June 3. This is the first showing of this feature in eastern Canada. There will be no changes in the personnel of the theatre, it is declared.

"Tempered Steel" has
M melodramatic Theme

Madame Olga Petrova, whose fourth special production, "Tempered Steel," is shortly to be issued through the exchanges of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, possesses decided views as to the educational value of the motion picture. In selecting her latest vehicle, "Tempered Steel," written especially for her by George Middleton, author of the Broadway stage success, "Policeman," she said that the star had in mind the lesson to be learned through the enactment of a powerful melodrama of this type, it is said.

New Photographic Sets
To Display Pathe Plays

Pathé this week notified all branch managers that beginning with the publication of "Kidder & Ko," a new Bryant Washburn comedy, improved photographic sets for lobby display will be offered exhibitors. The new sets to be sent out with Pathe feature releases following "Kidder & Ko" will comprise eight photographs and a title card and will be sold at each. Each set will have an exclusive border design and will be printed in a distinctive color. "Kidder & Ko" publication date is June 16th.

Universal Two Reelers

President Carl Laemmle, of Universal, in answer to numerous requests received from exhibitors, it is said, to make two-reel subjects that may be exploited and advertised in the same manner as five-reel features, will on June 10th begin to distribute weekly two-reel western dramas that will be chockful of thrills, according to the company.

Too Dull; No Films
Workmen Desert
Industrial Centres

Washington, D. C.—Lack of motion pictures is declared to be the primary reason for the desertion of thousands of workmen, who find their lives at big industrial centers too dull without them, according to Government officials, who are seeking to have motion picture men build theatres in the recently created, so-called Government cities. It is feared that unless some such action is taken the places will actually be deserted and unable to operate.

Two of these centers are in Maryland, and workmen there therefore brought home to Government officials. At Magnolia, huge barracks have been built to house 5,000 workers at the Edgewood arsenal, and at Aberdeen, where a great proving ground is located, a city is fast taking form. Despite the attractive wages, however, the men have refused to live in these isolated towns, which afford no means of relaxation, and as a result some of the strangest stampedes have come to the attention of official Washington.

In one of these mad rushes for the bright lights of the "movies," about 3,000 men disappeared. In a few days from construction work under way at Charles-town, W. Va., it is said.

Fifteen States Sold
For Pioneer Feature
"The Still Alarm"

With fifteen states already disposed of, indications are that the balance of territory for "The Still Alarm," being marketed by the Pioneer Film Corporation, will soon be disposed of.

Last week the Special Features Co., of Tennessee, purchased the rights for Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and South Carolina, and in addition to this, J. B. Upton, D. C., obtained the right for Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and North Carolina.

Printed sales recorded by the Pioneer Film Corporation include Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana to the Exhibitors' Film Exchange of Seattle, and Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and New Mexico to the Swanlon-Nolan Supply Company of Denver.

In addition to the sales reported the entire European rights to the production have been secured by the Export and Import Film Company. Nathan Hirsch of the company states that he is in a position to make prices for other buyers which will net them a profit as well as exhibitors.

War Films Please

Sol Lesser reports, due to the combined cooperation of the Motion Picture Men of California, wonderful progress is the booking of the United States Official War Pictures in the West has been made.

There are twenty-six one-reel productions, showing the life and training in every branch of Uncle Sam's service. These pictures, it is said, are lot of "pep," and exhibitors are expressing great satisfaction as to their qualifications as live, breezy fillers.
Two Film Theatres Destroyed by Fire
When Organ Motors Prove Defective

Loss Reaches $150,000 Partly Covered by Insurance—Owner Of One Will Not Rebuild

Fires believed to have been due to defective organ motors destroyed the Columbia Theatre of Erie, Pa., and the Clifford Theatre in Urbana, Ohio, last week entailing a loss of approximately $150,000, only part of which was covered by insurance.

For a short time following the fire in the Clifford Theatre it was believed to have been caused by a monopoly of pro-Germans. This belief was strengthened by the fact that the theatre was soon to have shown a picture which is a strong indictment of the Kaiser and that the local Red Cross chapter, occupying quarters on the second floor of the theatre building, had just received a large consignment of supplies.

Will Not Rebuild

The fire was discovered about 3 o'clock in the morning and gained such rapid headway that for a time adjoining buildings were threatened. The theatre was erected in 1907 by Billy S. Clifford and was one of the city's most valuable buildings in the city on account of its being open at all times to public gatherings. Mr. Clifford, who estimates his loss at $75,000, does not contemplate rebuilding at least for the present.

Interior of the Columbia Theatre which is located in West Eighth street, Erie, Pa., was wrecked by an early morning fire with a loss of $85,000. Insurance in the amount of $50,000 is carried on the Clifford Theatre building. The stage, boxes and seats were destroyed and musical instruments and a music library were burned. Due to the smoke given off by the fire decorations in the theatre were ruined and the playhouse will have to be completely redecorated. The large pipe organ, which had an added cost of a cost of $9,000, was completely destroyed. It is said that this could not be replaced now for less than $25,000.

A. Q. Potter, owner of the Majestic Theatre, said that he was a scenario writer and that he was a scenario writer and that he secured from $70 to $100 from each of the young women who were about to make them movie stars. It is charged that he represented to them that he was a scenario writer and that they were going to become scenario writers.

Scenario Writer Held
For Promises to Girls

Kansas City, Mo.—A complaint to Shannon C. Douglass Jr., assistant prosecuting attorney has resulted in the arrest of Edwin Myers, 34 years old, of 913 Holmes street, who was accused of having promised to twice young women that he would make them into movie stars. It is charged that he represented to them that he was a scenario writer and that he secured from $70 to $100 from each of the young women under promise to star them in his production. It is also charged that he failed to deliver anything from a number of the women to teach them to become scenario writers.

When questioned by the prosecuting attorney he declined to talk. He was sent to the police station, where his investigation

Would Close Theatre

Santa Ana, Cal.—The Santa Ana W. C. T. U. has filed a request with the Board of City Trustees asking that the license of the Hippodrome Theatre be rescinded if it carries out its intention of having vaudeville shows Sunday evenings. The communication says that vaudeville is not educational nor inspiring. The communication of the W. C. T. U. was referred to a committee for a report.

San Antonio, Texas—Applications for the appointment of a receiver for the Empire and Princess Theaters in order to arrive at an accounting which has been filed in the Seventy-Third District Court by T. Apostolene and A. Nicholson W. J. Lyle.

In their petition, plaintiffs allege that they, W. J. Lyle, William Epstein and Walter McCombs Jr., entered into a partnership agreement, May 10, 1916. The purpose of this agreement was to operate the Royal, Princess, Empire and Strand Theaters. The lease of the Princess Theatre was in the name of Lyle, but owned by all jointly.

Of the proceeds of the said Princess Theatre, Epstein and McCombs were to receive a half share while the other half was to go to plaintiffs and defendants. Under the terms of the partnership, Lyle was to make an accounting every three months, it is alleged. Further, it is alleged, Lyle has failed to make this accounting and has ousted plaintiffs from the enjoyment of the lease and money from the proceeds of the Princess Theatre.

That such an accounting might be made a receivership is asked.

"Marriage" Is Second
Frank A. Keeney Film

The story of "Marriage," Guy Bolton's first contribution to the screen, is said to be a very dramatic and appealing story. The picture is the second production of the Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation and is now complete except for the titles. The story deals with a phase of society which is all too common in this age of "keeping up appearances." A woman of fine morality is lured into cheating at cards through her inability to make ends meet. She also escapes narrowly a greater sin. Without attempting to be in any way didactic, it is said, the picture conveys a powerful moral lesson.

Mr. Sherman has engaged the Willis and Ingersoll studio in Hollywood for the picturization of the interior scenes of Dustin Farnum's great feature, "The Light of the Western Stars." The largest western dance hall set ever seen upon the motion picture screen is being built especially for this production, it is said, under the supervision of the director, Charles Swickard.

Screen Veteran Dies

Russell Bassett, well-known screen actor, died last Wednesday, at his home in New York City, from heart disease. In his sixty-four years on the stage and before the camera he had been the friend and associate of practically every big star from the days of Joseph Jefferson to those of Mary Pickford. During the past ten years he had been appearing before the camera, chiefly in Paramount and Artcraft pictures. His last screen work was with Madame Cavallieri in "Love's Conquest," as yet not published. He was seventy-two years old.

Five World Pictures Scheduled
For Distribution During Month July

Five World pictures are scheduled for the month of July in which Barbara Castleton, Madge Evans, Kitty Gordon, Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge are starred. The pictures have been produced under the direction of some of the foremost directors, and extraordinary care, it is said, has been exercised to produce program features which would bear favorable comparison with specials sold on the open market.

Miss Barbara Castleton, in "The Heart of a Girl," is scheduled for July 1. John G. Adolfi, producer of the third Academy award-winning "Mammy," handled the direction of this picture. Irving Cummings is in charge of the direction of "The World of Mary Garden," and the cast comprises Kate Lester, Grace Stevens, Florence Coventry, Clay Clement, John Tansley, W. T. Carleton, Anthony Merle and several others in the supporting cast.

The second production to be published on July 8 is "Neighbors," featuring Madge Evans, the child star and Johnny Hines, who makes his bow as a World star in this picture. Frank Crane, who staged "Thais" for Mary Garden, was responsible for the direction. Violet Palmer, Maxine Elliott Hicks, Herbert Pattee, Katherine Johnson, Frank Beamish, Anthony Merle and several others form the supporting cast.

Kitty Gordon appears in the third July picture on July 15 in "Tinsel." Oscar Apfel directed the picture. The cast assisting Miss Gordon is almost entirely composed of principals, namely Miss Muriel Ostriche, Frank Mayo, Anthony Merle, Bradley Barker, Grace Edwards, Jerry Vann.

Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greely make their joint appearance in "The Golden Wall" on July 23, which was produced under the direction of Del Henderson. Besides Mr. Blackwell and Miss Greely, who make their first appearance in the picture, namely Madge Evans and Johnny Hines, George MacQuarrie, Jack Drumier, Kate Lester, Wmfrid Leighton, Florence Coventry and Louise Rigny also assist. On July 29 Jane Elvidge in "The Juke," is to be published, completing the five July productions of World Pictures. Travers Vale was in charge of the work of production. John Bowers plays, as usual, opposite Miss Elvidge and among the large cast supporting the star are Albert Hart, George MacQuarrie, Marguerite Gale, Marie Pagano, George Morgan, Doré Davison and Henrietta Simpson.

Edna Goodrich in "The Gadabout"
First of New Series for Mutual

Edna Goodrich has begun work on "The Gadabout," the first of a new series of productions to be published through the exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation.

The pictures are to be made at the studios of the Biograph Company in New York. David Powell, celebrated among leading men in screen drama, has been specially engaged to support Miss Goodrich in "The Gadabout." It is under the direction of Burton King, whose screen career covers a series of successful productions, including "The Public Defenders," "The Flower of Faith," and "A Soul of a Magdalen." The Goodrich pictures, it is announced, will be issued at intervals beginning August 5, following "Impossable Susan," in the Mutual schedule.

"The Gadabout" is a society tale, laid in New York, with some highlight splashes of color and lively action, it is said. It is the story of a society-mad lady who finds other things and an opportunity for playing a bigger game for a bigger stake. Maibeile Heikes Justice wrote the story for the screen play.

Finley in Blue Ridge Drama

"The Man From Nowhere," a Blue Ridge drama, featuring Ned Finley and Marion Henry, is the fifth Ned Finley production for General Film. It is said to present the popular player in one of the most appealing dramatic roles that he has ever played.

Ned Finley plays the role of "Judd Lindsay," the man from nowhere, who witnesses a murderous attack upon a new mill hand by the foreman and one of his helpers. As a result he becomes the central figure in a fast moving drama which revolves around the attempts of the foreman to remove the lone witness to the crime.

Tom Mix and Lee Kiddie Figure in Fox Activities in East and West

Two productions, one a special feature, the other a Standard Picture, were finished last week at William Fox's Western studios. Tom Mix completed "Ace High" under the direction of Lynn Reynolds. This is the story which is said to provide the daredevil star with more opportunity to display his many talents in public than any of his previous vehicles.

The Standard Picture that was completed was made under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards and will be issued in June with the title, "Under the Yoke." George Scarborough wrote the story and Burt Johnson the scenario. The drama tells of a romantic and melodramatic episode in the Philippines.

Excellent progress is also reported from the Coast on "Riders of the Purple Sage," which Frank Lloyd is directing and in which William Farnum is starred. It is expected that this production will be completely photographed with a fortnight.

Miss Brockwell in New Play

"The Bird of Prey," in which Gladys Brockwell has stellar honors, will undoubtedly be finished at Hollywood by Director Edward J. LeSaint in another week or ten days, it is announced.

In the East, five Fox companies are busily engaged. Jane and Katherine Lee, the "Baby Grand" stalwart, are farther advanced on their vehicle than the other four. Jane and Katherine are again under the direction of Kenean Buel. No titles have yet been selected for this comedy-drama.

June Caprice is doing interiors on "Miss Innocence," the startling adventures of a beautiful girl in modern Bohemia. Harry Millarde is staging the play from a story by Hazel Lorker. Virginia Pearson is also on another Fox production, a dramatic subject that Edmund Lawrence is screening. George Scarborough was the author.

George Walsh is well under way in a vehicle with which Burton King is handling his first screen production, "The Juke." Miss Fox. The picture bears the tentative title of "The Sleepwalker." Peggy Hyland, under, Carl Harbaugh's direction for the first time, is busy at Fort Lee on a film to be called "Other Men's Daughters." Herbert Burrell again appears as Valda Quinn, Elizabeth Garrison, Riley Hatch, Eric Mayne, Frank Goldsmith and Robert Middlemass.

"The One Woman" by Thomas Dixon Jr.
Nearing Completion at Hollywood

Thomas Dixon, Jr., author of "The Birth of a Nation," promises another photo-dramatic achievement quite equal to the former in dramatic power, if less spectacular in theme, when "The One Woman" is presented upon the screen.

This production is now in the making at the Brumont Studholme, Hollywood, California, under the direction of Reginald Barker.

When the story appeared in book form, it created an exceptional interest, and was looked upon as a strong preachment against socialistic ideas. The story deals with Ruth, a young girl, sought in marriage by two men—Morris King, her guardian, and the Rev. Frank Gordon, socialistic preacher. King represents the old solid order of society, with the home as its foundation; Gordon, the new fangled, tinsel and twaddle of socialistic dreams. In spite of King's desperate pleadings and Mark Overman's warnings, she dares the dangers of socialism with Gordon.

King later becomes governor of his state. Gordon becomes the idol of a great church. He is besieged by beautiful women and neglects his wife and children. Kate Ransom overeps him from his moorings, and he separates from his wife, and marries Kate, by a new ceremony of "Announcement." Overman refuses to meet the bride until the last moment, and then falls madly in love with her. King renews his suit with Ruth, but she is still in love with Gordon. Kate lures Overman on, despite Ruth's warning that she is preparing for a desperate tragedy between the two men. Kate scorns her warning. Gordon is appointed Governor by the State Socialists.

The two men meet and a desperate struggle follows, in which Gordon finally kills his rival.

A hunted refugee, he goes to Ruth's home for hiding. He is well received, and the girl falls madly in love with him. They flee with Gov. King for his pardon. The pardon is granted and Gordon goes to the governor's rooms, thanks him for his clemency and turns to take Ruth from the room. To his surprise, she turns from him and kisses the hand of the governor.

World Pictures Have Determined to Seek Out New Talent for Their Productions

World Pictures have determined to seek out new talent for their productions and for this purpose have set aside one afternoon a week to try out applicants and make final selections. The applicants are tried out by the various directors to test their quickness of perception and skill in depicting emotions and grasp the essentials of a scene. Then they are given a test. In other words, the directors put them through their paces before the camera, so as to determine whether or not they register well.

Recently at one of these tryouts, thirty-five young ladies were given a trial. Of the thirty-five, six developed enough ability to warrant screen test and of the six, two were hired for work in new pictures.

Carey Wilson Will Aid Red Cross Drive

Carey Wilson, sales manager of the First National Exchange, Inc., has been appointed a member of the committee to arrange the theatrical benefits that will be a prominent feature of the Red Cross drive scheduled to open shortly in New York. Mr. Wilson was endorsed for this position by the New York Exchange Managers' Association, of which he is a charter member.

Ten More Broncho Billy Dramas Ready for Distribution by Kleine

The first set of Broncho Billy dramas which began March 1 with "Broncho Billy's Leap" and ended with "Broncho Billy's Last Deed," on May 3, are havign such unusual run, it is said, that it was decided to issue the second block beginning with May 10 and running to July 12.

These are all western dramas of the hills and plains and are fifteen minutes in length. New paper and new prints with exceptional photography by Essanay's new process add much to the pictures. A complete line of advertising material is being issued on the pictures. Special mailing cards in three colors also are being sent out to all exhibitors announcing the plays.

The Kleine exchanges, through which the pictures are being distributed, announce that already there have been an unusually large number of bookings for the second set and that there is a great demand among exhibitors for western dramas.

It is announced that the majority of exhibitors are booking the entire block, planning to run one each on a certain night and advertising to this effect.

Theda Bara in "Message of Lilies"

Theda Bara, it is announced from the William Fox offices, began work today at the Fox studios in Hollywood, Col., on new Theda Bara production, after a rest of a fortnight following the completion of "Under the Yoke."

The Message of the Lilies" is the tentative title of the picture. The story was written by Betta Brueel and the scenario by E. Lloyd Sheldon. J. Gordon Edwards is the rector of the present picture, this being the twenty-seventh has done since joining the Fox forces.

New Library Publications

The idea of introducing the subject of motion pictures into the field of education as a means of developing interest in photography and building up a future body of broadminded public opinion regarding films has received some attention from educational and industrial papers, and publications in the course of the last year. The latest illustration is that in the department of The Bookman devoted to the summarization of its contents as means of interesting schools, colleges and clubs in their educational and informational possibilities, in the May issue. It is an article on "Democracy and the Movies," and summarizes the subject as follows: "Follow the author's ideas on: the picture as a primitive and universal language; the yellow newspaper, the predecessor of the movie; its history and social value; a common language for a national message; the Hindu movie; the political possibilities of the screen; and its share in war work; its democratic power in spite of defects."

The article was written by an officer of the Board of Review of Motion Pictures. Some months ago the Journal of Education published an article describing how the subject of motion pictures had been handled in a school. This article was reprinted by the Library Journal, which also considered it of interest to educators and bookmen.

Bread" Title of Universal Feature

"Bread" is the tentative title of Mary MacLaren's latest Universal special feature production, work on which has begun at Universal City under the direction of Ida May Park.

Evelyn Campbell, who wrote the story, has shown what tremendous effect on humanity may be brought about through such a simple atom as a loaf of bread. Kenneth Harlan and Edward Cecil will have the principal roles. "Bread" is the first of a series of pictures that have been planned for Universal.

Small Theatres Book Serial

The two smallest-motion picture theatres in the United States have hooked "The Eagle's Eye." The theatres have a combined seating capacity of but 475 and the combined population of the two towns in which they are situated is but 700. Yet E. Whitaker, the manager and proprietor of both, says that he is satisfied he will make money with the serial because of the interest which has been evidenced in it. The theatres are the opera house at Andes, N. Y., and the opera house at Shaftertown, N. Y. The first has a seating capacity of 175. The population of Andes is 450. Shaftertown has a population of but 230, while Gladys Fox and Louis Morrison also have important parts.

Ebon Comedy Burlesques Flat Life

"The Janitor," another of the new series of Ebony comedies to be published by General Film Company, presents the comedy of a Negro player in one of the most laughable stories they have screened, it is said. New talent has been added to the company and much attention has been given to the development of the plot, which is said to present a continuing burlesque of flat life off South State street in Chicago, where the picture was filmed.

Margarita Fisher in "A Square Deal"

There are said to be some interesting scenes from New York's Bohemia in "A Square Deal," the forthcoming Mutual production starring Margarita Fisher, which is scheduled for first run theatres June 10.

Miss Fisher plays the role of a country girl who goes to the city on a career, becomes a "serious thinker," marries a practical and home-loving young lawyer and nearly loses him when she makes their apartment the headquarters of long-haired men and short-haired women.

Ella Hall in "Nobody's Bride"

Ella Hall's latest Bluebird picture has been completed under the title of "Nobody's Bride." It is from a story by Evelyn Campbell, recently published in All Story Magazine, and was reprinted to the screen by Anthony W. Goldwey.

Harry Pollard and Ted Browning directed the production. The support cast includes Priscilla Dean, Eddie Ring, Sutherland, Andrew Robson, Edward Hobson and others.

You've heard of Barnum, said to be the greatest—the most successful showman that ever lived. But, have you ever stopped to think why he was such a great success.

It was because he had such a natural intuition to show what took best with the people. In other words he did not see his attractions through his own eye, but through the eyes of the public.

There is no better criterion for movie picture exhibitors than P. T. Barnum. Use him as a guide, so far as suiting the public is concerned, if you would enhance the popularity of your theatre and make money.

Negro wit and humor has ever been a favorite form of entertainment. It always meets with popular approval. No matter what may be said to the contrary, this is an established fact.

The inimicable humor of the negro, which has made famous some of the greatest comedians of the times, is successfully translated on the screen by Ebony Comedies. These comedies bring to the movie fans one of their most favorite forms of entertainment. They depict negro antics which everybody always enjoys.

Barnum would book Ebony Comedies if he were the owner of a theatre in your locality today because of his natural intuition to know these things. That should be reason enough for you to do the same.

The authoritative critics of the important trade newspapers are more enthusiastic about Mae Marsh in "All Woman" than they have ever been about any Goldwyn Picture, including "Polly of the Circus," "The Cinderella Man," and "Thais." Exhibitors everywhere will recognize the earmarks of a sure screen winner in these whole hearted criticisms:

MOVING PICTURE WORLD:
Hanford C. Judson: There is a pull at the heart strings in Mae Marsh's characterization in "All Woman." The humanness of this story and the character that Mae Marsh pictures for us makes the offering valuable. It has a specially pleasing pull at the sympathetic emotions of spectators.

EXHIBITORS' TRADE REVIEW:
George T. Pardy: Mae Marsh from the beginning to end carries insistent and sympathetic appeal. "All Woman" is a valuable picture.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS:
P. S. Harrison: This is about the best feature Mae Marsh has ever been in. It will please everybody. The story is full of human touches that appeal to the emotions.

N. Y. TELEGRAPH:
Helen Pollock: "All Woman" is the type of story that has a general appeal. It is true to life and thoroughly human.

VARIETY:
Ibee: Goldwyn has turned out an excellent production with Mae Marsh in "All Woman." It is as interesting as if presented in printed form which appears to be a capital test of its worth. Hobart Henley, as the director, has had considerable to do with the good result obtained.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS:
Joseph L. Kelley: This Goldwyn offering is a smashing good picture a little ahead of anything Mae Marsh has done for Goldwyn.

Just a Few Reports

Here are straight, unbiased, uninfluenced reports from exhibitors in all parts of the country who are showing Triangle pictures.

In every case the exhibitor obtained his pictures at an attractive rental price. Triangle rentals are based, of course, on the cost of production. And production costs on Triangle pictures are much lower than those of other producers who have not yet arrived at the high state of efficiency and economy which Triangle management has set.

Hand in hand with efficiency goes a very high artistic standard. Every Triangle exhibitor finds this standard one that obtains not only present business but assures sustained and increased patronage.

Triangle has no bargains to offer—but in place an excellent business proposition to every exhibitor who believes that he is showing pictures to make a creditable profit commensurate with his investment and showmanship.

It is a delight to deal with Triangle exchanges. The prompt, courteous, efficient service, the gentlemanly conduct of ambitious employes, the fair treatment, excellent co-operation and splendid pictures please and delight every motion picture exhibitor.

Many new exhibitors are visiting Triangle exchanges to arrange for summer service. The warm weather is to be anticipated by better pictures and even better service.

Funkhouser’s Defense

REFORMERS, real and pseudo, of Chicago are firmly convinced that the dire influence of film trade conspirators is behind the movement to dissociate Major Funkhouser from his job. No argument will discourage their belief that a carefully laid plot is responsible for the suspension of the odious censor and second deputy superintendent of police.

The simple fact of the matter is that the major, content with the defenses he has built up, has gone on in his characteristic autocratic manner not only in matters pertaining to film censorship but also in every other activity with which he has been concerned. Intrenched behind the battlements of the so-called “reform elements” he seems to have proceeded on the basis that he was just about the biggest thing in the city government. The result has been that his immediate superiors have been annoyed to the point of disgust.

It is not at all improbable that Funkhouser will retain his position. He will be helped in this by the unscrupulous charge that he is being opposed by film interests which desire to exhibit objectionable pictures in the city of Chicago—a charge that is obviously a lie and an insult to the business. The reformers with which he has surrounded himself are generally of small intelligence but they are loud-spoken to such an extent that they will convey the impression that the support is very numerous.

On the discharge of his ordinary police duties Funkhouser may be found guilty and thrown out. But as he will endeavor to answer the charges on the basis of his censorship work he may be able to retain his position because the system being utterly wrong itself even a man of greater qualification than Funkhouser could not make a satisfactory record in the impossible job of one-man censor.

End Exorbitant Salaries

WITH great frequency the report appears that producers are to come together in an agreement to place a reasonable limit upon the salaries paid to all players, excepting only those celebrities whose services are in great demand.

This is a protective measure that must come, and when producers drop, if only for a time, the jealousies of the moment, it can easily be brought about. There are certain famous players whose services probably always will be obtained by this highest bidder, but the reputations of these players are genuine assets and contracts of this kind come under an entirely different classification.

For several years now there has been a gross waste of money by producers in the payment of excessive salaries and it has been an expenditure that the business cannot afford. Early profits with the day of reckoning far away allowed producers to sign players on exorbitant terms and the excessive burden of such salaries has been carried on down through the industry, with every branch compelled to meet its share. A great deal of the evil of excessive rentals was predicated alone on the fact of the exorbitant star’s salary charge against the picture and in this way the exhibitor was made a party to the producer’s folly.

Curbing of this evil is a logical and reasonable development which will come as more of the froth and unsteadiness of the business is blown away and the various businesses that go to make up the industry become fixed upon the bed-rock of sound, conservative management.

War Stuff of Right Kind

EXHIBITORS should realize that the battle in France, daring up during the past week into another titanic struggle, is the dominant theme in the minds of the people. Space which is being devoted to it by the newspapers indicates the tremendous public interest.

These facts carry to exhibitors a two-fold suggestion. The first is to avoid war stuff of the morbid sort—that which carries over the heart-pangs and the disaster of war. And the second is to seek out war stuff of a certain kind, those pictures which present the inspiring phases of the struggle. The news weeklies which are carefully scrutinized by the government are of greatest importance—views of American troops in France and elsewhere, their marchings and other activities are in the greatest demand. They form nicely the pictorial side to the newspaper articles which the public is devouring. Since the broadening of America's military activities the news weekly has leaped forward in popularity and this will continue throughout the war. Exhibitors realizing this should give the pictorial a presentation equal to the feature of the program.

What About Boston?

The Boston Convention—that of the M. P. E. L.—approaches. Despite the great need of a gathering of exhibitors for a discussion of the many vital problems that are confronting the theatreman the impending convention is attracting less attention among the rank and file of the exhibitors than any of its predecessors.

The obvious reason is that the vast majority of exhibitors who have come to previous league meetings have gone away realizing they have seen nothing and heard nothing that would help them in the operation of their theatres—the time having been spent in petty political squabbling of interest seriously only a handful of exhibitors.

One real convention, concerned chiefly with a consideration of the exhibitor's problems and solutions for them, would have a tremendous effect toward popularizing future conventions.

The Summer Months

The Summer months mean for a great many exhibitors increased competition. The Summer parks, bathing beaches and other forms of outdoor amusement all tend to cut down the exhibitor's patronage. There probably are many ways of meeting this situation. One is to sit back idly and wait for Fall; the other is now and immediately to inaugurate a comprehensive advertising campaign on the Summer attractions of your theatre. The latter is a certain way of making the Summer season a successful one.

The Theatres Plan to Observe Flag Day

The celebration of Flag Day, June 14, is being promoted by the National Security League throughout the country. Through the league’s efforts, the day will be observed in motion picture theatres from coast to coast by the singing of “The Star Spangled Banner” and at least one of the popular war songs.

Leading the motion picture industry and the proprietors of film theatres, large and small, have expressed their hearty support in organizing this simple but effective celebration of Flag Day. Promises of co-operation have been received from all parts of the country by Miss Etta V. Leighton, civic secretary of the National Security League.

In New York will take the lead in the celebration, it having been in this State that Flag Day was first generally observed in response to a resolution of the Governor.

Besides Flower in 1894, S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto and Rivoli theatres, New York, it is expected that the plan will be adopted by a large number of the theatres.

Employers Liability Bill Introduced in Congress

Washington, D. C.—Manufacturers of cameras, films and photographic supplies of all kinds in the District of Columbia are to be required to provide compensation for the injury or death of their employees, under the terms of a bill which has been introduced into the House of Representatives by Congressman Crosser, of Ohio.

The measure is similar to several that have previously been put before congress, but this bill, it is said, provides for an industrial commission of three persons, to administer the law, and the furnishing of compensation by employers, according to classes listed in the bill.

MacHenry of Herald Joins National Army

J. S. MacHenry, special representative of the Exhibitors Herald, left for Jefferson Barracks, Mo., on Saturday, June 1, as a member of the National Army. Mr. MacHenry is the fourth member of the staff of the Exhibitors Herald to serve in the army.

Mr. MacHenry was associated with the advertising department of the Exhibitors Herald since the publication was founded in June, 1915. He has a wide acquaintance with the motion picture trade and is one of the most popular representatives in the field. In his military career he will have the best wishes of hundreds of his friends throughout the trade.

Internal Dissention Threatens Allied Amusements Association

Steam roller tactics, it is claimed, an ill-concealed desire of a certain faction to gain control of the destinies of the Allied Amusements Association, coupled with an alleged attempt to elect officers at a meeting called for special discussion of the censorship problem, may lead to the dishandling of the body, it was learned this week.

The organization was formed some months ago in order to combat unreasonable demands of certain labor organizations in Chicago. It numbered among its members exhibitors, owners of the so called legitimate theatres and representatives of the local film exchanges.

Before permanent organization of the association had been made—it has not been less than 100,000 worth to $30,000, with which it was pledged to which was secured to defend the rights of those interested in the movement. Attorney Leighton and another a short after an injunction was obtained which restrained members of the motion picture operators union from interfering with the conduct of motion picture theatres in any way.

Exchanges’ Pledge Unpaid

The theatre owners made good on their end of the pledges and considerably in excess of $10,000 was paid into the treasury, it is said. Repeated requests of the exchanges to meet their obligations amounting to $10,000, it was learned, met with refusals. Their standing at the present time in the association is not clear. A number claim they have been voted out.

An attorney's fees amounting to $7,500 was the source of considerable discussion but was finally passed by the association at a recent meeting. A number of other bills for various amounts is said, aroused considerable antagonism among a number of the exhibitors.

When a meeting was called last Friday night for the purpose of discussing the censorship proposition and an attempt was made to proceed with the permanent organization of the association and election of officers, an open breach occurred.

Friedman Talks Censorship

Attorney Friedman who, with Attorney Schwartz, is representing the film exchanges in their attempt to obtain a more equitable form of censorship for Chicago, made a short talk to those present in which he urged exhibitors to see the aldermen of their wards in an effort to have them support the Maypole ordinance.

As Mr. Friedman left the room Nathan Ascher placed a motion before the house to proceed with permanent organization.

Mr. Hamburger seconded the motion.

Joseph H. Jacobson, who was presiding as temporary chairman, to the laws governing corporations not for profit. He declared that inasmuch as the meeting had been called for the discussion of censorship no other business could be transacted legally. An extensive debate followed.

Schindler's Remarks Criticized

Robert Levy and Ludwig Schindler both urged that the body proceed to permanent organization and the election of officers, the latter deploring the fact that everyone present knew of the intention to carry out this arrangement.

Mr. Hamburger was interrupted in the midst of his remarks by more than a dozen of those present jumping to their feet and denying that they had any knowledge along the line indicated by the speaker. Leighton asked for a ruling from the chair. Mr. Jacobson voiced the belief that such election would be illegal.

Mr. Hamburger then astounded many of those present by appealing from the decision of the chair. Mr. Jacobson yielded his place to Sam Katz but before a vote was taken on the question the attorney succeeded in convincing those back of the movement to elect officers that there would be no call for a meeting especially for that purpose.

Indigination Meeting Held

Monday of this week about forty exhibitors held a session in the Masonic Temple building at which a number of sensational charges were made against members of the organization. A plan of action was mapped out by those present and followed at the next meeting of the body. A number have signified their intention of withdrawing from the organization if any indication of polities manifests itself, and possible court action is hinted at in order to recover the money deposited with the treasurer.

Government Trade Body Files Charges Against Mastbaum Firm
Stanley Booking Corporation Alleged to Have Stifled and Suppressed Competition in Sale and Leasing of Films

Washington, D. C.—Charging various unfair methods of competition, the Federal Trade Commission has issued a complaint against the Stanley Booking Corporation, of Philadelphia, exhibitors and dealers in films, alleging that with the purpose, intent and effect of stifling and suppressing competition in the sale and leasing of motion picture films it has followed various practices not in conformity with the law, citing six specific charges.

The commission alleges that the corporation, by divers means and methods, caused contracts for the exhibition of films entered into by its competitors to be broken and canceled, which was designed to and did embarrass, harass, and hinder these competitors in the conduct of their business:

THAT the corporation procured films advertised for the distribution and exhibition by its competitors, and played them in advance of the dates advertised by these competitors, the displays occurring in theaters near those of such competitors and the price of admission being less than was advertised by the competitors;

THAT the corporation leased, sold, and made contracts for the leasing of films on the condition that the purchaser or lessee should not use or exhibit films dealt in by competitors of the Stanley Booking Corporation;

THAT, by threats and various methods of intimations, owners and operators of numerous moving picture theaters were compelled to pay the Stanley Booking Corporation ten per cent of the cost of films booked directly from producers;

THAT owners and operators of numerous moving picture theaters in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware were compelled to book films through the Stanley Booking Corporation through threats to cut off their supply of films;

THAT, by threats of withdrawal of its patronage and various methods of intimidation, the corporation compelled producers of films and exchanges handling films to cease supplying certain of its competitors.

The action taken by the Federal Trade Commission is believed to have been founded on information furnished that body by Andrew J. Callahan, personal representative of George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Callahan was in Philadelphia last February and at that time made a thorough investigation of the film situation in that city, at the close of which he notified the commission with the approval of Mr. Spoor that he had declared war on the Mastbaum interests and would fight them to a finish.

The late Stanley Mastbaum, head of the Mastbaum interests, was alive at the time Mr. Callahan made his investigation. He was characterized as "The King" by the investigator. George McCorkle, special investigating attorney of the Federal Trade Commission, it is said, made a stenographic report of all the information obtained by Mr. Callahan for the purpose of putting it before the government body as a basis for beginning action.

Mr. Fallet is now with the Second Battery, Light Artillery, stationed at Ontario, Canada.

Mr. Fallet appeared with much success with Kitty Gordon in World Pictures. Not only was Mr. Fallet gassed at Verdun, but was wounded in other battles and was given the Croix de Guerre for bravery under fire. He is but seventeen years old.

"War Brides" Banned By Maryland Court

Judge Duffy Decides Play Tends to Discourage Enlisting

Judge Duffy in the Baltimore City Court last week upheld the Maryland Censors by declaring disbarred from Maryland the Herbert Brenon photo-play, "War Brides," on the ground that it tends to discourage recruiting and to promote pacifism.

The decision is an important one as it is considered that the whole power of the board, the wide powers of the board. The case was also interesting, because it was the first to be tried, in part, in a motion picture theatre.

"War Brides" was passed by the Board of Censor in March, 1917, with a few eliminations, and it was shown at Ford's Opera House a week in that month. Shortly after the declaration of war by this country, however, this ruling was substituted, upon a second examination, by the board of censors, and it is now shown in that theatre.

This was after an opinion had been obtained from the Attorney General of Maryland that the pictures calculated to obstruct, discourage, and promote pacifism are detrimental to public morals. Motion picture men and lawyers manifested deep interest in the appeal, which was filed by S. H. Laueimer of Baltimore, representing Stern & Wolf of Philadelphia, counsel for Selznick & Co., owners of the picture.

Miss Kenyon succeeds E. V. Goerz, who left last week for South America, where he will look after the interests of a large American packing concern.
A. E. A. Ignores Boston July Meet;
To Hold Convention in Chicago

Frank J. Rembusch, National Secretary, Outlines
To Frederick H. Elliott Barriers in Way
Of Amalgamation

Unconditional refusal of the American Exhibitors Association to take any part in the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League to be held in Boston July 13 to 20 is contained in a letter from Frank J. Rembusch, national secretary of the A. E. A., addressed to Frederick H. Elliott, secretary of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Mr. Rembusch reiterates the intention of his organization to hold an annual convention in Chicago the latter part of August.

"There was some talk of holding both conventions of the two national exhibitor organizations at Boston but the A. E. A. has never received a communication or proposition of any character unless your letter is such and this was very indefinite and unofficial," a part of the letter reads.

Ochs a Stumbling Block

That Lee A. Ochs, national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League, is still the bane of contention is plainly evident in Mr. Rembusch’s letter. Conditions which led to the split in the old league in Chicago last summer and the formation of the new association were reviewed at length in the epistle.

"We cannot amalgamate as long as the organization is in the hands of Mr. Ochs," reads the letter in this regard. "Our organization is only a few months old but is growing very rapidly. We have in our membership those who first work to protect our industry. We are without any entangling alliances and desire to remain so. We have been to a great extent in organizing. Our work against the evils from without the industry on the censorship question and on constructive measures such as Sunday opening speak for themselves. We have nothing to gain to join Mr. Ochs and take a chance to lose much."

Accept Pettijohn Resignation

Mr. Rembusch also announced that General Manager C. C. Pettijohn, has again presented his resignation to the A. E. A., insisting that it be accepted because he has taken a position in another institution in the industry. The resignation has been accepted, according to the letter, but Mr. Pettijohn will remain with the association as general counsel.

In closing the writer voices the belief that it is better that there be two national exhibitors organizations. Exhibitors comprise by far the largest portion of the industry, he says, and it is not possible, not practical, and experience has shown that it is not good policy to have one man in control of the exhibitor’s activities.

"The Great Love"

Griffith’s Next Film

The first D. W. Griffith-Artercraf picture has been given the title of "The Great Love," and will be issued about the middle of July, it is said. This is the subject on which the famous producer has been engaged since his return from Europe, where some of the scenes were taken.

The theme of the picture is a story of the awakening of the social butterflies of England after the declaration of war, the loss of the young manhood in the early days of the struggle and the consequent marshalling of the nation’s forces in the gigantic struggle, in which all ranks were levelled and the aroused country worked with a unity of purpose.

United Adds Two Branch Offices to Central Division

United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., will add two more branch offices to its list this week, the company announces, located respectively in Cleveland and in Indianapolis. As a result of the additions, which will be made in the near future, the company will have in charge. Besides the cities mentioned, Mr. Bunn’s division will subsequently have branch-offices in Cincinnati and Milwaukee. C. W. Perry, travelling representative for United and formerly with Pathé, is temporarily taking charge in Cincinnati.

Very shortly a far-Western division will be formed, it is announced, with branches in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle and Butte. A Philadelphia branch will also be opened within a short time.

There have been several other changes recently made in the United sales-force. S. M. Spedon, formerly with Goldwyn, has been made manager for the Borough of Manhattan. Hoyt G. Morrow, until recently with the Dallas office of United, has been made manager of the New Orleans branch. Messrs. Mayberry, and Gregg have been added to the St. Louis force.

Harry McRae Webster, president and director general of the Harry McRae Webster Productions, Inc., has turned over to Chester Beecroft all rights to market the big seven-reel feature "Reclaimed," written by Richard Field Carroll and co-starring Mabel Julienne Scott and Niles Welch.

Select Acquires Marion Davies; Will Star in Six Productions

Julius Steger Directs First Production "Cecilia of the Pink Roses"—Film Booked by the Rivoli

Confirming earlier reports Select Pictures Corporation announces the acquisition to its ranks of beautiful Marion Davies.

Miss Davies has signed a contract with Select, calling for the production of six pictures in which she is to be starred during the first year. The first of these pictures is "Cecilia of the Pink Roses," a photoplay adapted from Katharine Haviland Taylor's popular novel of the same name.

This picture was produced under the direction of Julius Steger, who has taken full charge of the work of bringing Miss Davies' charming personality and lovely features to the screen in this, the first of her Select Series. Adroit director as he is, and thoroughly versed in all the lore of both speaking and shadow stage, Mr. Steger has accomplished wonders, it is said, in the screening of "Cecilia of the Pink Roses."

Big Publicity Campaign

A consistent publicity campaign on the picture has preceded the publication of "Cecilia of the Pink Roses," and has made the name of Miss Davies, already famous throughout the land as a stage beauty, known from coast to coast as a star of the screen.

This advertising and publicity, coupled with the reception given the picture at a private showing to an invited audience last week, resulted in the immediate booking of "Cecilia of the Pink Roses" for the week of June 2 by the Rivoli Theatre, New York, and its booking for simultaneous showing during the same week, starting June 3, in all of the Loew theatres in Greater New York.

This presentation of the picture over the Loew's circuit, at the same time that it is playing at the Rivoli, is said to be the first instance of such duplicate presentation in one of New York's big first-run houses, and in a chain of theatres blanketing all sections of the city during the same period.

Kansas Censors Pass Three More Goldwyn's

Three more Goldwyn Pictures have received the stamp of approval of the Kansas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations in their statewide campaign for better films as a part of their child welfare movement. These are "The Danger Game," starring Madge Kennedy; "The Face in the Dark," with Mae Marsh, and "Joan of Plattsburg," starring Mabel Normand. These, together with the seven other Goldwyn Pictures previously approved, are being shown throughout the state on the designated "Family Nights."

Goldwyn Establishes Service Bureau for Exhibitors' Benefit

Vice-President of Company Discusses New Scheme With Customers

Harold Bolster, a vice-president of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, is touring the Middle West to talk with Goldwyn's contract customers concerning the establishment by the company of an exhibitor service bureau said to be built upon a plan wide in scope and highly satisfactory.

Goldwyn has realized almost since its inception that scores, even hundreds, of very capable business men at the head of motion theatres in the United States are showmen neither by nature nor training, and that if motion pictures are to be profitably disposed of to the exhibitor, and through him to the public, that something unusual must be done to help the exhibitor sell what he has bought and paid his good money for.

It is Goldwyn's aim not only to sell its productions to the exhibitor, but to give him service by means of which he can turn these productions into box-office cash. It is likely that a service bureau man will be placed in each of the more important Middle Western Goldwyn exchanges. This man, a salesman trained in merchandising rather than a publicity man graduated from newspaper work, will work in direct co-operation with the theater manager. His time, his energy and his ideas will be at the command of the theatre owner or manager. He will, if desired, build advertising copy for the exhibitor as well as suggest and put into execution any special publicity "stunts" that the nature of the production makes desirable.

If the experiment proves successful in the first few exchanges Goldwyn will expand the idea and place a service man in every branch office in the country.

Montagu Love Recovers

Montagu Love, the World star, has fully recovered from his recent illness and has started work at the World studio in West Fort Lee, N. J., on a new production. This is a film version of the novel by Leroy Scott, "To Him That Hath." Oscar Apfel is directing. The scenario and continuity are by Wallace C. Clifton.

Delay Opening One Week

The Brooklyn Ice Palace, Bedford and Atlantic Avenues, did not open last Saturday night as a motion picture theatre, as previously announced. Instead, the house will open on June 8, it is said. According to a statement made by O'Malley, brothers, proprietors, and managers, the postponement was due to a delay in the shipment of some of the materials.
Tourneur Declares "Star System Of Today Fast Proving Its Fallacy"

Maurice Tourneur, who has just launched his own producing organization, is a firm believer in the big opportunities now offered the independent film maker.

"The star system of today is fast proving its fallacy," declares Mr. Tourneur. "Consider the problem of the producer with a chain of stars. He must manufacture films regularly, using these stars at systematic intervals, in order to succeed. It is natural that the stars are allotted certain roles to which they have shown themselves fitted. From two and three to twenty stars must be fitted and there is no time to study a players' possibilities.

"Thus these stars come to get stereotyped stories, providing them with essentially the same characters. This is dangerous from many angles. Except in rare instances, film fans tend to lose interest in stars who keep on playing upon the same string. Screen patrons come to be familiar with the stories and they know just what is likely to happen in their working out, so that all novelty is gone. All this spells the ultimate eclipse of the star in question."

Star System Declining

"Today the star has no substantial hold upon his or her following. A series of three bad pictures can send a star sliding downward rapidly, while one or two unusual vehicles will pull a star back into popularity. This has been demonstrated a dozen times this year. It all goes to show the insecurity, steadily growing, of the star system.

"Don't think that the stars do not realize all this themselves. Note how they change leading men and leading women with each production, hoping to gain some novelty in this fashion.

"The independent producer, on the other hand, can afford to select the star to fit his photodrama or to produce his film play as he feels it should be produced. He can put time, undivided attention and care into his efforts as against the machine-made productions of the star system."

Importance of Director

Mr. Tourneur, in speaking of the steadily advancing prominence of the director, says: "The charge is made that to substitute the prominence of the director in place of the player is but to shift stars and is, therefore, no cure for the star system evil. This is obviously not true. The director is the man who paints the dramatic picture. Give him a bigger canvas and recognition and he will do bigger things. But make him paint around the limitations of a certain player and you curb him, stunt his growth and prevent his development.

"Let us not forget that the director and the scenario writer must be the big factors of the photoplay's future," says Mr. Tourneur.

Buffalo High School Sees "Jack and Beanstalk"

So impressed was Principal J. D. Babst, of the South Park High School in Buffalo, with the educational as well as the entertainment value of "Jack and the Beanstalk" when he saw the William Fox photo-spectacle recently at the Strand Theatre in that city, that he immediately booked the production for the institution of which he is the head.

The showing, he announced, would be open to the students of the school and their friends. The result was the sale of more than 3,000 tickets. It is said that at assembly hall of the South Park school, where the picture was projected, was so crowded that Mr. Babst at once got into communication with the Fox office and requested that a repeat booking date be kept in reserve for him.

Famous Novelist Added to Staff Of New Company
Louis Joseph Vance Joins Ince, Sawyer and Lubin

Louis Joseph Vance, famous American novelist, has been added to the personnel of the new company formed by Ralph Ince, Arthur Sawyer and Herbert Lubin to produce “Ralph Ince Attractions,” according to an announcement made this week by Mr. Sawyer.

As a result of contract closed between Mr. Vance and the Ince-Sawyer-Lubin combination, the writer will play a prominent part in the preparation, construction, titling and supervision of all of the special vehicles to be released under the name of “Ralph Ince Film Attractions”.

“Production Analyst” Title

A special executive capacity has been created for Mr. Vance whereby he will not only furnish several original stories, but will also occupy the position of production analyst. In his latter capacity, the author of the Saturday Evening Post serial success, “False Faces,” and innumerable other novels, will bring all his constructive knowledge of story-writing and the drama to bear on each “Ralph Ince Film Attraction” before it is placed in production.

Inasmuch as Mr. Vance is a past-master in the art of injecting “punch” and melodramatic “thrills” into situations, the executives of the newly formed Ince-Sawyer-Lubin organization feel that the success of their initial production will be insured by acquisition of this writer.

First Production Considered

Mr. Vance has held numerous conferences with Ralph Ince and Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin regarding the details of the first special feature to be produced.

In addition to “The Lone Wolf,” the picturized version of which has scored an unusual success and which is also responsible for such notable novels as “The Brass Bowl,” “The Black Bag,” “Secret Kingdom,” “Destroying Angel,” “The Outsider,” and “Terence O’Rourke.”

Leonce Perret Forms Own Film Company; Takes Pathé Studio

Leonce Perret, creator and producer of “Lest We Forget,” “The Million Dollar Dollies,” and other features of note, announces the organization of his own producing concern.

The New York Pathé studios have been taken over by Mr. Perret and there will be no change in the personnel. It has been announced that the title to the first Perret production would be “America First.” Mr. Perret is of the opinion that such a title smacks to much of “Deutschland Uber Alles,” and has, therefore, decided to change the title to one that will more appropriately fit his picture.

The cast chosen for the story includes Dolores Cassinelli, former Essanay star, E. K. Lincoln, Emmett C. King, Ethel Winthrop and several others.

Just how the Perret productions will be distributed has not been definitely determined. It is said, however, that negotiations are under way with some of the larger distributing companies, the result of which will be announced later.

An extensive advertising and publicity campaign is being hatched out, it is said, and will commence very shortly.

Ince Denies Affiliations With Any Other Concern

The following statement from Thomas H. Ince, producer of Paramount and Arclight pictures, is evoked by the continued publication in Los Angeles and other newspapers of rumors that he was to supervise productions of other organizations than Famous Players-Lasky Corporation:

“My attention has been called to a statement that I am moving my companies to the Paralta studios and that the Paralta-Brunton productions will be supervised by Ince under an arrangement similar to that between this producer and the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. In order to correct this impression I wish explicitly to state that any arrangement I might make for moving my companies to the Paralta Studios would be solely for the purpose of acquiring additional space and facilities for my productions and would not in any manner whatsoever, affect my very cordial relations with Famous Players-Lasky, through which all pictures in which Wm. S. Hart, Dorothy Dalton, Charles Ray and Enid Bennett appear, will continue to be released; and therefore, I will confine my personal supervision to the productions of the above named stars only.”

Salt Lake Wins Prize

In order to stimulate the activities of the various branches by creating a spirit of friendly rivalry, the sales department of World Pictures offered to the salesman obtaining the highest scoring of the two-reel film “Over Here,” the prize of a silk American flag and to the second a set of President Woodrow Wilson’s “History of the American People.”

The contest excited great interest, each branch manager aiding his assistants to the utmost to bring the prize to his branch and the bookings rose to a remarkable number.

Sales Manager Felix F. Feist announced a few days ago the winners: First prize, Barnett Lyon of the Salt Lake City branch, and the second prize, F. B. Bernardo who hails from the Seattle office.

Gaumont Film Shows “Day in Coal Fields”

To further the movement to induce people to purchase their annual coal supply from the Individual Department of the Gaumont Company has just made, in cooperation with the National Coal Association, a two-reel motion picture called “A Day in the Coal Fields.” This picture shows the complete operation of mining coal, the grading, loading and shipping; and how necessary it is that there shall be a continuous supply of coal-cars to insure a reasonable production cost. The picture is completed with a realistic animated drawing which impresses upon everyone that Uncle Sam says, “Buy your coal now!”

The picture will not only be shown to all coal operatives, but will be widely distributed and exhibited to users of coal all over the United States.
Propaganda Seen
In Public Stand
On Picture Shows

Los Angeles Men to Launch
Publicity Campaign

Los Angeles, Calif.—The war-time saving and economy idea has taken such a strong hold on the Los Angeles public as to endanger one of the city's principal industries—the motion picture business.
This admission was made at a conference recently of amusement purveyors, who authorized an active campaign restore the attendance at motion picture theatres to normal.

To correct the impression that amusements are under Government ban, a big publicity campaign is scheduled to be launched within a short time.

War Revenue Drops

Figures given out at the conference showed that the Government revenue derived from the war tax on theatre tickets had dropped $325,000 during the past month. Wires from William A.
Brady and other influential Eastern producers, read at the meeting, gave assurance of strong support in the campaign, which may become national in its scope.

The impression that the public should not attend shows in war time has been traced to a certain propagandist designed to keep thousands away from the theatres where they hear the Government's four-minutes men and view the information given by means of the screen," said a member of the conference. Information coming from officials of the Treasury Department is that business must not stop, and that amusements are needed to guard public morals and provide proper relaxation.

Face Serious Situation

"The situation is serious. Nearly every industry in Los Angeles is in some way dependent on the motion picture business. The motion picture industry, it is estimated, spends $25,000,000 a year here. Los Angeles must not be deprived of this income, and proper support of the industry is necessary."

The conference appointed committees on publicity and an advertising committee. These two bodies will keep in direct touch with the newspapers, to bring before the public in big advertisements the object of the campaign. Among those attending the meeting were Jesse L. Lasky, Thomas
H. Ince, Samuel Goldfish, J. A. Quinn,
T. L. Tally, Fred Miller, Mike Gore,
Harry Caulfield, Frank McDonald, Sid Grauman, Emil Kehrlein, W. Taylor and Richard Spier.

Triangle to Re-Issue
Sixteen Keystones

The Triangle Distributing Corporation will re-issue sixteen of the Mack-Sennett Keystone Comedies, featuring
Roscoe Arbuckle, Mable Normand, Sid Chaplin and other well known celebrities who first gained notice in these productions. The first of these re-issues, all of which are two-reel and several three-reel comedies, will be Ford Sterling in "Snow Cure," June 9th, and one will follow each week thereafter.

Sol Lesser Buys
"Hearts of World"
For Eleven States

What is said to be the highest price ever offered for state rights to any film production was paid this week by Sol
L. Lesser, president of the All-Star Features Distributors, Inc., San Francisco, Cal., when he advanced $200,000 for the rights to "Hearts of the World" for the eleven Pacific Coast and mountain states, including California. This undoubtedly establishes the record price for any territorial rights in the whole history of the film business.

In addition to this, Mr. Lesser also invested $50,000 more in rights for the same territory for smaller features, it is said, including "The Still Alarm," "Nine-tenths of the Law." "The Crucible of Life," "Just a Woman" and "The Grain of Dust." This total of a quarter of a million dollars represents one of the largest sums of money ever invested at one time by a single state right buyer.
It is said the deal was consummated in less than two hours. The picture will be presented immediately by Mr. Lesser in all the important coast cities.

Anna Held Dying Views
"Joan of Plattsburg"

Anna Held, the celebrated French actress, whose physicians have told her she has but a short time to live, saw Goldwyn's "Joan of Plattsburg," starring Mabel Normand, in her own apartments at the Hotel Savoy last week. Lying flat on a wheelchair, the invalid, said to be slowly dying of a rare disease of the bones, paid unflagging attention for an hour as the inspiring story of the fortunes of America's little orphan Joan untold before her on a two-foot square of linen pinned against the wall of her bedroom.

Miss Held was much pleased with the picture and with the spirit which prompted Mabel Normand to ask that it be shown to her unfortunate sister

Charles Giblyn Now a Goldwyn Director

Charles Giblyn is now a member of the Goldwyn staff of directors at Fort Lee, N. J. Mr. Giblyn has begun work at the Goldwyn studio on a production starring a personality about whom Goldwyn is making something of a mystery.
Even the title is secret.

Mr. Giblyn comes to Goldwyn with an enviable record as a director, having been associated with Thomas H. Ince where he directed several of the most successful of the Frank Keenan pictures. Later he directed Clara Kimball Young, Constance Talmadge and Ann Pennington in productions which proved a tribute to his skill.

SCENES FROM TWO FOX PRODUCTIONS
BALABAN AND KATZ “PUT OVER” CENTRAL PARK;
ONE OF AMERICA’S FINEST THEATRES

The Central Park Theater, Chicago, one of the finest motion picture theatres in the United States, reached the top-notch of its popularity last week with the opening of “Revelation” with Nazimova for “an indefinite run.”

The Central Park is a 2,500-seat house, located on the West Side of Chicago and is conducted under the auspices of the firm of Balaban and Katz—Abe Balaban and Sam Katz.

Mr. Balaban and Mr. Katz have been identified with minor film enterprises in Chicago for several years, both in the exchange and exhibition fields. Several months ago they undertook the erection of the Central Park in a neighborhood where already existed considerable “competition.” Directly across from the site of the Central Park is located the twentientime larger Balaban and Katz theatre but one with a big following. Two short blocks away is the Gold theatre, one of the most successful theatres in Chicago, operated by Gold and Batistein.

In the face of this competition the Central Park was started and under the expert management of Balaban and Katz immediately leaped into great popularity.

Foreign Rights Sold
For Petrova Pictures

Contracts for the foreign rights to Petrova Productions were made between David P. Howells, Inc., for the first National Exhibitors’ Circuit and the New York representatives of Central American Film Co., Bidwell & Larrain and John Olson & Company, recently.

Messrs. Bidwell & Larrain have secured the Petrova productions for Chile, Peru and Bolivia, while A. G. Kent of Havana, Cuba, representing the Central American Film Company, will present these pictures in Cuba, Porto Rico, Santo Domingo, Venezuela, Colombia, Central America and Central America. Contracts have been made whereby John Olson & Company will distribute the productions of the Petrova Picture Company in Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

Wm. Russell Completes “Up Romance Road” Film

William Russell has completed “Up Romance Road,” released June 24. The theme of the play is an exciting adventure in which a wide-awake American chap frustrates a scheme of sabotage. The play was written for Mr. Russell by Stephen Fox, and is said to be replete with thrilling episodes.

Barrymore in “On the Quiet”

Blache Signed by Metro

Herbert Blache, a figure well known in the motion picture world both as an active producer and executive, has been signed by Metro to direct Emily Stevens in a picturization of Rachel Crothers’ play, “A Man’s World.”

Mr. Blache previously produced pictures for Metro under the auspices of Popular Play and Players. The star who appeared under Blache’s direction are Mme. Petrova, Mary Miles Minter, Edmund Breese, Florence Reed, and Emmet Corrigan.

Big Contract Closed
For Foreign Rights
To World Pictures

The Inter-Ocean Film Corporation reports that it has just concluded the largest contract for the distribution of feature pictures recorded in the history of the industry when last week the concession for the rights to World pictures for Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay, Chile, Uruguay and the Argentine Republic were renewed.

They also report that the contract for the rights to World pictures in Sweden, Finland, Denmark and Norway were renewed for a term of years although this contract does not expire until late in the autumn. Another large contract renewed on the strength of the new output of World pictures was France. On the same day the concession for the distribution of World pictures in Switzerland was made permanent for a term of years.

Mr. Cromelin, president and general manager of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, “to make it a full day’s work before closing his desk” secured the signatures of interested parties to the presentation of the World library of pictures in Egypt.

The successful negotiations of these contracts were brought about through the interested parties seeing two of the latest World pictures just finished and scheduled for publication in August, it is said.

Fox Begins “Kultur”

Gladys Brockwell has begun work at the William Fox studios at Hollywood, Cal., on a new play of German life, entitled “Kultur,” which was written by H. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton. The drama is being directed by Edward LeSaint and is said to reveal in intimate detail the domination of Germany over the Austrian royal family.

Leah Baird Joins
Western Photoplays

Joseph A. Golden, president of the Triumph Film Corp. and Western Photoplays, Inc., announces the completion of negotiations that obtain for his company the signature of Leah Baird to a long-time contract that places the services of this star exclusively under the direction of Mr. Golden.

Miss Baird is to be starred by the Western Photoplays, Inc., in productions especially obtained for her, it is said. The first picture in which she will be starred has been started. It is a serial consisting of sixteen episodes.

Selznick’s Son Promoted

Myron Selznick, who has been acting as manager of the Norma Talmadge studio, East Forty-eighth street, New York, for the past two months, has been made general manager of the producing corporation, following the retirement of Roland West.
Well whadda yer think of that? The Boston Convention is to be the biggest, the most colossal, and the finest convention ever gathered under one roof. All this was decided at the luncheon Friday at the Renaissance Hotel.

The lady starlight is to be introduced to the public via the air line. Each speaker is to be inclined to celebrate the full length of the hall over the heads of the audience. We hope the wire will hold for a "Star that falls is lost forever, but a star that sets shines again."

There is to be a call for things old and things new, for the museum at the convention. If perchance you have one of the first projectors or printing machines which you swiped from the inventor, or one that you just neglected to return, loan it to the committee for the Convention.

Speaking of things that are new reminds us at this time that the picture trade in general is inclined to celebrate the advent of the moving picture, and more especially by those who have horse sense, but there is no getting away from the fact that the Panorama, which was a moving picture patent of Baker which he put on the market in Edinburgh in 1759, antecated our race track cinema by a great many years, and the machine had a little apparatus which was in fact a regular "Movin' Pitcher" show. To be sure there were no Marys or Douglasses at that time but one could see Ah Sin, and O Sinn for the price of one laundry ticket, while the one lung orchestra played a Hoang-Choo jazz.

Then again it might be interesting to get the Edison Company to loan the original prints of their first offerings, "The Great Train Robbery" and the "Still Alarm," both of which were 500 foot sensational dramas of the pioneer days. In spite of the fact that Edison made the "Still Alarm" so many years ago, there is a "Still Alarm," being sold in New York today so you see it pays to keep up with the band wagon.

You may not be "Hip" but it's a well known fact that Roy L. McCardell was probably the first scenario writer in the business. Roy wrote sketches for the old Mutoscope of the old Biograph Company, and in 'em days Roy was only allowed to write a thirty-second sketch. And when you think of the contrast of those thumb nail sketches as it were to his ten thousand dollar prize winner, "The Diamond From the Sky," you can imagine how McCardell expanded with the business.

About this time there came into the field of projection via the slot machine movies one Freddy Schader, who, as a pioneer, opened one of the far up town houses of amusement at Broadway and 25th street. The wiseacres of the time told Freddy he was "loco" to open a shop away up in the woods, but Freddy stuck to the idea and made a bale of kale out of the enterprise. Yes, Fred's alive yet and still "Gunning" for trade.

By the same token there was a certain Professor North about this date who gave up his bicycle shop and got into the making of pictures and it was often a close race between the Professor and the Patents Company as to who would get the upper hand, but the Patents Company went up, and the Professor went down. But if you desire all the story you will have to get in touch with someone who was on the ground at the time, and I suggest Charley Henkel, because he has been "with, for and by," the pictures since Pat Powers and Bill Steiner got aboard and maybe a little longer. Charley is often referred to as the encyclopedia of the Cinema of America.

"Tisn't so long ago, as time is reckoned today, but in 1913 Chester Beecroft placed the first colored inserts with the World and News ever carried by them. They were for the Photoplay Productions Company of which Frank Tichnor, head of the General Film Company, was the chief, and the play was "The Littlest Rebel," starring E. K. Lincoln.

An old program at hand shows that Charley Chaplin was playing, at the American theatre in 1910, the role of an inebriate swell in a play called "A Night in a London Music Hall," and on the same bill W. S. Hart was playing a sketch called "The Holdup."

Nicholas Power Company offered their first regular projector to the trade in 1899, and when you stand it up beside their present day Power's No. 6B one is reminded of the tug boat and the battle ship. Both models are available for the Boston exposition.

"Have you any troubles—tell 'em to me," or find a cop and give him an earful.

The Rivoli blossomed forth on Sunday in decorative chintz seat covers from orchestra to root. The effect is to make the theatre invitingly cool and restful in appearance.

Instructor Studies
High School Pupils' Preference in Films

There have been comparatively few careful studies of the subject of motion pictures in relation to young people. Miss Irene Farrell, instructor in Latin and English in the high school at Onawa, Iowa, a town of 2,500 inhabitants, however, has taken a deep interest in the subject and recently made a careful survey in the high schools of that town and of Des Moines. It was conducted by means of a questionnaire.

The results indicated that high school pupils want entertainment of this kind about twice a week. In Onawa and Des Moines, they usually go with their parents or with their friends. Their reading habits were affected, one-fifth finding that the motion pictures, probably the news weeklies, increased the desire for newspaper reading. General reading was not so widely influenced, except that in every case where a picture was based on a book, there was registered an increase in the desire to read the work. News weeklies and picturized novels were found to have been very helpful in the study of current events, geography, and history.

In English, novels, picture novels, and picturized novels in English. Those suffering mountain eye trouble due to optical ailments were the only ones whose eyes suffered from looking at motion pictures.

Spectacular Films First Choice

Miss Farrell summed up as follows: "The kind of pictures given first choice was 'spectacular' which claimed its rank by a single vote over 'travel' and 'western' which tied for second place, which likewise by a single vote ranked above 'romantic,' 'comedy,' and 'educational,' all of which pulled nearer the given third place. 'Thrillers' and 'tragedy' were relegated to the background, the former receiving three votes, the latter but one. From the opinion as regards 'thrillers' we conclude that the pupils' taste must be refined and literary, but in respect to tragedy, when we consider that in school much study is made of the classics, Shakespeare especially, we conclude that we are teaching something naturally disliked or possibly we conclude that the high appreciation needs stronger cultivation. Perhaps the pupils have in mind the overworked tragedy, as one boys says, 'I dislike the tragedy in which the hero's manly breast heaves with suppressed emotion.'"

General reading was not so widely influenced, except that in every case where a picture was based on a book, there was registered an increase in the desire to read the work. News weeklies and picturized novels were found to have been very helpful in the study of current events, geography, and history.

In English, novels, picture novels, and picturized novels in English. Those suffering mountain eye trouble due to optical ailments were the only ones whose eyes suffered from looking at motion pictures.

Spectacular Films First Choice

Miss Farrell summed up as follows: "The kind of pictures given first choice was 'spectacular' which claimed its rank by a single vote over 'travel' and 'western' which tied for second place, which likewise by a single vote ranked above 'romantic,' 'comedy,' and 'educational,' all of which pulled nearer the given third place. 'Thrillers' and 'tragedy' were relegated to the background, the former receiving three votes, the latter but one. From the opinion as regards 'thrillers' we conclude that the pupils' taste must be refined and literary, but in respect to tragedy, when we consider that in school much study is made of the classics, Shakespeare especially, we conclude that we are teaching something naturally disliked or possibly we conclude that the high appreciation needs stronger cultivation. Perhaps the pupils have in mind the overworked tragedy, as one boys says, 'I dislike the tragedy in which the hero's manly breast heaves with suppressed emotion.'"

' Educational' and 'travel' proved to be the kind remembered longest, while 'comedy,' which ranked third by choice of subject, recorded one vote for being longest remembered.

"As a result two points stand out as important and valuable. First, the children are as a whole appreciative of the best in pictures, and are vitally impressed by the best, and second, motion pictures may be used to supplement class work in English and in history, and with positive and effective results. It is advisable to encourage the best pictures; it is sound educational to use this additional method of instruction."

JEWEL CARMEN, Who Will Star in a Film Version of Gouv eur Morris' Story, "You Can't Get Away With It." (Fox.)

Production Begun of "Romance of Coal" Film

Director Frederick A. Thomson started production work on "The Romance of Coal" for the Educational Films Corporation, with direction and picturization by Harry Lyon as head photographer and Charles Chapman as technical director. On the same date, two or three of the principals were yet to be engaged, but the majority of the company and crew were ready for active production. The last week in May and the first week in June were devoted to staging a few interiors for the one or two scenes of the play laid in New York City. The company will go to Charleston, W. Va., by the second week in June or not later than June 15. The scenario is practically complete and the form of a majority of the scenes has been decided on.

Pauline Curley Joins Douglas Fairbanks Co.

In keeping with his policy of employing new leading ladies for each production, Douglas Fairbanks has arranged with Pauline Curley to play the leading female role in his next film to follow "Say Young Fellow."

Miss Curley comes to the Fairbanks Company with eight months of film training which started at the Eastern Triangle Studio under the direction of Art Rossen, who then worked under the supervision of Allan Dwan. The latter is now identified with the Fairbanks Studio and will stage the next picture in which Douglas stars.

Tornado Swept Iowa

In Screen Telegram

The first pictures of the destruction caused by the great tornado which recently swept Iowa, killing ten persons, injuring scores of others and causing a loss of more than a half millions dollars, feature Screen Telegram No. 27, published by Mutual June 5.

The recent fire at San Francisco, Cal., which destroyed many government buildings, including the Fowler Aeroplane factory, is also shown in this issue.

Varied Activities Shown

Other interests include: President and Mrs. Wilson attending a benefit ball game at the Capital; pictures from Chicago, showing the monster demonstration made in greeting Belgian heroes of the battle of Liege, who are returning to the battle front in France. Pictures of United States-marines building a pontoon bridge across the Potomac in thirty-seven minutes; pictures from Philadelphia, showing 10,000 ship-builders celebrating the success of the "ship-a-day" program in the daring city; baseball fans presenting American soldiers and sailors with baseball outfits, are interesting war activity subjects.

Jackie staging a realistic film with a British battle tank at Chicago, to aid recruiting campaign, features Screen Telegram No. 26, published May 29. Another piece from Chicago shows the daring feats of an aviator, in which he demonstrates the latest stunts of the American aces in France.

Belgian Veterans Welcome

At San Francisco, Cal., is shown the welcome accorded the French and Belgian war veterans just after their arrival in the United States.

Graphic Official French War Pictures show German pilots being brought down by French fliers behind the lines on the western front. British and French aces prove their supremacy in spectacular air combats.

Exhibitors Interested in Ebony Comedy Films

Although but two weeks old, the new Ebony Comedies have scored an even greater hit than the preceding block of these fast stepping comedies, according to General Film Company. Exhibitors are making arrangements to show the entire series on the strength of the popularity record established by the first six Ebony comedies.

Belgian war pictures in the second series which have been completed are "The Bully," "The Janitor," "Merry, the Mummy Mumbled" and "The Reckless Rover." Additional subjects are being finished at Chicago by the Ebony Film Company, and will soon be ready for showing.

For Engages Thor by

Robert Thornby has been added to William Fox's directorial forces and will work in the western studios at Hollywood, Cal. Mr. Thornby has already taken active charge of new vehicle starring jewel Carmen, the story of which is based on Governor Morris' dissection of metropolitan life and character, "You Can't Get Away With It."
OREMOST of the week's offerings is "The Ordeal of Rosetta," not a particularly alluring title, but a well produced, well acted five-part screen drama. Emilie Chautard directed Alice Brady in this Select feature and the picture reflects credit upon the two.

Henrik Ibsen's classic "A Doll's House" has again been transferred to the screen. This time by Paramount, with Elsie Ferguson in the role of Nora, the misunderstood wife. Altogether it is an unusual production and will undoubtedly please discriminating audiences.

Triangle's best picture was "High Stakes," featuring J. Barne Sherry. Sherry is an adept at handling "society crook" parts and in his play he does some of his best work. "Old Loves for New" depends upon its western scenery and a stirring fight to impress its spectators.

Harold Lockwood in a dual role gives a very good study of two widely different characters in "Lend Me Your Name." This is one of the best Yorke-Metro pictures published in some time. The Vitagraph drama, "Baree, Son of Kazan," is another production that demands attention by reason of its interesting plot, taken from James Oliver Curwood's story of the great Northwest. Clever handling of a remarkable dog lends added interest to the story.

"All Woman," presenting Mae Marsh, contains possibilities as far as a plot material is concerned, but apparently its director did not grasp the finer points of the story and left too much to the little actress. June Caprice, the little light-haired Fox star, has a Pickfordian role in "Blue-Eyed Mary," which she handles with her usual adeptness. The story is of a light nature, suitable for the hot weather months.

William Fox also presents "Confession" with Jewel Carmen in the leading role. The story is a fast-moving, gripping and highly interesting one, written and directed by W. S. Davis, and while the climax ends in a dream, it is handled in an entirely new and novel manner. A picture that will play many return dates, we predict.

"A Soul for Sale" is, as the name implies, a thriller of the Laura Jean Libby school. It was taken from a story called "Barter" which appeared in Snappy Stories. "Broadway Scandal" is another product of the Universal studios, with Carmel Myers cast as a carefree French maiden. The story has a war flavor and by reason of its being carefully produced, offers good entertainment.

Paralta has a habit of putting out finished products and this is the case with "Sackled," the company's latest six-part drama, starring Louise Glau. The theme is a delicate one, but the whole is presented in a pleasing manner. Pathe offers Baby Marie Osborne in "A Daughter of the West," a commendable little play with many thrills and fights, played by a large cast.

"Broadway Scandal" is an unusually good offering from the Bluebird studios and has an entertaining quality that makes it an acceptable production.

Laid in a little French cafe in New York's Latin quarter, moving to a private sanitarium, the battlefields of France and back again to the little cafe. Harvey Yates' story unfolds itself in an absorbing and interesting fashion. The technical details have been handled in the usual Bluebird style and the production on the whole affords a picture of the higher class.

Carmel Myers is well cast as a carefree French girl craving that which is romantic and thrilling in life rather than the humdrum existence of cashier in her father's cafe. In her support appear Edwin August, Lon Chaney, Andrew Robson, W. H. Bainbridge and Frederick Gamble.

The story: Nenette Bisson, an adventurous French girl, is injured while automobiling and taken to the Kendall hospital, where she becomes infatuated with David Kendall, a young physician. Kendall, believing all women frivolous, pays little attention to Nenette. War breaks out and Kendall goes across to offer medical aid to the suffering. Nenette, disowned by her father when her name becomes involved in a Broadway scandal, becomes a stage favorite and all attempts to win her father's forgiveness are futile. One night, however, she surprises the little cafe with her presence and her father is finally persuaded to forgive her. Kendall, home on a furlough, goes to the cafe in search of Nenette and after a great amount of explanations he, too, is forgiven and all ends well.

One of the best Marie Osborne productions is "A Daughter of the West." The story is entirely different from anything this diminutive star has appeared in, and while little of the work rests on her, she runs and plays through the picture in her usual pleasing fashion, and her supporting cast is large and well selected.

Concerning the griefs and misunderstandings attendant the mating of May and December, the story runs along in an enjoyable manner, filled with thrills, outlaw raids and bar-room fights. The interior sets have been well staged and the out-of-door scenery is of unusual excellence. If previous Marie Osborne productions have proven good attractions, this one should go very well, as it is far superior to many of the previous issues.

The story: Discontented with her husband, many years her senior, Mrs. Gordon takes her daughter, June, and retires to a seashore resort, where she becomes infatuated with Allan Standish and runs away with him, leaving her husband and child. Ralph Gordon and his daughter go west, where he becomes the idol of the villagers and the enemy of "Rawhide Pete" and his murderous gang. Many attempts are made on the life of Gordon, but he withstands them all. Mrs. Gordon and Standish goes west to wreak vengeance on Gordon. Sarah Malcomb, June's governess, has won the heart of Ralph, but when he believes she, too, has deserted him for Standish, he leaves the west. Sarah follows him just as fast as she can, and they are happy.

"Confeision" is one of those rare productions—it is entertaining exciting and brings with it an ending so full of surprise and pleasure that it leaves a spectator in an excellent frame of mind. Starting out a pleasing little story, developing into a wild melodrama and then when the heroine's tension reaches a degree of white heat and the atmosphere becomes surcharged with thrilling suspense, finishing in a dream ending so farcically humorous that it forces one into hearty laughter. At least this is the effect it had on patrons at Chicago's Alcazar Theatre, where it proved a good attraction last week.

Jewel Carmen has an excellent role and she handles it in a capable and pleasing fashion. L. C. Shumway is very good in the leading male role and Fred Warren, Jack Brammell, Charles Gorman and Andy Arbuckle maintain the excellence of the supporting cast. W. S. Davis, who handled the direction in such a capable fashion, also claims authorship to the story.

The nature of "Confeision" makes it an acceptable offering for any class of patronage and in presenting it exhibitors are offering their patrons an excellent production, a little out of the beaten track, and so thoroughly enjoyable that its impression will be lasting and pleasing.

The story: On their honeymoon Bob Anderson and his wife of a few hours are robbed of all their possessions, and when asking hotel accommodations, they are regarded as suspicious characters and as such are housed in one of the hotel parlors. The young wife fakes asleep and dreams that her husband has been accused of murder. It tried, found guilty and sentenced to be electrocuted. Several hours before the execution the guilty man is found, a mad rush is made for the governor's home and alter a lengthy explanation the governor gets the warden on the phone, but it is too late. An innocent man has been executed for another's crime. In the midst of her grief the young wife wakes up. The horrible gruesomeness of the dream is still with her and it is a long time before she can realize it was only a dream. Relief comes to them and they prepare to have a regular honeymoon.

There may be motion picture theatres that can show "A Soul for Sale" with impunity, but the theatre catering to a high-class neighborhood patronage would do well to avoid running this production. The story is poor, suggestive, illogical and at times ludicrous. The entire sixth reel is unnecessary and is but so much useless footage.

The mechanical details of the picture are excellent, the sets elaborate and the photography splendid. For general make-up there could be little improvement in "A Soul for Sale," but it is not the class of play the public wants to see.

Dorothy Phillips handles the role of Neila Pendleton in a capable fashion and is accorded good support in Albert Rose, Catherine Kirkwood, Harry Dunkinson and William Burress. The story is an adaptation from Elliott J. Clawson's "Bartier," which appeared in the Snappy Stories magazine.

The story: Neila Pendleton promises her father that she will always provide her mother with luxuries to which she has been accustomed. The father dies, leaving a very small inheritance. The mother urges Neila to marry a disolute millionaire, she finally concedes. About this time she meets Steele Minturn and knows that she can never be happy without him. After telling Steele she loves him she becomes engaged to the millionaire and Steele leaves for the oil fields. Mrs. Peck discovers a dowry for Neila containing the name of Neila and the victim endeavors to force payment from Neila. Being caught in a compromising position, Neila's engagement is broken. Her mother dies and Neila becomes a stenographer for the firm with which Steele is associated. Steele, on a business trip, meets Neila, explanations follow and the two are made happy.

"Shackled" is in every way an excellent screen production. It is presented in the high-grade style that has been Parallel's from the first, enacted forcefully and artistically by an excellent cast, built up logically and convincingly.

The theme, a commentary on the injustice which the world shows to a woman with a past, is a delicate one, but here it is handled in such a way that it has been taken not to offend that it at no time causes a feeling of discomfort to the spectator. Of course, it is not a play for youngsters, but grown-ups should receive it pleasurably and go away from the theatre with a good measure of food for thought.

Louise Glaum is not presented as the customary vampire, the role which made her famous, and executes the characterization of the temporarly weak but really good woman with tact and good judgment. The supporting cast, which includes Charles West, John Gilbert, J. Lawson Butts and a certain Miss Wilson, has been perfectly chosen.

The story: Walter Cosgrove, a wealthy spendthrift, has been the cause of Lola Dexter's downfall. She has lived with him, always believing he intended marriage, until a change in his fortunes necessitates a matrimonial alliance with a certain Miss Danfield. She fails in her determination to wreck the happiness of many a heart and becomes the secretary of Thomas Danfield. When his daughter returns from her honeymoon with Cosgrove, the latter attempts to renew the old love with Lola. She refuses, having fallen sincerely in love with Danfield. Cosgrove resumes his old wastrel habits, squandering his wife's money on other women. Jimmy Ashley, a former suitor, returns from France, and the distracted Mrs. Cosgrove is about to elope with him when a large sum of money, left by Mrs. Cosgrove's grandfather for divorce, Lola incurs Danfield's suspicion, which she is unable to dispel because of Mrs. Cosgrove. The accidental death of Cosgrove ends the affair happily for all concerned.

Interest lags in "Old Loves for New," and were it not for a number of western scenes and a lively fight at the climax, it would fail to impress. The story of a man who failed to make good in the city and is sent to the west to manage a ranch and regain his better self is a vehicle worn shabby by constant use, and it is not handled in a manner to arouse interest.

Lee Hill does not make an impressive hero, while Margaret Wilson is unquestionably miscast. George Pearce as the father of the wayward son and Pete Morrison as a western cowpuncher acquitted themselves with credit in the parts assigned them.

The story: Still listed in the Blue Book but no longer in Bradstreet's, Mrs. Alcot succeeds in marrying her daughter Gwendolyn, after a clever campaign, to Harvey Marton, Jr. Her financial status re-established, Gwendolyn begins with a method of her own to make society sit up and take notice. The elder Marton stands it as long as he can and then orders his son west to manage a ranch. Once in the west, interest lags for Gwendolyn and she begins a flirtation with Jerry Marquis, a cowpuncher, by way of diversion. Believing himself loved by the woman, Jerry attempts to embrace her and is seen by Marton. The husband then takes his wife to a deserted cabin at a distant corner of the ranch, where he trains daily with boxing gloves in order to mete out punishment to the cowpuncher. Mrs. Marton's attempt to win back the love of her husband is unsuccessful until after a finish fight with Jerry in which he is victorious.

Direction, story, star and general make-up of "LEND ME Your Name" are all that is demanded in a high-class production and as such this picture should prove an enjoyable and profitable program feature. It presents Harold Lockwood in a dual role, but unlike most dual roles, there is very little double exposure, thus eliminating the monotony which is attendant upon watching a star keep beyond an imaginary line. Of special merit are the subtitles which have been well written and which were responsible for a number of the laughs floating through the air at the Orpheum Theatre, Chicago, where the production received a hearty welcome last week.

The story: Learning of the return of his wife the dyspeptic Earl of Gilleigh and Edward Warren, and Bessie Eyton and Pauline Curley in the leading roles render him excellent support. The other members of the cast were well chosen and assisted in maintaining the spirit throughout the picture.

The situation is such that the Earl of Gilleigh is about to take his life, but the appearance of his long-lost twin brother, who has assumed the name of Edward Warren, gives him a different idea. He decides to change places with his brother and follow the life of a rover while his brother endeavors to carry off, with honors, the role of Earl. The return of Lady Maude puts a different aspect on matters and Edward makes his getaway as fast as possible. His host, Rosaleen, is loath to see him, but Lady Maude comes upon them in a too friendly tete-a-tete and sternly denounces the bogus Earl. The appearance of the real Earl tends to liven things for a short space of time, but with everything straightened out the Earl is content with Lady Maude and Edward and Rosaleen.

James Oliver Curwood's novel of the northwest, "Baree, Son of Kazan," makes a wonderful screen production of absorbing interest. While Nell Shipman and Alfred Whitman are the featured players, the real star of the picture is a dog of almost uncanny intelligence. The clever canine gleams as a perfect a portrayal of Curwood's half wolf, half dog adventurer as would seem possible.

One of the things Vitagraph is congratulated for is the fact that the script was followed and liberties having been taken with the work of the author. The sets are above reproach and many beautiful snow scene delight the eye of the observer.

The situation is such that the factor of the Lac Bane trading post, infatuated by the charms of Marie, daughter of Perriot, a trapper, is repulsed by the girl. In his journey to Perriot's cabin he has trapped a half wolf, half dog, whose hatred he has aroused by brutal treatment, and, after an escape, finds in the cabin pursued by the factor and jumps over a cliff. The dog, left alone, wanders into the north country, where his hatred for McTaggart governs his every move. The latter finally traps him and saves him to die, but he is rescued by Jim Carvel, an outlaw. The dog, lonesome for his old home, leads his new found friend to the scene of his former happiness, and is overjoyed to find Marie. McTaggart, aware of her return, enters her tent at midnight and the dog avenges all the wrongs done him by snuffing out the life of the factor.

The situation in "All Woman" is novel and there is plenty of good material in the story, but the directorial end has not been handled to the best advantage, and, as a result, all the play rests on the shoulders of Mae Marsh and she dispenses with her duties in an efficient and capable manner.

The locale of the story requires sordid surroundings and there have been well selected. There is a pretty garden scene, a water scene and a jaunt down a country road in an old two-seated surrey that are welcome bright spots, but for the most part the action takes place in and around an old ramshackle building, which Miss Marsh, as Sue Sweeney, operates as a hotel.

Miss Marsh's interpretation of the role of Sue Sweeney is sympathetic and appealing and throughout her performance bespeaks capability. Jere Austin, Arthur Houseman, Martha Hellman, John Sainpolly, Jack Dillon and Jules Cowles appear in the cast and afford good support.

The story: Sue Sweeney, an employee to a doll factory, learns that she has inherited a hotel in a small town in the Adirondacks, and, picturing the hotel as resembling the most palatial building she has ever seen, and she and two girl friends start out for the new home. The situation returns true when the girls are taken to a ramshackle building, one-half of which is vacant and the other half of which is decorated with persons in various forms of inebriation. The sight of two motherless children prompts Sue to remain and before long she has transformed the place into one of beauty. She is able to have the bar put out of business, reforms the village drunkard, plays Cupid and wins for herself the love of Austin Strong.

Told in an enjoyable manner, "The Ordeal of Rosetta" presents a screen story that is very much out of the ordinary. Well done, the interest is sustained throughout and it affords exhibitors excellent box-office opportunities.

Alice Brady, charming, pleasing, lovable, or wicked, as the occasion may demand, makes the most of every opportunity and departs herself in a very capable manner. Craufurd Kent, Ormi Hawley, Henri Leone and Hazel Washburn render Miss Brady very good support.

The sets are lavish and their beauty is enhanced by excellent photography. There is a realistic earthquake scene when the home of the Gelardi's in Sicily, Italy, is wrecked and the two upper floors of their home are blasted away.

The production is meeting with success this week at the Bijou Dream Theatre, Chicago, where it is showing. And if enthusiastic audiences is a criterion the picture should go pretty well wherever shown.

The story: With the loss of their home and Lola through an earthquake, Rosetta and her father come to America where she becomes the stenographer for Aubrey Hopgood, a successful author. She allows an artist to sketch her head for a poster and when he attaches the head to a partly nude body and the display is seen by Hopgood, she is forced to tell the story of her life. This gives the author an inspiration and taking Rosetta for a drive he dictates a portion of it. Fatigued, Rosetta falls asleep and dreams that she has been disgraced by Hopgood and kills herself. Her sister Lola, learning of it, lure Hopgood's sister to her home where she is put up in a bootery of a bogus count. Hopgood is called when it is too late and Lola, telling him all, asks him to kill her. He does and just as the gun goes off in the dream, the report from a punctured tire wakes Rosetta up. She learns that Hopgood loves her and while the puncture is being mended they visit a nearby minister.

Take a good story, add to it a capable star who can adapt herself to any role, and a director who knows how, and the result is a production that usually keeps the ushers busy finding seats to accommodate incoming patrons. "A Doll's House" has just such a production. No better author than Henrik Ibsen could be desired; and surely Elise Ferguson's interpretation of the doll-wife is something that will be long remembered by her admirers, as well as those who, not familiar with the star's previous work, have the opportunity to see this picture. The name of Maurice Tourneur as director also means a great deal to those who have followed this director's work.

It must be remembered that at the time when Ibsen wrote his immortal masterpiece women were regarded in a different light than our American women of today. Just how she was petted and made a fuss over, not being credited with any amount of brains, is plainly brought out in this version of it and undoubtedly people will question the actions of the doll-wife's husband when he refuses to forfeit his honor to shield his wife's forgery, made that they might travel to another clime to save his life. It might be well to mention something of this in advertising the production as otherwise certain actions might appear as questionable and illogical. With an explanation this will detract nothing from the story's entertaining value.

The Ziegfeld Theatre, Chicago, played this to capacity this week.

The story: To save her husband's life Nora Helmer borrows a large sum of money and after he has fully recovered, saying nothing to him of it, she gradually pays the debt. When Helmer discharges Krogsdott, the moneylender, from the bank, he threatens to expose Nora's act. Believing her husband will condone her act, Nora confesses. Instead, he blames her. This unexpected action on the part of her husband changes the petted doll-wife into a woman of the world, and as such she leaves her husband and three children to go out into the world and apply her knowledge of the serious side of life to provide for her further education.

There has always been more or less fascination for the theatre-going public in plays, dealing with the activities of society crooks of the "Raffles" type and in "High Stakes" Triangle has provided an interesting vehicle which should meet with the popular demand for this class of entertainment. Concerning the battle of wits between a Scotland Yard inspector and a master criminal, the story moves swiftly with the outcome always a matter of speculation.

J. BARNEY SHERRY, JANE MILLER AND TINA ROSSI, IN A SCENE FROM "HIGH STAKES." (Triangle).

J. Barney Sherry as the society crook at the height of his career and also as the reformed thief won back to the straight and narrow path by the love of a woman, gives a masterful portrayal. In support Jane Miller and Harvey Clark do excellent work.

The story: Ralph Stanning, society crook, but possessed of considerable sporting blood, begins a battle of wits with Inspector Culvert of Scotland Yard following the theft of the Southern cross, a valuable jewel, from the vaults of the Kensington Museum of London. Following the rescue of a girl who attempted suicide he falls in love with her and she becomes his wife. With the birth of a son he quits the old life and moves to a small village. Here he is found by Culvert, who claims to have left the service and seeks his help to acquit his son, who is suspected of the theft of a necklace. Stanning goes to London for a week and at the end of this time produces a necklace. Culvert then arrested him and admits that his story, which won Stanning's sympathy, was a myth. As Stanning is about to be taken away the woman who lost the necklace appears with it, having found it in the folds of a divan.

Larry Evans' magazine story wasn't a particularly happy choice as a vehicle for Charles Ray. It is a long, "Mary" du llar, being mostly subtitles and quite long. At no time does the story grip one. It's point is too vague and it is only saved from the "average" class of recently produced screen plays by the acting of Mr. Ray.

As usual, Charles Ray is cast as a small-town boy, Jimmy Duncan, misunderstood by his father, a corrupt bishop in this case, who turns him out without a cent. However, Jimmy returns at the end of two years, having become famous as a playwright, and turns the tables on his father and the local political ring. He cleans up the town through the columns of an inherited newspaper and runs the "gang" out of town. As a writer for the "Chronicle," though, Jimmy was an awful joke.

For the purpose of furnishing a love story Katherine MacDonald is cast as Carol, Jimmy's boyhood sweetheart. Others who lend excellent support are Charles French, Otto Hoffman and Andrew Arbruckle. The photography and direction are both excellent.

The story: An outcast from home, Jimmy Duncan goes to New York where, under an assumed name, he becomes famous as a playwright. Thence also came Carol, his boyhood sweetheart, seeking success upon the stage. Upon the death of Carol's father Jimmy inherits the "Chronicle," a newspaper he was publishing in Worcester, and returns to clean out the corrupt gang of politicians. The "extra" Jimmy prints brings them all to his office, including his father, and upon their promise to leave town within twenty-four hours he supresses the next edition of the paper. His play is accepted also and Carol becomes famous as its leading lady.

"Blue-Eyed Mary" is the type of story best adapted to June Caprice's light-hearted, childish nature. She romps through the five reels with her accustomed vivacity and is accorded excellent support by Helen Tracy, Thomas Fallon, Jack McLean and Bernard Randall.

It is the story of a man who married a woman against the wishes of his mother and as a consequence is forced to work for his living after being disowned by his mother. A little blue-eyed daughter goes to the grandmother's home in an endeavor to win the heart of the "eagle-face" as her servants nick-named her, but her efforts are futile and after being accused of attempted robbery, she returns to her home. The unexpected happens, however, and the after effects of the girl's love brings things to a happy ending.

If June Caprice is a favorite with your patrons or if they like light, frivolous entertainment, "Blue-Eyed Mary" will prove a good attraction. The picture's success could seem to hinge on the class of entertainment an exhibitor's patrons favor.

The story: Leading his mother to believe that he is a millionaire, although in reality he is a poor man, Mary DuBois' father, to his mother, Mary DuBois' own daughter, who has disowned him because of his marriage to a woman of a lower social standard, on a pretext of making her debut. The truth of the situation dawns upon the elder Mrs. DuBois when her nephew, caught in the act of stealing, tells her the truth and lays the blame on Mary. Detectives prove to Mrs. DuBois that her nephew is a notorious thief and the woman turns to her son and his family for comfort in her old days.

Say, wouldn't it be funny to wake up some fine morning to find Secretary McAdoo had taken over the m. p. industry.

And speaking of Secretaries reminds us of a raw one the young man on the next desk pulled last week when we asked who was secretary of the interior. He said Hoover, That y. m. needs watching. He's from Elgin. One finds it hard to work or fight under the circumstances.

Introducing Percy Dubb

Editor's note:—It gives us great pleasure to announce this week that the Herald has signed up Mr. Percy Flub-Dubb, the Oshkosh exhibitors' friend and helper. Mr. Dubb will contribute helpful hints to helpless exhibitors on the art of perfect projection, advertising, putting the picture over, what the picture done fer me, how to raise your prices without letting the public know it, the correct way to sweep out and what to do with the war tax collected for the U. S. A.

To the thousands of inquiries we have received since inaugurating our "Hints to Exhibitors' as to who is responsible, if anybody, we can only reply "Dubb done it." Yes, Mr. Dubb compiled those original hints. And Mr. Dubb is some compiler, we say.

When a mere child we are informed Mr. Dubb won several beauty contests. Hence he comes to us well fitted to write intelligently on the subject of beautiful lobby displays. He will make a specialty of this. Write to Mr. Dubb, he knows.

J. R. M.
Readjustment Completed—Laemmle

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, returned to New York on May 36 after one of the most extensive business trips he had made in years. His return is not only optimistic, but is enthusiastic over the prospect of immediate prosperous conditions not only in the film industry, but in every other business essential to the winning of the war.

Notwithstanding huge advances in the cost of living and in the price of essentials, Mr. Laemmle declares nearly everybody appears to be well supplied with money. He attributes the favorable situation to be found in the hands of the public, he explained, 'to the fact that the great majority have learned to economize in living expenses by eliminating the non-essentials and cutting waste to an irreducible minimum.' The people seem to believe, however, that the eliminating of expenditures for entertainment is not economy, but that such action is dangerous.

No Economy in Entertainment

"In my talks with numerous men who have made a study of the psychological question, they take the stand that the people are following the proper procedure. In spending money for entertainment and during their hours of play, they are safeguarding their hours of work. They are going to their labor at Portland, dumping goods and home by way of Universal City, where the prohibition forces have won their fight, but are apparent in the cities where the saloons still flourish. His explanation and the explanation of others who have made a study of the question is that the saloons have been raised their prices to such an extent as to be charged with openly profiteering.

High Liquor Prices Help Business

"Men who one year ago spent two and three dollars daily over the bar have become teetotalers, not because they wanted to eliminate the evil conditions, but rather because they refused to pay prices they consider exorbitant. The result is that this money goes largely for other forms of entertainment."

During his trip Mr. Laemmle remained at Universal City for two weeks, during which time he went very thoroughly into the production end of the big company controlled by him. He personally impressed upon the staff at Universal City that the demand of the public is for better pictures all the time. And has told the management of the Universal Company that the public which it desires.

After leaving Universal City, Mr. Laemmle visited several of the Universal branch exchanges in the Northwest, Bennett in Minneapolis and Chicago. In every city he met numerous of the prominent exhibitors, and in every case he was greeted with the same news—business is good.

Business Conditions Satisfy Exhibitors

"It is extraordinary," said Mr. Laemmle, "to have so many exhibitors acknowledge they are satisfied with business conditions. Usually, in speaking with the executive of a producing and distributing company, they are inclined to belittle their box office receipts. They seem to fear that an acknowledgment that they are pleased with business conditions will be followed by an increase in rental prices. I am sorry to say this, as every producer in the business is anxious to see favorable business, and will not take undue advantage of the prosperity of an exhibitor."

Mr. Laemmle said that it was apparent that the exhibitors of the country had managed to adjust themselves to war conditions and conditions of war, so that they were not being made by the authorities at Washington to cause another readjustment, which will mean another period of uncertainty.

Arbuckle's Next "Good Night Nurse"

"Fatty Arborckle's next appearance in a Paramount-Arbrickule comedy will be a picture entitled "Good Night Nurse," which is now being produced at Arrowhead Hot Springs, California, in which the obese comedian plays the part of a man who is still celebrating the morning after the night before, and while in this ecstatic frame of mind visits various places where his welcome is more or less warm, and brings home a strange collection of people and animals, to the indignation of his wife.

Margarita Fisher in "A Square Deal" And Strand Comedy on Mutual List

Miss Margarita Fisher is announced by Mutual in "A Square Deal," set for publication June 10. The production was made by the American Film Company, Inc. The director was Lloyd Ingham, who has produced many of Miss Fisher's successes.

The play is from a story by Albert Payson Terhune which appeared in "Red Book," and was dramatized by Elizabeth Mahoney. The role assigned to Miss Fisher is different from anything she has done in pictures, and calls on the star's emotional ability as an actress, while utilizing her talents as a comedienne.

A girl who is the idol of her old-fashioned parents becomes tangled up with a radical "higher-thought" clique and adopts their theory of "a square deal" when she marries a conservative young lawyer, the "square deal" meaning the absolute freedom of each party to the contract, the arrangement to be terminated when either one tires of the shackles.

Jack Mower in Leading Male Role

Supporting Miss Fisher in the leading male role is Jack Mower, who plays the young husband. The cast is an excellent one, including Louis M. Wells, a noted character actor, while the photography and settings are said to be superior.

The Strand comedy, available June 11, stars Billie Rhodes in a comedy in which a young wife is suddenly called on to prove her culinary ability by roasting a turkey for her husband's friends. She solves the difficulty by borrowing her neighbor's turkey, already cooked, without the neighbor's consent and a heated scene occurs when the neighbor appears and demands her bird.

War Scenes in News Reels

Screen Telegram Nos. 30 and 31 are published June 12 and 16. The Editorial French War pictures shown in this new serial are remarkably graphic. American troops are being rushed across the plains to stem the advance of the Huns in Picardy, in the world's greatest battle, was a striking scene in the last issue of the Screen Telegram. Actual verification of recent statements referring to the great aerial activity and the supremacy of the Allies' aces of the air featured this issue. The stupendous impetus of the great American military drive, both in this country and on the front, is emphasized in striking scenes.

Norma Talmadge in "Safety Curtain"

The production upon which Norma Talmadge has been at work ever since the completion of her recent Select picture, "De Luxe Annie," is a screen version of the successful novel by Ethel M. Dell, entitled "The Safety Curtain." The film, produced simultaneously in London and in this country, "The Safety Curtain" ran into large editions, it is said. The central character of "The Safety Curtain" is a clever little specialty dancer who, when the story opens, is one of the star performers in a London music hall. She proves her mettle by quelling a panic in the audience when the theatre catches fire, but is herself overcome by the smoke. It was in the filming of this scene, recently, that Miss Talmadge, who over serials, has been seen as Miss Talmadge, has been seen

S. A. Franklin, who is directing Miss Talmadge in the new production, prepared its scenario with the assistance of Paul West, who put in on this playphotop the last work he did before he left for France. Eugene O'Brien, who appeared opposite Miss Talmadge in "De Luxe Annie," is again seen as leading man.

World Buys Forman's "Buchanan's Wife"

World Pictures have just acquired the motion picture rights to the late Justus Miles Forman's novel, "Buchanan's Wife," and under the supervision of Charles Sarver, the World scenario chief, the continuity is being prepared for filming. Buchanan's Wife was one of the developments arising from the peculiar disappearance of a famous figure in business leaving no trace behind and the manner in which his ambitious wife solves the way out of the predicament.

"The Gadabout" Next Goodrich Vehicle

Oriental strategy in diplomatic combat with the cleverness of an American woman furnishes the plot for "The Gadabout," Maietle Heikes Justice's story, which has been selected as the first vehicle for Edna Goodrich in a new series of Mutual productions.

"The Gadabout" is now in the course of production at the Biograph studios in New York under the direction of Burton King. David Powell, who supported Olive Tell in "The Unforeseen" and "Her Sister," and Ann Murdock in "The Beautiful Adventure" and "The Richest Girl," Empire-Mutual pictures, has been chosen to support Miss Goodrich in her latest production.

"The Gadabout" is a society drama, laid in New York today and deals with "man's" first diplomatic and exclusive society. Dishonest business is thwarted by means of oriental intrigue and both are beaten by the cleverness of a woman, a supposedly frivolous society buttry, who, goaded by the threat of her husband's ruin, manipulates a cold blooded financier and a wily diplomat to her own ends.

Laemmle Buys Dodge's Story "Yellow Dog"

Screen rights to "The Yellow Dog" have been purchased by Jewel Productions to be used as a companion picture to "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin." The rights to "The Yellow Dog" were purchased by President Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Film Company, through the exchanges of which all Jewel productions will be released in the future.

The story first appeared in the Saturday Evening Post of May 4. It is the work of Henry Irving Dodge, the widely known author, and is to appear shortly in book form from the press of Harper & Brother.

Universal Anticipates Close of War in Bluebird Starring Grace Cunard

What promises to be one of the most sensational Bluebird productions of the year was finished this week, under the title of "The Spawn," by Director Joseph De Grasse at the Bluebird's west coast studios.

The play anticipates the close of the war and the conditions which will arise from the chaos produced by the human frailty and the invading Huns as they passed through the belligerent countries.

The big climax of the production comes when a brilliant opera singer, the mother of one of those welcomed Bohemian fugitives, had engaged a young soldier, meets socially the retired German army officer, who is visiting her country with his Teuton wife.

Grace Cunard plays the leading role, and in her support are Edward Cecil and several others.

Harry Carey in "Hell's Neck"

After a fortnight passed at Bear Valley, shooting mountain snow scenes for his newest Universal special production, being made under the title of "Hell's Neck," Harry Carey and his leading woman, Neva Gerber, have returned with their cameras to the Universal City and are now taking the final scenes of the feature.

"Hell's Neck" is a story of the Canadian Mounted Police, the cattle rustlers and illicit whiskey dealers of the snow country. Jack Ford, who is directing the production, is enthusiastic over the "snow stuff" taken while on the recent location trip to Bear Valley, and believes this will be one of Carey's greatest hits.

Mae Murray Film Nearly Finished

Finishing touches are being taken at Universal City this week on "The Big Little Person," a Mae Murray special production, based on Rebecca Hooper Eastman's novel of the same name.

During the week production laggard for a few minutes while Miss Murray celebrated a birthday, cutting an enormous cake presented to her by members of the company, and drinking a toast to the success of the Mae Murray Universal features. Director Robert Leonard, who is rushing work night and day, believes this will be one of the biggest attractions of the series of productions being made under his direction by Mae Murray at Universal City.

"We Should Worry," Fox Special

Jane and Katherine Lee's newest production, bearing the expressive title "We Should Worry" is announced from the William Fox offices as the feature for June. The picture is of the comedy-drama type that the famous "Child Grands" have been making since their elevation to full-fledged stardom, and is said to have an appeal for everyone from six to seventy years.

"We Should Worry" was written and staged by Keanen Buel, and enlisted the aid of a large supporting company for the diminutive players. The cast includes these principals: Don Lee, Edward Sturgis, Talmage Young, Charles Craig, George Humbert, Henry Hallam, Sarah McVicker and Ann Egleston.

"The Source" Wallace Reid's Next

"The Source," by Clarence Budington Kelland, will be Wallace Reid's next starring vehicle following "Less Than Kin." George Melford will direct the picture, which will be largely filmed in the mountains—a lumber camp being the locale for the most of its scenes. Ann Little will again appear in support of Mr. Reid. Monte Katterjohn has been specially engaged to do the scenario.

Donald Crisp, who has been directing Wallace Reid in his recent productions for Paramount, will handle Fred Stone on the latter's arrival next month, it is announced.

John Merkyl to Play in "A Man's World"

John Merkyl, a popular player of the stage and screen, has been signed by Metro as leading man for Emily Stevens in a forthcoming picturization of Rachel Crothers' play "A Man's World," which is now being produced under the direction of Herbert Blache. Mr. Merkyl has just terminated a vaudeville engagement with Bessie McCoy Davis who has been headlined over the big time circuit.
PERSONALS

"By George"

Ralph O. Proctor, Chicago’s well known tourist, has again left these parts and is, at present, in Minneapolis unless he’s left there since we got our information. That’s right Ralph, get it out of your system before June 10 when the increased rates and reduced service go into effect.

Aaron Jones of Jones, Linick & Schaefer is in New York this week on business in connection with his theatrical interests.

Billy Luthardt, the new censor since Funkie went on an enforced vacation, held a meeting with the censor board on Saturday last. Wonder if he preached tolerance to them. Hope he did.

Jacob Cooper of the Twentieth Century theatre says it was no “Revelation” to him when Judge Windeles dissolved that injunction. He denies, in spite of his statement, that he has a private pipe line into the court.

There is a lot of talk about town to the effect that the Allied Amusements Association may hit the rocks because the exchanges have failed to come through with the money promised by them for their end of the financing of the project. We’ve always contended that exchanges were made for receiving advance deposits, not for putting them up.

The government hit the Herald staff a mighty wallop when it called our Mac-Henry to the colors last Saturday. "Mac" had enough enthusiasm for a company when we saw him last. His first scheduled stop was Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Word was received this week from Paul A. Smith, Chicago manager of Screen Opinions, now of the U. S. Marines, who relates the details of a pyjama party viewing films. We hope that when “Mac” and he meet in the first line trenches in France they don’t renew that argument about which one owed the other a letter. It may ball up some offensive.

Cries of “Mush” “Mush” may soon resound through Chicago streets if the Capitol people go the way of the New Kine for distributing their “Mexican Miracle” and “Tillie in the Silk Mill” which will be exhibited in the city. Word is that they will be in the hands of the Film Corp. in the very near future.

In case these terrors to the finny tribe do arrive they will be seen at the Ashland, Oak Park and Bryn Mawr theatres among others.

And now we are accused of being in cahoots with a gum shoe detective by no less person than Beatrice Baret of the Trade Review. "As I was marveling at the clever trend of your mind, in walked the bailiff and served them papers on me," writes she. No, honest, we aren’t printing this fact because there’s a compliment for us in it.

Joe Abrams, a former Chicago exhibitor, was in the city the past week renewing old friendships with exhibitors and exchange men. Joe is now manager of the Hippodrome in Keokuk, Iowa.

On the Firin’ Line

Dell Goodman who left recently to join Uncle Sam’s "dough" boys has been transferred to Columbia, New Mexico, where he says all the grub is plentifully flavored with sand. Well, what’s an army without grit?

On the other hand when Van Gelder came to don the khaki he was given a suit which he claims was never meant for a person of his build. In fact, the former Fathe salesman declares he looks like Abe Kabibe. If he can talk like Abe in his new duds he ought to be able to put up a good argument.
Two additions have been made to the Doll Van sales force, Ed Mordeau, recent manager of the Standard Film Exchange and the local productions of the and Paramount salesman, having hooked up with the Chicago exchange to sell their productions.

H. W. Walleck who does Iowa for Goldwyn was in Chicago over the week end seeing the sights and getting some points of the new productions of the company. Got to keep your stuff right up to snuff for those Iowa exhibits eh Walleck?

I. R. Parness is back with Pathe covering the Michigan and Iowa territory. He says he met Max Weisner who works out of Milwaukee for Universal and that the latter was “broke as usual.” Parness advanced the necessary funds to get Max back to Milwaukee. The boys say that if Max is as good at getting money as he is out of fellow knights of the road his collections are 100%.

By the way, Parness is particularly anxious that Goldman should know that he is back with Pathe. Kind of mysterious about it, too. What’s the big idea, Sid?

Jimmy Gyleeck, booker for the local Pathe exchange, is spending most of his time in the vicinity of the old Lake Michigan. Yeg, you can’t join the navy next week and us thinks he was down there picking up nautical terms. He’ll kind of surprise those birds if they pick him for a rookie.

T. E. Delaney of the Goldwyn sales force has been making rapid tours of the small side territory in his brougham lately accompanied by Banford in the interests of “Billy” Parsons comedies. The latter says that after each tour he appreciates more and more of the comfort of those slow moving College building elevators.

Lyman Ballard, formerly with the Metro sales squad, was in town Saturday dayed out in the prevailing style of the spring for young men—khaki. Lyman is stationed out to Fort Sheridan, helping some general or colonel, and thus far he hasn’t adopted Sherman’s well known opinion of war.

Billy Orr is certainly doing some bustling around the Schiller building these days. We don’t know what’s back of all the momentum, film selling or that work or fight order. Anyhow, he’s sure kicking up a lot of dust.

Charley Sedell has joined the salesmen’s plus club and become assistant to Manager C. W. Bunn of the Chicago office of United Picture Theatres of America, Inc. This is the nearest Charley’s come to a bunn since it became stylish to ride on the well known water wagon.

Speaking of assistant managers, as we were, Tom Mitchell is now occupying that enviable position for the Doll-Van Film Corp.

Ed Johnson, formerly with the Pathe sales force and familiarly known as “fashion-plate” is now touring Illinois in the interests of the Foursquare local exchange.

Increased Novelty

For Ebony Comedies

Promised by Pollard

Luther J. Pollard, president and general manager of the Ebony Film Corporation, has announced the completion of the second series of comedies made by that company for distribution on the General Film program and that work has already been begun on a new series.

Because excellent results have been obtained by using Ebony comedies in the same theater that black-face act in vaudeville, Mr. Pollard says that increased effort will be made to make them more popular by elevating the standard of Negro comedies.

"With such magnetic laugh makers as Sam Robinson and Billy Ledman," said Mr. Pollard, "both leading their own companies and working along original lines, the exhibitors will be served with popular comedy subjects that can only be turned out by the Ebony laugh shop.

"The new series of Ebony comedies which has been brought to a higher standard, contains the inimitable negro humor, brought out in forceful situations of unusual sorts, relying upon surprises and ridiculous slapstick situations to advance the real plot to a rip-roaring climax."

Director Ralph G. Phillips is at work filming an original story by Bob Horner, scenario editor of the company, tentatively named “A Farce Adventure” featuring Pigmeadilled in his new Negro film. It is not as yet announced, is in the making under the direction of Charles N. David, featuring Sam Robinson, Yvonne Junior and Samuel Jacks.

Bluebird Producing

Another Snow Film

Starring Salisbury

Helen Eddy is leading woman for Monroe Salisbury now busily engaged, under the direction of Julian, in making his new Bluebird photoplay of the cattle country, “The Rustler of Wind River.”

The story is taken from the novel of the same name by C. W. Ogden. It was prepared for the screen by Verne Hardin Porter, short story writer and magazine editor.

Alfred Allen and Betty Schade, both of whom appeared with Salisbury in “The Guilt of Silence,” have important roles with the star in this new production of life in the open.

Edith Roberts Begins

“Turn About Eleanor”

With Edith Roberts as the star, Ethel M. Kelley’s well known novel, “Turn About Eleanor,” is being made into a Bluebird production.

Ted Browning, known for his D. W. Griffith and William Fox productions, is directing the photoplay from a scenario by the book by Bernard McConvil.

“Turn About Eleanor” is the story of a little orphan girl, who is adopted by a wealthy young woman, who, tired of threats New York’s smart set offers her, seeks a new sort of plaything in an adopted daughter.

The adventures of this New England child and the grove of oddities of which she is a part in Manhattan make a delightful picture, it is said, of a young girl’s development through her teens.

June Elvidge World Star

In “The Oldest Law”

June Elvidge makes her appearance on the World Program in an impending picture “The Oldest Law,” scheduled for release on May 27. John Bowers is featured as her leading man and the remainder of the cast is composed of well-known World actors.

Harley Knoles handled the direction.

“The Oldest Law” is, of course, that of self-preservation, and Miss Elvidge, in her portrayal of a young girl struggling for existence in the big city, has a role of convincing power.

The story begins in the Maine woods where Jennie Fox, with her father, lives a life marked with simplicity. The days were interrupted by the visit of Professor Rolfe, who, while pursuing a rare specimen, slipped and sprained his ankle, and Jennie assisted him to her father’s home and cared for the injured scientist.

One day, in the absence of Jennie, old man Fox confided to Rolfe that the future of Jennie after his death was causing him anxiety, but the professor eased his fears by assuring him that he would care for the girl. Not long after the departure of the professor, an accident occurred to the elder Fox which caused his death.

Jennie decided to go to the city to earn her living, and proceeded to see Professor Rolfe. Her stay at his house was blasted, however, by the unexpected death of the professor.

After days of fruitless endeavors to find a position, Jennie decided to enjoy herself thoroughly once more. She alighted the evening at a New York cafe, where she was accosted by Billy West, who was just in the process of settling his divorce suit. He offered to her the position of housekeeper at his home, which she accepted. The association ripened into love.

Farnum Buys Silver Saddle

William Farnum has just purchased what is probably one of the most elaborate and expensive saddles ever used in photoplays. The valuable piece of leather is said to have cost the big William Fox star $1,250 and will grace the horse he rides in the production on which he is now at work—“Riders of the Purple Sage.”

Zoe Rae Returns Home

Little Zoe Rae, Bluebird’s stellar child actress, after six weeks in Chicago, where she was loaned to Essanay for a picture, has returned to Los Angeles and will appear with Ruth Clifford and Kenneth Harlan in a new Rupert Julian-directed production.

Based on Henry Kitchell Webster's novel of that name, the production of which has just been started under the direction of Fred J. Balshofer. Caillaux's Trial

Forecasts Fox Film

Cable dispatches from France to the effect that former Premier Joseph Caillaux will probably be placed on trial for treason either in June or early July is taken as an indication that William Fox will issue his film, “The Caillaux Case,” at about the time that the “evil genius of France” begins his fight for life.

The picture, which was made by an all-star cast, is declared to show in astonishing detail the spread and aims of the “deleatist” propaganda, which resulted in the execution of Bolo Pasha, the arrest and conviction of men connected with the newspaper Bonnet Rogue, and the arrest and incarceration on a charge of treason of Caillaux, the ex-premier. America's part in uncovering the vast plot for a German peace is also portrayed, it is said.

Interstate Feature

Booked Through South

Intense interest, it is said, is being shown by exhibitors in all sections of the country regarding “The Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21,” the two-reel Interstate Film feature. As evidence of the popularity of this subject, General Film Company points to the fact that the film has been booked in the Atlanta territory solidly from June 1 to July 6, and new bookings are being received daily by Branch Manager, York, although the film has just been shipped to the Atlanta exchange.

A very attractive list of bookings has been reported from the New England territory also, while other General Film branches announce spirited bidding for this subject, which visualizes one of the most thrilling aspects of actual aerial warfare upon London.

U-Boat Hunters and Mine Sweepers Shown

In This Pathé Film

The thrilling life of the Allied U-boat hunters, it is said, is graphically portrayed in “With the Drifters and Mine Sweepers in the Danger Zone,” the official British war picture being distributed exclusively through Pathé on June 9.

This picture is the fifth of Pathé's “Britain's Bulwarks” series of official scenes from all phases of the great war.

The opening scene shows the “sea dogs” who man the drifters and mine sweepers, and next we see the two kinds of mines that are found within the submarine zone. One is known as the “float” and the other type of mine is the “submergible.”

After the nets and mines are taken aboard the drifters we see them sail mysteriously away, bound for a secret destination that is only revealed to the commander of the vessel when he opens the “sealed orders” some distance away from the port of embarkation.

Pathé Not With United

A statement from Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathé Exchange, sets at rest the rumor linking Pathé and United Picture Theatres.

Mr. Brunet said: “There is absolutely no truth in the published report that Pathé is in any way affiliated with or behold United Picture Theatres of America. Pathé has no connection of any sort whatever with the United concern.”

Ordinance Ousting Major Funkhouser To Be Reconsidered

Further consideration will be given by the judiciary committee of the Chicago city council to an ordinance designed to take away motion picture censorship powers of Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, suspended second deputy supervisor of police.

The city council, Monday, by a vote of 54 years to 16 nays returned the ordinance to the committee. Ald. George M. Maypole, sponsor for the measure, wanted the council to vote on the ordinance without further delay and would not consent to its being returned to the committee.

Ald. A. A. McCormick, leader in the fight to prevent a change in the censorship methods, declared false-hoods had been stated regarding the new ordinance. He intimated that one member of the council would have to explain an untruth he uttered to the judiciary committee when the Maypole ordinance was under consideration.

Ald. Maypole made a long talk. He charged Maj. Funkhouser with allowing unfit pictures to have "pink" permits. Ald. McCormick declared that some of the things charged up against the major by Ald. Maypole were actions of the head of the police department and taken over the major's protest.

National Board Helps Boston Solve Problems

John M. Casey, chief of the Licensing Department of the mayor's office, Bos- ton, Mass., who has charge of the regulation of motion pictures in that city, passed through New York City on May 28, on his return from a trip south.

Mr. Casey, when interviewed as to the motion picture situation in Boston, stated that the regulation of motion pictures was progressing smoothly, that with the assistance of the National Board of Review, many perplexing questions which might have been involved in connection with films bearing upon the war were skilfully adjusted, with the result that the public in Boston appears satisfied with the type of film presented.

Seven Theatremen Summoned to Court:
Two Fined $25 Each

The proprietors of seven moving picture theatres in Montreal, Quebec, have been summoned and the Dominion Theatre, the Majestic Theatre, the Franklin Theatre, the Masionneuve Theatre, the Wellington Theatre, the William Street Theatre, and the Napoleon Theatre were immediately found guilty sentenced $25 and costs or one month in jail.

The accused were brought before Recorder Semple and the representatives of the Majestic Theatre, the Franklin Theatre, and the Masionneuve Theatre, were heard by the Judge.

The accused were found guilty as a result of a campaign of annoyance instituted by Archbishop Bruchesi toward the civic authorities. The archbishop adopted various methods to bring about the prosecution of the exhibitors on this account and a letter by him to the civic administration commission resulted in the arrests.

The accused were brought before Recorder Semple and the representatives of two houses, the Majestic Theatre, the Franklin Theatre, were immediately found guilty sentenced $25 and costs or one month in jail. It is interesting to note that the two proprietors of these theatres were both fined for the same offense.

In other words, there were two convictions over each alleged case.

The following theatres were sentenced: the Napoleon Theatre, Ontario Street East; the Masionneuve Theatre, Ontario Street East; the Wellington Theatre, St. Catherine Street East, and the Lord Nelson, all pleaded not guilty and their cases were remanded.

ADMISSION PRICES HIGHER IN WINNIPEG

The large downtown theatres of Winnipeg, Manitoba, have made an increase in admission prices as a result of the imposition of the new reel tax and the increased duty on imported films by the Dominion Government. The change has been made by Province, Lyceum, Dominion, Gaiety, National and other theatres, all of which show pictures regularly.

The general admission price was 25c, not including the war tax imposed by the Provincial Government. This has been raised to a 25c basis. Outlying theatres are following suit by raising their prices from 10c and 15c to 15c and 25c.

The general scale in effect in Winnipeg's downtown theatres since the increase is as follows: matinees, adults, 15c; children 7.5c; evening prices, adults, 25c and children, 10c, with Saturday morning matinees for the children remaining at five cents. The Provincial war tax, in each case, is extra. Box seats are five cents extra for any performance.

Manager Wilson of the Lyceum Theatre presented the "Kaiser, Beast of Ber- lin" which is "burning the week of May 27. He continued the policy of giving children's matinees on Saturday morning at five cents.

During the week of May 27, the Province Theatre presented "My Four Years in Germany" at special prices but this theatre instituted the new general scale after this showing. The prices for the Gerhard feature were as follows: adults, 25c; children, 10c; evening performances, 30c, 10c; box seats, 75c. Unaccompanied children were not admitted after 7 p.m.

Two Soldier Camps Stimulate Business
At Niagara-on-Lake

With the reopening of the large Canadian film camp at Niagara-on-Lake, Ontario, considerable interest has been revived in the operation of moving picture theatres of the town. The place, which is located on Lake Ontario, is a resort for the soldiers recruited in the Toronto District and the second for soldiers who enlist in all parts of the United States and Canada. There are indications that the military and civil population will run into large figures until late in the fall and to provide entertainment for the soldiers there are two independent moving picture theatres in the town in addition to various camp features.

One of the local theatres is a wooden structure seating 1,200 people. This was formerly known as the Park Theatre. It has been reopened as the Strand Theatre and a representative company has been organized to operate it. One of those interested is William Dineen of the Strand Theatre, Toronto. The policy of the theatre will be to change programmes twice weekly and to charge an admission of twenty-five cents.

The second local theatre is a large temple structure which was built in 1915 by Mrs. Norris who still controls the theatre.

Ben Cronk's Idea
Proves a Good One

Widespread interest has been aroused in Canada over the decision of the Allen Theatre, the new and large downtown theatre of Toronto, to change programmes on Saturdays instead of Mondays. Varied opinions have been offered by theatre managers and exchange men but Ben Cronk of the Allen Theatre has given a number of arguments to support the change.

He declares that Toronto people are inclined to be skeptical and that business on Monday in the past has not been as large as it should be. He also found that Saturday was always a big day, regardless of circumstances. Therefore, he decided to give programmes on Saturday in the crowded Saturday houses so that a maximum number of people would see the new bill. Mr. Cronk figured that these people would advertise the picture by word of mouth on Sunday, and this, coupled with the large advertisements in Saturday and Sunday newspapers, would have the effect of making Monday as big a day as any other day.

He also counted on the beneficial ef-

Ontario Exhibitors
To Extend the Scope Of Protective Ass'n.

At Meeting on May 28 Decide
To Place Organizer on The Road

Ontario exhibitors to the number of forty-six gathered at the headquarters of the Ontario Moving Picture Exhibitors Protective Association in Toronto on Tuesday, May 25, for the purpose of extending the activities of the Provincial organization. The members of the association apparently reached the desire for more activity on the part of the organization simultaneously in view of tax and other developments and this desire came to a head at the conference where various steps were authorized.

It was decided to place an organizer on the road and to adopt a new system of membership fee. The man selected for the work is Merrick R. Nutting, former advertising man and publisher of Montreal and Toronto. The new membership fee will be based on the seating capacity of a theatre, the rate being $25 per seat per year. At least one member voiced disapproval of this development and urged the members not to do business with exchanges which had secured possession of theatres because, as he said, they were indirectly helping to support these theatres which, in turn, were the opposition of many independent exhibitors.

The Ontario association proposes to get busy on many legislative and legal matters. It is intended to secure a change in the law which governs the admission of children, if possible. Methods of federal, provincial and civic taxation will also receive the attention of the association.

President Baillie, who is a Toronto exhibitor, announced that the first step would be to build up the organization, the need for which is generally appreciated at the present time. When the association is strongly organized the various campaigns will be launched. There are more than three hundred exhibitors in Ontario and it is hoped to secure a large percentage of these men as members. Mr. Nutting will devote his whole time on association matters and his tours will carry him to every part of the Province.
M. P. Operators Dance

The moving picture operators of Vancouver, B. C., are holding a series of dances at Lester Court which reflect credit upon the operators' organization. At the last dance there was an attendance of one hundred couples. Vaudeville acts from two of the theatres were also in evidence. The arrangements for the dances are in the hands of a committee composed of President R. Foster of the Operators' Local, R. Anson, Lowden and Hornby. A whist drive was held in connection with the dance and a supper concluded the evening's entertainment. Special lighting effects were used by operators for a number of the dances.

Park Theatre Has Orchestra

The day of the one-piece orchestra in moving picture theatres of Winnipeg, Manitoba, has passed. An instance of the passing of the "piano thumper" is noticed at the Park Theatre, a pretty little house on Osborne street. At this theatre there is a three-piece orchestra composed of a pianist, violinist and cellist. The director of this orchestra is E. P. Salinger who was organist of St. Luke's Episcopalian Church for five years. The music rendered is of a high standard and the orchestra aims to play "to" and not "at" the pictures.

CANADIAN BRIEFS

Willie Eckstein, solo pianist of the Strand Theatre, Montreal, Quebec, known locally as a player of considerable merit, recently paid a visit to New York City to pick up the latest kinks in the music business. Eckstein makes periodical visits to New York for the purpose of obtaining new ideas and his work reflects his interest.

Harry Pomerojy, manager of the Holman Theatre, Montreal, which was recently acquired by the Canadian Universal interests, has secured the services of Sam Goldman as assistant manager. A further advance has been made by this theatre in the presentation of vocal and dancing acts in addition to pictures. Recent features at the Holman have been "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" and "For the Freedom of the World," both of which were first runs in Montreal.

The Montreal branch of the Famous Players Film Service now occupies a fine new suite of offices at 437 Bleury Street. One of the office's features is a well-equipped projecting room.

Andrew Keenan of Montreal, formerly with Pathé and Mutual, has joined the staff of the Vitagraph in Montreal.

Blue Ridge Drama a Thriller

Thrills are promised by General Film in "The Man from Nowhere," the current Blue Ridge drama with Ned Finley and Marion Henry. Numerous tense dramatic situations are found throughout this L. Case Russell story, it is said, the climax coming in a fight in which Ned Finley as Jud Lindsey narrowly escapes death in a sawmill. There are a number of other scenes in which the action of the story is heightened, a high dramatic pitch, making this, the fifth of the Blue Ridge dramas, the most interesting of the series.

Exhibitors Refused License Fee Refund When Closed Sundays

Motion picture theatre owners of Birmingham, Ala., although deprived of the right to operate their playgrounds on Sunday, are not entitled to a refund of any money paid into the state in the form of license fees according to a ruling by M. C. Allgood, state auditor.

In the case of the Birmingham theatre owners seeking exhibitors of the city, expressed considerable surprise when he learned of the decision of the state official. He cited similar rulings of Code see Alabama which, he says, point specifically to the right of the proprietors to a refund of part of the double license paid the state in the event the municipal government forces them to close.

Exhibitors Ask Refund

The movie proprietors have called attention to the double license they are required by law to pay for operating, with the provision that if the municipal government forces them to close, to a refund of part of this license. Mr. Abernethy says that the Birmingham moving picture men have requested a refund of that part of the double license referred to for the remainder of the year.

Dispatches from Montgomery assert that the movie men have written to M. C. Allgood, State Auditor, asking for a refund on their State licenses as a result of their being forced to close on Sunday by a vote of the people of Birmingham. They have asked, the dispatches read, for almost half the total of their license for the year.

Basis For Ruling

Mr. Allgood holds that, as the State did not ask them to close, and had nothing to do with their closing, the entire license should be paid. He also pointed out an opinion handed down last May by William L. Martin, then Attorney-General of the State, relating to the pool rooms in Opelika, which asked for a license, and directed the city of Opelika to close them. The Attorney-General held that the State could collect the license as the State had nothing to do with their closing.

Edward Piel Makes Debut Opposite Gloria Swanson

A fashionable summer colony forms the background of "I Can't Believe Everything," a Triangle drama scheduled for publication June 23. This production is a picturization of Norman Sherbrook's novel of the same name, featuring Gloria Swanson, and will serve to introduce Triangle's new leading man, Edward Piel. Gloria Swanson, who appears as Patria Reynolds, a young girl who is initiated into the ultra smart set, will appear in attractive bathing costume, and a number of enigmatic frocks. The director put many of the summer costumes and evening gowns worn by the actress in this picture, are a revelation of up-to-the-minute fashions. Much of the action takes place on the verandas of a yacht club.

The contributions considered as making the hundred per cent subscription consisted of pledges which will be deducted from the salaries beginning with the first of July. Beside these pledges nearly every employee contributed to the street collectors.

Prior to the start of the drive President Laemmle wrote to all the branch exchange managers requesting them to see that all branch employees contributed to the fund. Returns have not been received as yet from the branches.
Committees Agree on Film Distribution to Michigan Exhibitors

Lansing, Mich.—The mixup between the war preparedness board and the committee of information over the showing of war films in Michigan has been adjusted. In Chicago a representative of the board and Charles S. Hart, director of the films for the committee, came to an agreement.

Under its terms the war board is to have the sole and exclusive rights to all of the war films, including those of the United States, English, French and Italian governments, for all of Michigan outside the city of Detroit.

Detroit is included in the list of 20 cities which the committee proposes to handle itself. This means that shortly after the close of the run of "Pershing's Crusaders" in Detroit, it will be started through the state by the war preparedness board and the county war boards. It is to be followed shortly by several other big films taken overseas, back of our own lines and back of some of the lines of the other allies.

All profits made by the war board through the exhibition of the films goes into a special fund for the dependents of Michigan men in the military service.

Exhibitors Protest Payment of Fees to City Censor Board

Houston, Texas—A delegation of exhibitors called upon Mayor A. E. Amerman and the city commissioners recently to protest against the proposal to charge them a fee when the board of censors issues a permit.

The plan of charging a fee was suggested by Finance Commissioner Dan M. Moody and was advanced after some of the picture house managers had demanded that members of the censor board pay the war tax at all times except when they were present on business. According to Mr. Moody's plan the small amount that would be charged could be used by the board of censors to pay the war tax and other small expenses.

The managers were assured that the latter would be given careful thought before any action is taken.

Presbyterians Condemn Sunday Picture Shows

Columbus, Ohio—Stricter observance of the Sabbath was urged in a report made to the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church North by a special committee, headed by James Yerance, of New York.

Motion pictures were arranged as the chief corrupter, and Sunday baseball games were scored. The report stated that the perils have been accentuated by the war, saying that even the drives to aid causes like the liberty loan, the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., Armenian relief and wet and dry contests have opened the way "to Sabbath desecrators."

Oregon M. P. E. League Elects New Officers

Portland, Ore.—The Motion Picture Exhibitors league of Oregon elected officers at a meeting held at the Majestic theatre as follows:

Executive committees were named from among motion picture men in other cities and local exhibitors were named as presiding officers in their respective communities. The association resolved to curtail the use of slides on screens except for purposes sanctioned by the government.

Omaha Film Manager Fatally Shot When He Resists Holdup

Omaha, Nebr.—H. F. Lefholz, manager of the Jewell Film Company, 1904 Farnam street, was probably fatally shot near Avery recently while on his way to Omaha from Plattsmouth. Lefholz had been at Plattsmouth, where he had opened a new theatre.

An unidentified man stepped in the road and leaped on the running board, ordering the car to stop. Meeting opposition, the highwayman fired, striking Lefholz in the breast, near the heart. He is in the South Side hospital. The desperado escaped.

With Lefholz in the car were two men in his employ, Walter C. Denny and M. G. Rogers.

Reconstruction Begin Of Theatre Damaged In Recent Erie Fire

Erie, Pa.—Contractors are already at work cleaning away the debris of the fire which caused an estimated damage of $60,000 to the Columbia theatre building. With the shortage of labor and scarcity of building materials, it is said the theatre will not open to the public again until September.

This is the heaviest damage to Erie real estate in some time. Added to the loss is the total destruction of the organ, which occupied more than half the stage of the theatre. In building this musical instrument several years ago, it cost $15,000. Today, it is said, it could not be reproduced for less than $25,000.

According to present plans of the Columbia Amusement Company, an addition will be made to the building, so that when it is completed it will take care of more people than in the past. It is the first large downtown real estate action in several months.
Trailer and Slides
Used in Novel Way

Mark Gates, manager of the Dayton Theatre, is using one of the live-wire exhibitors of Dayton, Ohio. To prove his showmanship he recently played the "Unbeliever" to crowded houses during a very hot week. This is how he put it over:

The store next to his theatre was vacant. He took an extra projection machine from his booth, set it up in the store and hung a sheet across the store window. On this he ran the trailer advertising "The Unbeliever" together with a slide reading: "A few views of 'The Unbeliever' now being shown inside," with the result that he filled his theatre and had the sidewalk and street crowded.

Immediately after the trailer was shown, about eighty percent of the spectators turned to the box office and went into the theatre Mr. Gates advises.

Film Burns in Theatre

A reel took fire in a moving picture theatre at 224 North Salina street at 7 o'clock recently and the fire department was called. The fire was no danger and no person in the audience was aware that anything had happened, the management ordered the house cleared. The scare was over when the firemen arrived.

Novel Presentation Of "Over There" By Seattle Exhibitors

What might be regarded as an ideal of presentation was established at the Strand Theatre, Seattle, by Messrs. Jensen and von Herberg, who took that prominent firm of exhibitors recently put on Select's patriotic, "Over There." The picture was put on at the Strand Theatre beginning Saturday morning for a four days' run. The piece had been advertised properly in local papers for several weeks, and on the Seattle Times cared a very large and fine display advertisement, showing Charles Richman together with Anna Q. Nilsson the leading actress in the picture. Miss Nilsson was shown in the Red Cross costume which was worn in the play. Some of the many things which the management did to attract attention are listed below:

They secured through Major Boutelle, an army officer in Seattle, the establishment of a recruiting station in the lobby of the Strand Theatre, with two showers of twenty men in Khaki each, on duty during both afternoon and evening performances.

Browning Gun Used

They obtained an exhibition of the new Browning machine gun at the theatre entrance, with an expert to explain the workings of the new and latest piece of American ordnance to the spectators.

An exhibition infantry and machine gun drill was held twice daily in front of the theatre—ten to fifteen hundred rounds of ammunition were fired.

The theatre employed a fife and drum corps, all of whose members were veterans of the War, to play twice daily at the theatre.

Boy Scout Aids

Speeches to the audience were made by Master Raymond Foy, an eight year old Boy Scout, who has proved to be a sensation as a Red Cross speaker.

George M. Cohan's song, "Over There," is sung as a part of the performance of the picture. This was cleverly aranged in such a manner that when the title "All Aboard for Berlin" was flashed on the screen, the singer started Mr. Cohan's masterpiece, the rendition of the song ending the same moment the picture concluded.

The girl ushers at the theatre wore Red Cross uniforms throughout the week, and the house was especially decorated in a beautiful manner for this occasion.

Jensen & von Herberg rapped the reward which their brains and ingenuity deserve. During the entire period that the attraction played, the theatre was a stand-room business, and the theatre's propietors report that the audiences were the most enthusiastic ever seen in Seattle.

Lockwood Company Moves

The Yorke-Metro Company, which is producing the Harold Lockwood features for the Metro, has moved its base of operations from Metro's West Coast studios, where it occupied space since its arrival from the east, to a plant of its own at 1329 Gordon street, Hollywood, Cal. Prior to this move, occupancy, extensive alterations and additions were made in the plant and in its equipment to increase production facilities.
